3143d. —— What is "settled land" within paragraph 2.]—Under a settlement contained in a will the settled property was directed to be held, after the death of the first tenant for life, in trust, as to both corpus & income, for the children & issue of the first tenant for life in equal shares as therein mentioned. The first tenant for life died in 1929, having by her will appointed to be her exors. & trustees two persons who, at the date of her death, were trustees of the settlement & of the will containing it. On a summons by the exors. & trustees as pltfs. for the determination (inter alia) of the question whether, for the purpose of vesting in themselves the land the subject of the settlement contained in the will, they should, as executors of the first tenant for life, execute in favour of themselves, as trustees of the will containing the settlement, a vesting assent upon the statutory trusts for sale of the land the subject of the settlement, or should apply for a grant to themselves of probate of the will of the first tenant for life limited to that land:—Held: Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 36, applied, & pltfs., as exors. of the first tenant for life, ought, pursuant to that sect., to execute a vesting assent in favour of themselves as trustees of the will containing the settlement.—Re CUGNY'S WILL TRUSTS, SMITH v. FREEMAN, [1931] 1 Ch. 305; 100 L. 3143e. —— Effect on interest of tenant for life under condition to reside on premises.]—Testator died in 1922, having by his will made in 1915 directed (inter alia) that pltf. should pay the net income of his freehold farm & lands & of his share of minerals thereunder equally between herself & his nephew until testator's youngest or only daughter should attain the age of twenty-one & thereafter between herself for life or until marriage, the nephew for life "or so long as he shall reside upon & assist in the management of my said farm," & testator's two daughters for their lives & the survivor of them for her life. Subject thereto testator devised the farm & lands to the children of his daughters as in the will mentioned. Testator's nephew lived with him at the farm, & assisted in its management until the testator's death, after which he continued to live there & to manage it. Accordingly, upon the coming into force of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), the property vested in pltf. upon the statutory trusts. On a summons taken out by pltf. in 1931 & asking (inter alia) whether, upon a sale of the farm & lands under the statutory trusts, or upon the exercise by her of any power of leasing conferred on her by statute or by the will, & in particular upon the exercise of any such power in favour of testator's nephew, his interest in the income would determine:—Held: upon the true construction of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 35, the nephew's life interest would not be forfeited upon any exercise in his lifetime of the statutory trusts.—Re DAVIES' WILL TRUSTS, BEVAN v. WILLIAMS, [1932] 1 Ch. 530; 101 L. 3143f. —— Real property held by partners.]—A partnership firm in 1932 contracted to sell certain plots of freehold land to a county council. There was no special stipulation as to the commencement of title, but on examination by the purchasers it appeared that the land had been sold in 1892 to six named persons then carrying on the partnership firm, the habendum of the conveyance being to hold the hereditaments "unto to the use of the purchasers . . . as joint tenants in trust for them the purchasers . . . as part of their co-partnership estate." On Jan. 1, 1926, the land in question was vested in three of the original purchasers in fee simple as joint tenants in trust as mentioned in the conveyance of 1892. The vendors to the county council were the four present partners, & included two of the three original purchasers living on Jan. 1, 1926, one of those purchasers having died since that date. Questions having arisen whether the land, being on Jan. 1, 1926, partnership property, was held on the statutory trusts, & therefore whether the present vendors or any of them could make a good title as trustees for sale by reason of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Part IV.:—Held: the words of that Sched. applied, & on Jan. 1, 1926, the property was held by the three original purchasers then living on the statutory trusts & the two survivors could make a good title as trustees for sale upon the statutory trusts.—Re FULLER'S CONTRACT, [1933] Ch. 652; 102 L. 3143g. Application of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 36—"Trust instrument"—Undivided shares created by deed or event later than instrument.]—A name & arms clause in a will dated Feb. 14, 1863, provided that if any tenant for life or in tail of testator's N. estates for the time being in possession refused to continue the use of the name & arms of H., the interest of that tenant for life or in tail & the limitations dependent thereon should cease. The tenant in tail in remainder (hereinafter called "the remainderman"), whose father was tenant for life in possession, mortgaged to pltf. the N. estates discharged as far as possible from his estate tail & from all estates to take effect after its determination or in defeasance of it: & the mtge. irrevocably appointed pltf. the remainderman's attorney in his name & on his behalf to convey the property to pltf. accordingly, but subject to the right of redemption under the mtge. As this was done without the tenant for life's consent, only a base fee was created. By a conveyance dated Apr. 3, 1914, the remainderman granted & released unto pltf. one undivided moiety of the N. estates, to hold unto & to the use of pltf., his heirs, exors., administrators & assigns, with provisions as to barring the entail similar to those in the mtge., but free from all right of redemption thereunder; & the remainderman covenanted also to perfect the disentail of the property within seven days of the tenant for life's death during his life. The tenant for life died on Feb. 18, 1929. The remainderman did not perfect the disentail within seven days, so that what was comprised in the mtge. immediately after the death was the base fee, half of it being vested in pltf. subject to the mtge. & the conveyance of 1914. On Mar. 8, 1929, the remainderman wrote informing the trustees of the will that he had decided to cease using the name of H. & to take another. On Apr. 8, 1929, he wrote to them a letter confirming that decision; & on the same date, after the confirmatory letter had been written, there was executed by pltf. as his attorney a deed of confirmation supplemental to the mtge. & to the conveyance of 1914, whereby the remainderman conveyed to pltf. the hereditaments, moneys & investments secured by the mtge. upon limitations similar to those in the mtge., to the intent that the base fee or other estate created & subsisting by virtue of the mtge. should be enlarged into an equitable fee simple, & that the mtge. should take effect out of the enlarged interest & the base fee be enlarged for all purposes; & the remainderman conveyed to pltf. one undivided moiety of the hereditaments or proceeds of sale thereof in equitable fee simple or absolutely, to the intent that, subject to the mtge., one undivided moiety should belong to pltf. & the other to the remainderman in equitable fee simple or absolutely. By deed dated Sept. 8, 1930, the remainderman recorded his change of name:—Held: (1) on the true construction of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 36 (1), the conveyance of 1914 came within the expression "trust instrument" in that subsect.; (2) settled land may be held "on trust for persons entitled in possession under a trust instrument" in undivided shares created by a deed or event later than the instrument, which is nevertheless "the . . . instrument creating the trust"; (3) the words "entailed interest" in the Law of Property (Entailed Interests) Act, 1932 (c. 27), do not apply to a base fee; (4) the ct. could not construe Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 36 (6), so as to give effect to the name & arms clause, which was therefore inoperative.—Re HIND, BERNSTONE v. MONTGOMERY, [1933] Ch. 208; 102 L. 3151a. Application of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 34—Land settled upon trust for sale—After specified period.]—The trustees of a will, which came into operation after the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), were directed to stand possessed of testator's residuary real & personal estate upon trust to pay out of the income thereof four life annuities, & while any annuity remained payable to divide the surplus income amongst such of testator's grandchildren as should be living for the period during which any annuity remained payable; &, on cesser of all the annuities, to stand possessed of the residuary estate in trust for his grandchildren & the issue then living of any then dead, as tenants in common according to the stocks. By a codicil power was conferred upon the trustees after the expiration of five years from the testator's death to sell his residuary estate or any part thereof by public auction but not by private contract. Upon a summons raising questions, whether the trustees or the persons entitled to the surplus income until cesser of the annuities were the proper persons in whom the land ought to be vested by the exor.; &, if the trustees were the proper persons, whether the annuitants were persons whose wishes ought to be given effect to by the trustees for sale:—Held: (1) the land was held in equity in undivided shares; (2) the land was devised in undivided shares within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 34 (3), with the result that it was devised to the trustees, who were trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Act, 1925, upon the statutory trusts; (3) those trustees were the persons in whom the land ought to be vested.—Re HOUSE, WESTMINSTER BANK v. EVERETT, [1929] 2 Ch. 166; 98 L. A small yard & ashes place at the rear of two houses in a town was, immediately before the commencement of the Act, held in undivided shares by the owners of the houses with rights of access & user over same:—Held: the yard & ashes place were an open space within the par. & had vested in the Public Trustee. 3151c. —— —— —— Private railway siding.]—A private railway siding consisted partly of freehold land, vested in the trustees of a will, & partly of leasehold land held for a long term by trustees of a lease containing a declaration of trust subsequently varied by deed. Neither set of trustees held upon trust for sale or had any power of sale. All rights of access to & user of the siding were vested, at the commencement of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 18), in lessees of adjoining property, licensees, & other persons entitled under the declaration of trust, & rents were paid by all parties interested for such user:—Held: that the siding was not an open space vested in undivided shares in right whereof each owner had rights of access & user thereof & did not therefore vest in the Public Trustee under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Pt. V., para. 2, but was vested in the respective sets of trustees upon the statutory trusts.—Re TOWNSEND, TOWNSEND v. TOWNSEND, [1930] 2 Ch. 338; 99 L. J. Ch. 508; 143 L. T. 608.

3260a. —— Payment by trustees—Right to reimbursement.]—The husband in a marriage settlement covenanted (inter alia) to pay the premiums on a policy of life insurance. In default of his doing so, the trustees paid the premium & sought to recover the amount so paid from the covenantor. The settlement expressly empowered the trustees to apply the income in making any payments for keeping on foot the policy, & provided that it should not be obligatory on them to enforce the husband's covenants. There was no covenant by the husband to reimburse the trustees in respect of any payment so made by them:—Held: (1) it was an implied term that the husband should reimburse the trustees; (2) the claim of the trustees was not in debt but for damages for breach of covenant, & therefore they could not specially indorse their writ; (3) the damages were substantial & not merely nominal, & the trustees were entitled to recover the full amount paid by them.—SCHLESINGER & JOSEPH v. MOSTYN, [1932] 1 K. Down to 1912 there was no drainage system for the estate, but in that year a system was established, which so far as affected this property was called " the northern system," by the then owners of the estate with an effective outfall, but without any reference to the local authority, which was maintained since 1920 by means of contributions from property owners to the owner of the part where the disposal works were situated. From these works the effluent passed into the river M., but owing to the filter bed ceasing to function, pollution of the river occurred, & this outfall being stopped by the action of the Thames Conservancy, the effluent was now carried over the adjoining land. In an action by pltf. for a declaration that the system vested in defts. & that they were liable to maintain it :—Held : the line of pipes which communicated with the disposal works was a sewer which vested in the local authority, but the remedy of pltf. was to appeal on behalf of the whole of the persons in the district to the Ministry of Health under P. 52a. —— ——.]—A channel, for the greater part of its length in a covered culvert, ran through pltfs.' land. Originally the channel was a natural stream or watercourse, but at various times since 1876 sewage had been discharged into it. It was admitted that for at least 23 years before the pleadings in this action, i.e., from 1909, some 20 houses had been drained into the channel & it was contended that such houses had acquired prescriptive rights of so discharging sewage into it. A further 44 houses had commenced discharging sewage into the channel at times subsequent to 1925. It was contended that the discharge of sewage into what was admittedly a natural stream at the time of the passing of Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (c. 75), being an offence under that Act, could not convert the stream or channel into a sewer within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55) :—Held : since the passing of Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (c. 75), a natural watercourse cannot in law be turned into a sewer by the discharge of sewerage into it.—LEGGE (GEORGE) & SON, LTD. v. WENLOCK CORPN., [1936] 3 All E. Subsequently pltfs. gave deft. notice of their intention to connect a sewer of their own to his pipes. Deft. disputed their right to do so & pltfs. issued a writ claiming a declaration (a) that they had a right to join their pipes to deft.'s because deft.'s pipes were "sewers" vested in them; (b) that deft.'s disposal works were also so vested. 125b. —— —— Construction by purchaser from building owner.]—It is a question of fact in each case whether a particular sewer has been made for profit or not. It is not a sufficient ground for holding that the sewer was made for profit if the only evidence is that the sewer was made by a person who was developing a building estate in the course of the development of that estate to provide sanitary facilities for houses to be erected on it. Where, however, the right to construct the necessary sewers was sold to an independent co. who paid for the construction of the sewers & charged a person wishing to use the sewers the amount of the cost of connecting his house with the sewers & also an annual rate :—Held : that the sewers were made by the co. for profit.

197a. —— Sewer laid above ground—By private owner—Maintenance by local authority.]—Defts., who were the urban sanitary authority, served notices, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 23, 36, upon the owners of a row of houses within the district requiring them within a certain time to provide water-closets in the houses & to connect the same with the main sewer. By arrangement among the owners the work was carried out by the owner of two of the houses, one of which was occupied by pltf. A six-inch earthenware pipe was laid through the gardens at the backs of the houses to receive the drainage of each house & to discharge into the main sewer. This pipe was laid underground until it came to the garden of the house in which pltf. lived, where, owing to a fall in the land half the pipe appeared above the ground. About three years after the pipe was laid pltf. in going down her garden slipped on the pipe & was injured. In an action against the urban district council to recover damages for the personal injuries so sustained, the pipe being a "sewer" which was vested in them, the jury found that the sewer was constructed so as to be dangerous to the occupants of the house, that defts. had notice of its

262a. Liability for maintenance.]—The Lewisham Board of Works was constituted under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), with an area extending over Penge, & all sewers in their district, except the main sewer, were vested in the Board, who were bound to repair them. Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (c. 102), empowered the Board to execute sewerage works beyond their own district where necessary, & in 1865 the Board, for the purpose of the drainage of Penge, constructed a sewer in Penge, which passed through the Beckenham district, not under the control of the Board, to the Lewisham district, where it joined the main sewer. The Act of 1862 did not vest this sewer in the Board, & did not in terms oblige the Board to repair it, but this obligation was expressly imposed on the Board by the Beckenham Sewerage Act of 1873, which empowered the Beckenham authority to connect up with the sewer in their area in return for certain money payments. This sewer having become inadequate, a second was constructed nearly alongside, & it assisted to carry off the sewage of Penge, By London Government Act, 1899 (c. 16). District Boards of Works were abolished, & the Lewisham Corporation was created, but by the Penge Order of 1900, made in pursuance of this Act, the district of Penge was taken out of the control of the corpn. & became part of the county of Kent, & a scheme of adjustments was made, whereby all property of the Lewisham Board used, & all liabilities of the Board incurred, solely or mainly for the benefit of Penge, where transferred to the Penge District Council, & the question whether any property had been used or any liability had been incurred solely or mainly for the benefit of Penge was to be finally determined by the commissioners appointed under the Act; but the scheme made no provision dealing with the question whether the obligation to maintain the Penge sewers, so far as they were laid in Beckenham, was cast upon the Lewisham Corpn. or not. In an action by the Urban District Council of Penge against the Lewisham Corpn. for a declaration that this obligation was cast upon the corpn.:—Held: (1) the jurisdiction of the ct. to determine this question was not ousted by the Penge Order; (2) both the original & the relief sewers were constructed wholly or mainly for the benefit of Penge, & that the action failed.—PENGE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. LEWISHAM CORPN. 304a. Reconstruction of drain — What amounts to.]—The L. C. C. made a bye-law that a person who should entirely or partially reconstruct any pipe or drain communicating with a sewer should deposit plans of the proposed work, with the proviso that plans should not be required in the case of any repair which did not involve the entire reconstruction of the pipe or drain; & another bye-law as to ventilation, which was to apply to every person who should reconstruct in an existing building any pipe or drain communicating with a sewer. Premises situate in the metropolis were drained at the rear by a line of pipes which took the surface water drainage of the premises through two gullies in the yard & which communicated with a sewer. This line of pipes was not laid upon concrete & was not ventilated, & the drain having become a nuisance, notice was served on the owner to abate the same. The owner opened up the ground, took up the pipes, most of which were defective or broken, & relaid the drain in the same line upon a foundation of concrete. He put in four new lengths of pipes & a new gully & connection, replacing in the drain one old pipe & gully only, & leaving in the ground an old pipe which was not defective:—Held: the work done to the drain was a " reconstruction " of

on the basis of acreage or on the basis of annual value. Pursuant to that power resp. drainage board elected to levy a rate on the basis of acreage. By an order made by the Minister of Health in 1927 in pursuance of powers conferred on him by a local Act, power was given to resps. to require occupiers of land less than one acre in extent to commute the said acreage charge, & in exercise of those powers, they called on applt. to commute the rate imposed on his land, & he did so. By Land Drainage Act, 1930 (c. 44), s. 24 (4), every rate made by a drainage board shall, after the coming into operation of the Act, be an annual value rate. Amount of precept—How calculated.]—A catchment board issued a precept to a county council whose area was comprised in the catchment area, demanding a sum calculated on the basis of 2*d.* in the pound on the total of the rateable value of the area concerned. The county council objected (i) that the amount demanded was not an " estimated amount " within Land Drainage Act, 1930 (c. 44), s. 22 (2), but that the drainage board had merely proceeded on a mathematical calculation, & (ii) that the expression " estimated amount which would be produced by a rate of 2*d.* in the pound " in the same sub-sect. meant the amount which would be produced after making due allowance for costs for collection & bad debts :— Held : (1) as the calculation was based on the product expected from a rate in a future year, it was an estimate ; (2) upon a proper construction of Land Drainage Act, 1930 (c. 44), s. 22 (2), the catchment board had made a proper calculation & no allowance for costs of collection or bad debts ought to be made.—R. v. CAMBRIDGE COUNTY COUNCIL, Ex p. RIVER GREAT OUSE CATCHMENT BOARD, [1937] 1 K. The mtgees. also claimed under the mtges. a number of nets & a quantity of other fishing gear which was lying in the store of the mtgors. & was marked with the port number of one or other of the two drifters. The evidence showed that at the date of the mtge. on the drifter H. the mtgors. owned no nets or other drift fishing gear; but by the date of the mtge. on the drifter M. V. they had acquired nets & other gear & the M. V. herself had gear on board. At the hearing it was agreed by counsel that the effect of the authorities cited was that nets & gear which could be said to have been appropriated to a vessel at the time of her mtge., or substituted for the purpose of maintaining her original gear, would pass as "appurtenances" under the mtge., & it was contended for the mtgees. that the marking of gear with the port number of a particular vessel was sufficient evidence that such gear had been appropriated to her:—Held: on the evidence, the mtgors. when renewing gear marked it indiscriminately with the port sf. Powers of New Zealand Legislature.]—Sect. 243 of Shipping & Seamen Act, 1908, must be interpreted ut res magis valeat quam pereat, & should be interpreted on this doctrine as applying to ships registered in New Zealand. The New Zealand Legislature may by implication repeal sect. 478 (6) of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (Imp.), as that sect. is included in the provisions of the statute which the Legislature of a British possession is empowered by sect. 735 to repeal wholly or in part. The assent of His Majesty to the Shipping & Seamen Acts, 1903 & 1908, was intended, & must be regarded, as a confirmation of these statutes for the purposes of sect. 735 of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (Imp.), &, as subsequent amendments have been assented to & confirmed, the principal Act which was assented to cannot be held invalid for want of confirmation. Even if there be a repugnancy between sect. 243 of Shipping & Seamen Act, 1908, & sect. 478 (6) of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (Imp.), that repugnancy is authorised by sect. 735 of the latter statute; &, having regard to sect. 735, it is immaterial whether the jurisdiction of the Board of Trade under sect. 478 (6) is ousted or whether the Board of Trade & the Minister of Marine in New Zealand have concurrent jurisdiction. Consequently, sect. 243 of Shipping & Seamen Act, 1908, must be regarded as a valid exercise of the power conferred upon the New Zealand Legislature by sect. 735 of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (Imp.), quoad ships registered in New Zealand.—Re "RANGATIRA," T. f i. —— During illness.]—A seaman serving under articles on a ship was incapacitated by illness from performing his duties & was landed at a port other than his home port, & there put into a hospital where the shipowner paid his expenses. The seaman was later discharged from such hospital as "relieved," although not cured, &, he being fit to travel, the shipowner offered him a free passage to his home port, which offer was refused. The seaman remained at his port of landing & later sued the shipowner under sect. 127 (1) of Navigation Act, 1912–1926, for maintenance from the time of his discharge from the hospital to the date of his writ, on the ground that he was not cured:—Held: the shipowner had fulfilled his duty by making the offer to bring the seaman back to his home port, & that offer having been refused, no further liability attached to the shipowner.—MYRHE v. BURNS PHILP & CO., LTD. f ii. —— ——.]—The articles of agreement under which a seaman was employed by a shipowner contained a clause which provided that if the seaman were landed & left at a port by reason of illness or accident in the service of the ship incapacitating him from duty, he was entitled to certain wages & benefits. The clause further provided that the illness, hurt, or injury, "shall so far as can be ascertained, be an illness contracted on board of the ship, or a hurt or injury sustained in the service of the ship or her owner." The seaman signed the articles on Jan. 10, 1933, & on Apr. 20, of the same year was landed at a port, having become incapacitated two or three days before, by an illness, pernicious anæmia. He sued the owner of the ship for wages. The medical evidence showed that the disease had been contracted some time prior to the signing of the articles, although it did not manifest itself until a few days before Apr. 20, 1933. The seaman had prior to Jan. 10, 1933, been in the service of the owner under previous articles, separate articles being signed in respect of each voyage:—Held: (1) an illness may be contracted within the meaning of the clause before the incapacitating results occur or are experienced; (2) in order to succeed in his claim for wages the seaman must show that the illness was contracted during the currency of the articles, it being insufficient that the illness was contracted in the service of the ship or her owner under previous articles.—BURNS PHILP & CO., LTD. v. MYRHE (1935), 51 C. —— —— What amounts to.]—A seaman was engaged to serve for six months as chief engineer on a steam trawler. On returning to port during the term of six months to discharge a cargo of fish the trawler collided with another vessel &, after making the port under her own steam, went into dry dock for repairs, the crew, including the chief engineer, being paid off. The trawler was laid up for fourteen days, at the end of which time the seaman was re-engaged as chief engineer. He claimed from the owners of the trawler a sum as wages for the time during which the vessel was under repair, alleging that his service had terminated by reason of the "wreck" of the trawler within Merchant Shipping (International Labour Conventions) Act, 1925 (c. 42), s. 1 (1):—Held: there was no wreck of the trawler.

By Viscount BUCKMASTER, Lord WARRINGTON OF CLYFFE, Lord RUSSELL OF KILLOWEN, & Lord MACMILLAN, on the ground that the word "wreck" having been used in the Act of 1894 & having received a judicial interpretation must, when used in the same context in the Act of 1925, bear that interpretation unless a contrary meaning is indicated; & the trawler was not by the collision rendered incapable of carrying out the maritime adventure in respect of which the seaman's contract was entered into, but was merely interrupted in so doing.

By Lord BLANESBURGH on the ground that the decision in The Olympic, [1913] P. 92, was, in view of the dissenting judgment of KENNEDY, L.J., not of sufficient authority to warrant the assumption that the word "wreck" in the Act of 1925 was used in the sense attributed to it by the majority of the Ct. of Appeal; the decision of the majority was wrong, & there was no wreck in The Olympic & a fortiori none in the present case. Consequently the seaman could not recover.—BARRAS v. ABERDEEN STEAM TRAWLING & FISHING CO., LTD., [1933] A. C. 402; 102 L. J. P. C. 33; 149 L. T. 169; 49 T. L. R. 391; 77 Sol. Jo. 215; 38 Com. On Sept. 25, 1930, the trawler sustained damage in consequence of a collision at sea, but she was able to make port under her own steam. On reaching port the crew were paid off, & the ship was laid up for repairs for a period of fourteen days; thereafter the seaman was re-engaged. 1764a. Rescission—Innocent misrepresentation.]—Defts., who had bought a ship without knowing that the British Govt. had given directions (which in substance were as compulsory as requisition) that she should make a particular voyage, chartered her to pltfs. by a charter-party containing the statement that she was " now at Liverpool, ready to-morrow," and the following clause : " Charterers, however, take the risk of the steamer being directed to perform any special voyage or voyages by the British or French Govts." Defts. entered into the contract on the basis of a representation that the vessel was free, but in fact she had been directed by the British Govt. to go to Malta with coal. In an action for rescission of the charter on the ground of a misrepresentation which though innocent was material :—Held : the clause as to Govt. directions applied only to future directions, f l. ——.]—Sect. 44 (2) of Navigation Act, 1912-1926 provides that " If a ship proceeds to sea being short in her crew of not more than one-fifth of her engine-room staff, or one-fifth of her deck complement, the master or owner shall not be liable under this sect. if it is proved that the breach was not occasioned through any fault of his own " :—Held : (1) the excuse contained in sub-sect. (2) is established when it is proved that deft. honestly endeavoured to obtain a full crew & that his failure to do so did not arise from his omission to do something which he reasonably ought to have done : (2) firemen & trimmers form part of a ship's engine-room staff within the sub-section.—DAY v. YATES (1931), 45 C. sk. Equipment in good condition when installed—Rust.]—In an action for personal injuries, brought by the mate of a steam trawler against the registered owners & the master, it appeared that, while the trawl was being taken on board by means of a steam winch, the winch broke down, &, in order to save the gear, the master decided to use the hand windlass. As the windlass, although mechanically perfect, was encrusted with rust, the master ordered the engineers to put it into working order by removing the rust, & they succeeded in doing so. They, however, omitted to notice that the iron pawl, which acted as a brake to prevent the windlass from suddenly reversing while in use, had become immovable through rust, & was not operating. As a result, while the trawl was being hoisted, a roll of the vessel threw an extra strain on the windlass, which suddenly reversed, & pursuer, who was working the windlass, was struck down & seriously injured. In a question whether the accident was due to the fault of defenders, et separatim to the failure of the owners to observe Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, s. 458 :—Held : (1) the owners, as employers, had discharged their common law & statutory obligations to the pursuer, at common law, in respect that they had provided a windlass which, when installed, was free from mechanical defect, &, under statute, in respect that, even if the windlass was still a necessary part of the ship's equipment, its rusted condition did not render the ship unseaworthy within sect. 458 (1), the test of seaworthiness being whether the vessel was fit to encounter the ordinary perils of the sea; (2) the true cause of the accident was the negligence of the engineers, who were pursuer's fellow-servants; (3) as the master was entitled to delegate the work of de-rusting to the engineers as competent workmen, he had no ordinary duty to inspect the result of their work, & in the absence of an averment of any special duty of that nature, he was not liable for personal negligence. 1780a. Breach of duty—Broker assuming to charter vessel to himself—Ratification of wrongful act.]—Pltfs., owners of the D., instructed H., a broker, to procure a charterparty for their ship. H. being minded, in breach of his duty as a broker, to make use of the ship for his own ends, purported to effect a charterparty dated Aug. 9, 1926, between pltfs & an export co. of Danzig " & others " as charterers. This document was signed by H. " as agent only " for the owners & by H. " on behalf of the charterers as per separate chartering notes." By one of the clauses of the document the shipowners were to have a lien for all dead freight & demurrage at the port of loading. H. had no authority to act on behalf of the export co., who knew nothing about the transaction. Defts., timber merchants in London, bought from S. & Co., shippers in Danzig, red wood at a price including cost, freight & insurance from Danzig to London. S. & Co. engaged cargo space for the wood on board the D., by means of chartering notes signed by H. purporting to act " by order of the owners," but without their authority, & the wood was shipped on board the D. at Danzig under bills of lading signed by H. purporting to act for & on behalf of & with the authority of the master. Each bill of lading incorporated the terms, conditions & clauses of the so-called charterparty of Aug. 9, among which was the above lien clause. The bills of lading were indorsed by S. & Co. & tendered under the contract of sale to defts., who accepted them & paid S. & Co. for the goods. The D. left Danzig without a full cargo several days after the lay days had expired. When she arrived in London the master deposited the wood with wharfingers subject to a lien in favour of pltfs. for dead freight & demurrage, & pltfs. brought an action against defts. for a declaration that they were entitled to the lien :—Held : the lien clause in the document of Aug. 9 was incorporated in the bills of lading, on the grounds that (1) pltfs., by taking the cargo on board their ship & issuing bills of lading in respect of it after they knew of H.'s breach of duty in assuming to charter their vessel to himself, had ratified his act & so validated the charterparty, & (2) the incorporation of the lien clause was not in any way dependent or contingent upon the charterparty being a valid or effective document, for in the absence of a condition to the contrary, one document, or part thereof, might be incorporated in another, although the first document had, of itself, no legal effect whatever ; (3) defts. could not support a plea in avoidance of circuity of action, because it was essential to that plea that the amount recoverable by deft. pleading it from pltf. in the action in which it was pleaded should be the exact amount recoverable by pltf. from him ; & as S. & Co. were not parties to the action, it could not be averred that the damages, if any, recoverable by defts. from S. & Co. for breach of the contract of sale would be the same in amount as the sum recoverable by pltfs. from defts. under the terms of the bills of lading, & it did not appear that S. & Co. had any cause of action against pltfs., whose liabilities depended upon the bills of lading.—AKT. 1828a. Representations as to capacity of ship to carry specific cargo—Whether conditions precedent.]—After protracted negotiations pltfs.' brokers on June 12, 1934, signed on their behalf a time charter chartering defts.' tanker for twelve months with the option of cancelling it if the vessel was not ready by July 15. Pltfs. had asked defts. for details of pipe lines & heating coils, & received a reply as follows : " Pipe lines 350 mm. intake ; 300 mm. outlet ; heating coils fitted right at bottom of tanks." These statements were embodied as " guaranteed " in the charterparty which also contained an arbn. clause. Upon inspection it was found that these statements were not correct, & pltfs. cabled their agents not to sign the charter, but it had, in fact, already been signed, though it was retained in the possession of such agents. The ship was required for the carriage of molasses, for which without certain alterations she was not suitable. These alterations were not made, & ultimately pltfs. refused to take the ship :—Held : (1) the charterparty had become a contract binding upon the parties ; (2) the representations made before the contract was entered into had become merged in the contract by being embodied therein, & the question was therefore not one of rescission, but whether these representations had become conditions precedent for the breach of which pltfs. became entitled to & did repudiate it ; (3) the representations, being " guaranteed," had become conditions precedent, & pltfs. had properly repudiated the contract. (4) It was further contended that once the conclusion was reached that the charterparty became binding upon the parties the action should be dismissed with costs, as the arbn. clause had become operative. The pleadings, it was contended, appeared to be framed to deal only with the question whether the arbitrator had or had not jurisdiction, & defts. were not entitled to ask for a stay of the action :—Held : it being no longer necessary to plead conclusions of law, the pleading was sufficient in law to raise the question whether pltfs. were entitled to & did repudiate the contract &, if defts. intended to rely upon this contention, they should have applied for a stay of the action under the Arbn. Acts, 1889–1934, in the ordinary way.—PENNSYLVANIA SHIPPING CO. v. COMPAGNIE NATIONALE DE NAVIGATION, [1936] 2 All E. R. 1167; 155 L. T. 294; 80 Sol. Jo. 722; 42 Com. Cas. 45.

1878a. To load on or about a certain date—Exception of unavoidable hindrances beyond owners' control—Delay due to performance of subsequent charter with other characterers.]—By a charterparty, dated Aug. 2, 1933, shipowners chartered the S.S. W., stated to be "expected ready to load about Sept. 11, 1933," to charterers to proceed "with all convenient speed" to Hamburg & there load from the charterers a full & complete cargo of sugar & salt, & being so loaded proceed with all convenient speed to Merchants Quay, Kilrush, or so near thereto as she might safely get. The charterparty contained exceptions of (inter alia) "any other unavoidable accident or hindrances beyond charterers' or owners' control." On Aug. 31, 1933, the shipowners chartered the S.S. W., "expected ready to load on or about Sept. 6/7," to other charterers, to load a cargo of stone at Porthoustock (near Falmouth) for Felixstowe. The W. arrived at Porthoustock on Sept. 7, but owing to bad weather was unable to load until Sept. 11, with the result that, after discharging at Felixstowe, she did not arrive at Hamburg until Sunday, Sept. 17, & did not commence to load until Sept. 18. The shipowners' agent at Hamburg on Sept. 5 gave the shippers of the sugar & salt notice of readiness to load for Sept. 14. The cargo was accordingly brought down to Hamburg in barges ready for loading on Sept. 14. Owing to the delay in the W. reaching Hamburg three days' demurrage was incurred in respect of the barges, & the vessel arrived off Kilrush too late for the spring tides. As the charterers urgently required the sugar, 80 tons were lightered whilst the vessel was waiting for the next spring tides. The shipowners sued the charterers to recover the balance of the freight. This claim was admitted, but the charterers counterclaimed for (inter alia) demurrage on the barges at Hamburg & lighterage at Kilrush. The shipowners relied on the exception in the charterparty of Aug. 2 of "unavoidable . . . hindrances beyond . . . owners' control" as excusing the delay of the W. in arriving at Hamburg:—Held: the exceptions in the charterparty did not apply to matters which happened before the ship entered upon the charterparty voyage, & as the unavoidable hindrance beyond the owners' control, which was relied upon by the shipowners, happened upon the voyage on the intermediate charterparty of Aug. 31, & not upon the voyage on the charter party of Aug. 2, the shipowners could not rely upon the exception as a defence to the charterers' counterclaim.—MONROE BROS., LTD. v. RYAN, [1935] 2 K. 1879a. Provision of ice-breakers—Must enable vessel to reach loading place.]—Resps., as owners, chartered a steamer to applts. to proceed to Mariupol & load a cargo of coal, the charterparty providing, "In the event of the loading port being inaccessible by reason of ice on vessel's arrival at the edge of the ice or in case frost sets in after vessel's arrival at port of loading, the charterers undertake to provide ice-breaker assistance to enable steamer to reach, load at, & leave loading port, steamer being free of expense for ice-breaker assistance":—Held: by this clause the charterers undertook to provide ice-breaker assistance to enable the steamer to reach its loading place, & they could not justify their failure to do so on the pretext that the ice-breakers were not under their control.—UGLEEXPORT CHARKOW v. ANASTASIA S.S. 1879b. —— ——.]—Applt., as owner, chartered the steamship E. to resps. to convey a cargo of coal from Russia to Italy, the charterparty providing:—

"In the event of the port of loading being inaccessible by reason of ice on vessel's arrival at Kertch if loading at Mariupol or Berdjanska or at the edge of ice if loading at Nicolaieff or Theodosia, or in case frost sets in after vessel's arrival at loading port, the charterers undertake to provide ice-breaker to enable steamer to reach load at & leave the said port, steamer being free of expense for ice-breaker. Captains must follow official instructions issued by authorities for vessel convoyed by ice-breakers through the ice."

The charterers nominated Mariupol as the port of loading, & the E. proceeded to Kertch, & the authorities decided that the ice-breaker should escort her with three other ships in a convoy. The E. was delayed several weeks in arriving at Mariupol by the conditions of weather & ice which supervened unexpectedly after the convoy started. The shipowner claimed damages for delay & contended, "(a) that the ice clause imposed on the charterers an obligation to provide an ice-breaker for the exclusive service of the E., & that if the obligation had been complied with E. would have reached Mariupol without delay; (b) that the charterers were responsible for the delay of the E. on transit from Kertch to Mariupol while the ice-breaker was engaged in ice-breaking for other vessels of the convoy & not for the E." On a case stated by an umpire:—Held: the ice clause imposed an obligation on the charterers to make arrangements for the services of an efficient ice-breaker to be given to the E. in such manner as in the circumstances of weather & ice existing & to be reasonably anticipated would enable that vessel, apart from accidents, to reach her loading port without undue delay; & that, as the umpire had found as a fact that the provision of the ice-breaker to assist the E. together with three other vessels in a convoy was in accordance with this obligation, the shipowner's claim failed; but, on appeal:—Held: the case must be remitted to the umpire for reconsideration & restatement in view of recent decisions of the cts.—SANGUINETI (ANDREA), FU DAVIDE OF GENOA v. UGLEEXPORT OF MOSCOW (1934), 50 T. 1879c. —— Assistance outside port limits.]—Resps., as owners, chartered a steamer to applts. to take a cargo of timber in winter from Leningrad to Hull, the charterparty providing: "Charterers to supply the steamer with ice-breaker assistance if required by the captain to enable her to enter or leave port of loading free of all expenses to the owners. . . . Ice-breaker assistance to be rendered within forty-eight hours after steamer's arrival at the ice edge or readiness to leave the port of loading. Any time lost in waiting ice-breaker beyond forty-eight hours after readiness to proceed to be for charterers' account":—Held: the obligation extended not merely to the boundary of the port but to the point where the ship would be clear of the ice & able to proceed on her voyage, & the convoy system could be justified only so far as it could be reconciled with the paramount obligation to have regard both to the safety & to the despatch of the ship.—RUSSIAN WOOD AGENCY, LTD. v. DAMPSKIBSSELSKABET "HEIMDAL" (1934), 151 L. 1879d. —— —— Damages for injury.]—A charterparty provided that the charterers should supply the ship with ice-breaker assistance, if required by the captain, to enable her to enter or leave the loading port, & that the captain should notify the port authorities in due time of readiness to enter or leave the port, ice-breaker assistance to be rendered within forty-eight hours after arrival at the ice edge or readiness to leave, as the case might be, any time lost in waiting for assistance beyond forty-eight hours after readiness to proceed to be for charterers' account:—Held: (1) a notice given by the ship on Dec. 23, that she expected to arrive at the ice edge on Dec. 27, was a sufficient notification to impose on the charterers the duty to have an ice-breaker ready to assist her within forty-eight hours of her arrival; (2) thereafter it was the duty of the charterers to have an ice-breaker in attendance until the ship was clear of the ice; (3) the owners were entitled to damages for injury sustained by the ship during a period when she was left in the ice without ice-breaker assistance. (4) A portion of the timber loaded into the ship was coated with ice & snow, whereby its bulk was increased & the quantity which the ship could carry was reduced:—Held: the ship was entitled to dead freight in respect of the reduction in her carrying capacity so caused.—AKTIES. 1879f. —— Undertaking to "arrange for provision of ice-breaking assistance.] — Resps., as owners, chartered a steamer to applts. to proceed to Leningrad & load a cargo of timber for carriage to Antwerp. Having regard to earlier decisions on the question of the provision of ice-breaker assistance, the present charterparty provided: "(1) In the event of the port of loading being inaccessible by reason of ice or in case ice sets in after vessel's arrival at port of loading the charterers undertake to arrange for the provision by the port authorities of ice-breaker assistance if required by the captain free of expense to the steamer, the steamer complying with official instructions & rules issued by the authorities concerning ice-breaker assistance. . . . (4) Charterers shall not be responsible for any loss of time during passage through ice &/or any loss or damage caused to the steamer by ice, or for any detention on passage through ice":—Held: under clause 1 the charterers must provide ice-breaker assistance which was reasonably continuous from the moment when the ship entered the ice, & under clause 4 the charterers were only protected from liability for loss of time & for damage while ice-breaker assistance was being rendered under the terms of the charterparty.—DANNEBURG v. WHITE SEA TIMBER TRUST, LTD. 1879g. —— Notice of claim for damage—Effect of reservation of right to claim.]—A steamship was chartered by Arcos, Ltd., of London,

"for Exportles, Moscow," in terms of a Chamber of Shipping "Baltwood" charterparty, which contained a clause binding the charterers to supply the steamer with continuous ice-breaker assistance, & a provision that notice of claims must be given within twelve months of the date of the vessel's arrival at final port of discharge. As a result of breach of the ice clause by the charterers, the steamer was damaged. The owners intimated a claim for demurrage arising out of the delay caused by the ice, & the claim was dealt with by the Russian Trade Delegation at Oslo, as agents for Exportles, Moscow. The owners also intimated that they reserved their right to claim for compensation in respect of ice damage, but no further notice of claim was given within the twelve months:—Held: (1) the reservation by the owners of their right to claim in respect of the ice damage was a sufficient notice of claim within the charterparty; (2) adequate notice was given to the charterers through the agency of the Russian Trade Delegation at Oslo; (3) such a notice was in effect a notice to Exportles.—A/S RENDAL v. ARCOS, LTD., [1937] 3 All E. 1879j. "Safely aground."]—This was an action for damages instituted by the owners of the tanker P. against the owners & managers of an oil wharf at Boston (Lincs.) & of the berth adjacent thereto, & against the charterers of the P. under a charterparty which provided inter alia that the P. was "to proceed to Boston (Lincs.) or so near thereto as she can safely get (safely aground)" in respect of damage alleged to have been sustained by the P. at the said berth, & of the loss of freight resulting from the vessel's inability to complete her loading thereat. Against the first defts., pltfs. alleged negligence & breach of contract & (or) warranty, contending (a) that the first defts. had improperly invited the P. to occupy the said berth when they knew or ought to have known that it was not safe for the P. to lie in, & (b) that by so inviting the P. for reward, they had impliedly warranted that the said berth was safe & fit for the P. to occupy. As to the second defts., pltfs. said it was agreed by the charterparty that the ship should proceed to Boston or as near thereto as she could safely get (safely aground) & there load her cargo, & that by ordering the P. to the said berth the second defts. had expressly &/or impliedly warranted that the P. could lie safely aground in the said berth; that in fact the said berth was unsafe for the P. to lie in, & that therefore the second defts. had committed a breach of the said warranty. Both defts. denied liability, & the first defts. counterclaimed for damages in respect of damage done to their berth & to their mooring lines, alleging that the said damage was due to the negligence of those on board the P., in that they had moored the vessel improperly & in an improper position. The ct. found that P. was moored to the wharf, which had a jetty & piling, under the general directions of the first defts.; that she lay with a slight angle out forward from the jetty & that this was not corrected; that after the ship took the ground she had a slight list to starboard; her forward part gradually slipped away, & her forward moorings, & later one of her wires aft, parted so that she pivoted on her stern & lay aground at a substantial angle to the jetty, whereby she sustained serious bottom damage; that as regards the berth, work had been done upon it during July to clear it for the P.; that the previous history of the berth had not given the first defts. any warning that such an accident would be likely, & that the first defts. had warned those in charge of the ship that she was lying in an improper position:—Held: on the above findings: (1) although a ship lying at an angle when moored would be more likely to slip than if tight up, & a careful master ought to manage his mooring ropes so as to keep the ship parallel & close up to the jetty, the mere fact that the vessel took the ground with a slight angle outward did not indicate negligence on the part of those in charge of her; (2) the accident was caused by the inability of the berth to hold up the ship as she lay slightly angled out, & that, as the first defts. did not warrant the safety of the berth & took all reasonable steps to make it safe, they were not liable; (3) the second defts., as charterers, had no more knowledge about the fitness of the berth than pltfs., & they had given no express warranty, & no warranty could be implied from the terms of the charterparty, that the berth was safe. Pltfs.' claim against both defts. & the first defts.' counterclaim were dismissed, no order being made as to the costs.—THE "PASS OF LENY" (1936), 155 L. T. 421.

1898a. "Heavy grain"—Option to ship other cargo—Expense of discharge.]—A steamer was chartered for a cargo of "heavy grain"—i.e. wheat, maize, & rye, the charterers to have the option of shipping other lawful merchandise, & the extra expense of discharging "such merchandise" over that of discharging heavy grain was to be paid by the charterers. Part of the cargo shipped consisted of lawful merchandise other than heavy grain, & part of the optional cargo cost more, & part less, to discharge than heavy grain, the total cost of discharging the optional cargo being more than in the case of heavy grain:—Held: the only extra expense which the shipowners were entitled to recover was the extra expense of discharging the optional cargo as a whole, & anything saved in discharging part must be set off against the extra expense for the rest.—WOODFIELD STEAM SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. BUNGE Y BORN INDUSTRIAL OF BUENOS AYRES (1933), 49 T. 1906a. Expenses of discharge.]—Applt., as owner, chartered to resps. a steamer to bring a cargo of wheat, maize, or rye from Argentina, the charterparty providing, "Charterers have the option of shipping other lawful merchandise. . . . All extra expenses in . . . discharging such merchandise over heavy grain to be paid by charterers." The steamer loaded a cargo of wheat, oats, bran, & cottonseed & peanut cake, & was ordered to St.

Nazaire, where the cost of discharging wheat & maize was less than the cost of discharging rye. Wheat, maize, & rye were all heavy grain, but substantially the port of St. Nazaire did not deal with cargoes of rye from oversea. The shipowner claimed from the charterers the extra expense in discharging the cargo, other than wheat, over the expense of discharging an equivalent weight tonnage of wheat or maize, but the charterers contended that as they had the right to ship rye the equivalent weight tonnage to be used in the calculation was that of rye & not of wheat or maize:—Held: the charterers were liable only for the extra expense beyond what they could have caused the shipowner to incur if they had shipped a cargo of rye.—LYKIARDOPULO v. BUNGE Y BORN, LTD., [1934] 1 K. Pltfs. chartered a ship belonging to defts. to carry grain from the River Plate to European ports. A clause in the charterparty provided: "The charterers are to have the full reach & burthen of the steamer including 'tween & shelter decks, bridges, poop, etc. (provided same are not occupied by bunker coals &/or stores)":—Held: the clause applied to cargo space only. 2059a. —— Express exception in charterparty.]—By a charterparty in the form known as the Baltic & White Sea Conference Uniform Time Charter it was agreed between the owner of a steamship & charterers that the steamship should be taken on time charter by the charterers on terms & conditions which included: "Clause 8: Captain to prosecute all voyages with utmost dispatch. . . ." "Clause 10: . . . Should steamer be driven into port, or to anchorage, by stress of weather . . . causing detention to steamer, time so lost & expenses incurred shall be for charterers' account, even if caused through fault or want of due diligence by owners' servants." "Clause 12: Owners only to be responsible . . . for delay during the currency of this charter . . . if such delay . . . has been caused by want of due diligence on the part of owners or their manager, in making steamer seaworthy & fitted for the voyage, or any other personal act, or omission, or default of owners or their manager. Owners not to be responsible in any other case, nor for damage or delay whatsoever & howsoever caused, even if caused by neglect or default by owners' servants." During a voyage under the charterparty the captain, owing to bad weather, put into three harbours or sheltering places. The charterers having alleged that the captain had failed to prosecute his voyage "with utmost dispatch" within clause 8 of the charterparty & having claimed an allowance of hire in respect of the delay, recourse was had to arbn. The umpire found that there was nothing to justify the captain in putting into the harbours or sheltering places which he entered, that he had not prosecuted the voyage "with utmost dispatch" & that delay had been caused thereby, but that the delay had not been caused by any "personal act, or omission, or default" of the owner or his manager within clause 12. The award having been stated in the form of a special case:—Held: the owner was protected from liability for the delay by the provisions of clause 12 of the charterparty which, while not qualifying the duty to prosecute all voyages with utmost dispatch, placed on the captain by clause 8, afforded the owner a defence in such an action as the present.—ISTROS, S.S. 2079a. Ship damaged—Improper loading by charterer.]—A steamer belonging to resps. was chartered by applts. under a time charterparty which provided (inter alia); (a) that the steamer should be employed in lawful trades between good & safe ports where she could lie always afloat or safe aground where steamers of similar size & draft were accustomed to lie aground in safety; (b) that the charterers should indemnify the owners against all consequences or liabilities arising from the captain's complying with the orders of the charterers; & (c) that the charterers should be responsible for loss or damage caused to the steamer or the owners by improper loading. In the events which happened the steamer was damaged in consequence of having been loaded at an unsafe berth & was off hire for some weeks under repair. Resps. claimed hire for the period during which the steamer was under repair; applts. contended that no hire was due & counterclaimed in respect of hire overpaid & other matters. The dispute was referred to arbn., & the umpire awarded, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case, in favour of the shipowners, the present resps. On argument of the special case before MACKINNON, J., the award was confirmed, & the charterers now appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: dismissing the appeal, per GREER, L.J., (i) if it were necessary a term must be implied in the charterparty extending the provision that the steamer must only be employed between safe ports to include a provision that she must only be loaded at safe berths in those safe ports; (ii) as the steamer had in fact been loaded at an unsafe berth she had been loaded at a berth which was outside the limits within which the owners had agreed that she should be employed & the charterers were therefore not entitled to rely on clauses inserted in the charterparty for their benefit; (iii) as the master had obeyed the orders of the charterers in loading at an unsafe berth the charterers were bound by the charterparty to indemnify the owners against the consequences thereof; (iv) the charterers were responsible for the damage to the steamer & the loss to the owners because the steamer had been improperly loaded within the meaning of the charterparty; per SLESSER, L.J., a term must be implied in the charterparty that the steamer must only be loaded at safe berths, & as this term had been broken by the charterers they were responsible for the consequences; per MAUGHAM, L.J., (i) the expression "safe port" does not include a safe berth within that port, & the suggested implied term in the charterparty could not therefore be implied; (ii) there was no finding by the umpire that the berth at which the steamer was loaded was in fact unsafe, or that it was selected by the charterers. The case ought, therefore, to go back to the umpire for further consideration & restatement.—LENSEN SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. ANGLO-SOVIET SHIPPING CO., LTD. (1935), 40 Com. Cas. 320, C. A.

2099a. —— Ship partially prevented from unloading —Loss of foremast.]—The "Baltime" Charter of 1920 includes the following clauses: ". . . the owners to maintain the steamer in a thoroughly efficient state in hull & machinery during service; . . . the steamer to be fitted & maintained with winches & derricks; . . . in the event of loss of time . . . caused by . . . accident preventing the working of the steamer & lasting more than 24 consecutive hours, hire to cease from commencement of such loss of time until steamer is again in efficient state to resume service." The steamer was damaged & lost her foremast to which the forward winches were attached. Discharge was delayed some six days & shore cranes & floating craft were hired by the charterers to give assistance:—Held: in the absence of an express or implied request by the owners for assistance they were not liable to repay to the charterers the sums paid for the hire of the shore cranes & floating craft; on a proper construction of the charterparty the cesser of hire clause had been put into operation by the delay, & the shipowners' right to be paid hire ceased in respect of the time occupied in discharge; in construing a standard charterparty of this nature it must be assumed that it was drawn & its terms settled with full knowledge of the cases reported prior to the time the document was settled, & was intended to be construed & ought to be construed in the light of those cases.—TYNEDALE STEAM SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. ANGLO-SOVIET SHIPPING CO., LTD., [1936] 1 All E. After the steamer came on hire she went into dry dock for four days to repair damage which she had sustained in collision before coming on hire. The owners allowed the charterers four days' hire, & claimed to recover the amount so allowed from the defts. in the collision action:—Held: the above cesser clause applied to damage arising before as well as after the making of the charterparty; the charterers were entitled to deduct four days' hire; & the owners were entitled to recover the amount so deducted from the defts. as damages for loss of use of their steamer.—THE ES ENVOY (1929), 141 L. 2230a. ——.]—Defts. bought timber to be shipped to Liverpool, & it was shipped in pltf.'s steamer along with the cargo of other shippers. The bill of lading was a clean bill, stating that a specified quantity had been shipped in good condition, & incorporating the terms of the charterparty, which provided that the statements in the bill of lading as to the goods having been shipped in good condition, & as to the aggregate number of pieces delivered to the steamer, should be conclusive evidence against the shipowner. At the time of signing the bill of lading the master signed a protest stating that part of defts.' goods was in bad condition. Defts. were indorsees of the bill of lading, & after the arrival of the steamer pltf. informed them that part of the cargo had been damaged before shipment. There being nothing to indicate to defts. that the damaged part belonged to them, defts. accepted the bill of lading, when presented, & they paid for the timber. On delivery they found that the timber was defective, & that the quantity was less than the specified quantity. The shipowner sued defts. for balance of freight, & defts. counterclaimed for damages for delivering part of the goods in a damaged condition, & for failing to deliver part of the goods shipped :—Held : as the information of defts. was not of such a nature as to justify them in rejecting the bill of lading, pltf. was estopped from disputing the statements in it, & defts. were entitled to succeed on their counterclaim.—EVANS v. JAMES WEBSTER & BROTHERS, LTD. 2288a. ——— ———.]—A quantity of timber was shipped on board defts.' ship under bills of lading which described it as shipped in " good order & condition " to be delivered " in like good order & condition." The timber was, to the knowledge of defts.' master, in a bad condition, & he added the word " condition " to a clause on the back of the bills of lading, " quality, description & measurement unknown," so that the clause read " condition, quality (etc.), unknown." Pltfs. bought the timber from the shippers on formal contracts & received the bills of lading before the timber arrived. In an action against the shipowners pltfs. based their claim on breach of contract & estoppel :—Held : (1) " shipped in good order & condition " are not words of contract, & the words " to be delivered in like good order & condition " cannot stand alone to make a contract to deliver in good order & condition ; & accordingly the claim in contract failed ; (2) " condition . . . unknown " was not such a qualification of the statement " shipped in good order & condition " as to convey to pltfs. that the timber was in a damaged state, & had pltfs. acted on the statement to their detriment, defts. would have been estopped from denying that the timber was shipped in good condition ; but, as there was a clause in the contracts of sale that the buyers should not reject the goods but refer any dispute to arbitration, the claim based on estoppel also failed.

(3) Two other parcels of 1398 & 494 pieces of timber were short delivered. The bills of lading were expressed to be subject to the terms of the charterparty, which provided that the bills of lading should afford conclusive evidence of the number of pieces delivered to the ship. Both parcels had been lost from a scow alongside the ship during a storm before shipment. The bill of lading in respect of the 1398 pieces made this clear, but as regards the 494 pieces the bill of lading was clausued " 494 pieces of these lots not on board, being included in specification No. 5 lost from the ship " :—Held : as regards the 494 pieces the bill of lading was not so clausued as to bring it to the notice of pltfs. that these pieces were not delivered to the ship ; defts. were bound by the " conclusive evidence " clause ; & to this extent pltfs.' claim succeeded.—THE SKARP, [1935] P. 134 ; 104 L. The tanks were steamed & cleaned at Constanza to the satisfaction of Lloyd's surveyor, & the master signed bills of lading which described the kerosene as Roumanian Export Type Kerosene " shipped in good order & condition," but he qualified his signature by the words " quality unknown to me." The charterers bought from the shippers part of the kerosene shipped, & opened a credit on which the shippers were entitled to draw on presenting clean bills of lading. Having found that the kerosene from certain tanks was discoloured, the charterers claimed damages from the shipowners, & in an arbn. the umpire found that there was no evidence of the vessel being unfit to receive the cargo, that the fuel oil did not leak into the kerosene, that the discoloration did not take place after the loading, that it was not possible for the master to determine the quality of the kerosene as it was being pumped into the vessel, & that in signing the bills of lading the master relied on the description given by the shippers. On these findings the umpire held that the shipowners were not estopped by the statements in the bills of lading from denying that the kerosene was as therein stated & he dismissed the charterers' claim :—Held : on a case stated by the umpire, the shipowners were not estopped from alleging that there were at the time of shipment defects which were not apparent on reasonable inspection, & the umpire's award must stand.—UNITED MOLASSES CO., LTD. v. NATIONAL PETROLEUM CO. 2329a. Conversion of cargo—Recovery of advance from owner by pledgee—Liability of charterer to indemnify owner.]—By a charterparty dated Sept. 18, 1923, & renewed Feb. 22, 1924, a steamship, the S., belonging to the Strathlorne Steamship Co., resps. in the present appeal, was let on hire to Andrew Weir & Co., applts., by time charter not amounting to a demise. By a voyage charter dated June 24, 1924, Andrew Weir & Co. sublet the S., as they were entitled to do, to Chinese merchants to carry a cargo of rice from Rangoon to Swatow. On the vessel's arrival at Swatow the agents of Andrew Weir & Co. instructed the master to give delivery of the rice cargo to Chinese claimants who could not produce the bill of lading, & the master obeyed those instructions although the bill of lading provided that the cargo should not be handed over unless the bill of lading was given up to be cancelled. The cargo was in fact stolen, & the shipowners were obliged to compensate the holders of the bill of lading for its loss. The shipowners then claimed to be indemnified by Andrew Weir & Co. on whose instructions they had given delivery. The claim was referred to arbn. & the arbitrator awarded, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case, in favour of the shipowners :—Held : as the delivery of the rice cargo by resps. under the directions of applts.' agents had resulted in injury to third parties, & such delivery was not an act which was apparently illegal in itself & had been done by resps. honestly in compliance with applts.' directions, applts. were liable to indemnify resps. against the consequences.—STRATHLORNE S.S. CO., LTD. v. ANDREW WEIR & CO. (1934), 40 Com. Cas. 168, C. A.

By a charterparty the charterers were entitled to pay freight "on bill of lading weight less 2 per cent. in lieu of weighing." The shipowners, believing that more cargo had been shipped than that stated in the bill of lading presented by the charterers, had the cargo weighed at the port of discharge, where it was found that the weight had been understated :—Held : the charterers were not entitled to deduct 2 per cent. from the out-turn weight.—DAWSON LINE, LTD. v. AKTIENGESELLSCHAFT ADLER FÜR CHEMISCHE INDUSTRIE OF BERLIN, [1932] 1 K. 2510a. —— Shipowner required to sign bills of lading involving liability to third persons—Indemnity of shipowner.]—Defts. chartered pltf.'s ship to carry a full & complete cargo of wheat in bulk from Sydney to Birkenhead. Defts. undertook to supply up to 15 per cent. of the cargo in bags for purposes of safe stowage. The captain of the ship demanded additional cargo in bags, & a dispute arose as to who was to pay for the cost of the bags & ___ of this additional cargo. This dispute was submitted to arbn., & an award was made in favour of defts. The captain was bound under the charterparty to sign bills of lading in the form indorsed, & the bills of lading signed in consequence forced the ship to deliver the cargo & the bags to defts. or their assignees. Defts. assigned the cargo to a third party, & the cargo & the bags were delivered to the assignees. Pltf. claimed the costs of the bags which had been delivered to the assignees in accordance with the bills of lading :—Held : the bags belonged to pltf. & as he was required by the charterparty to sign bills of lading which necessitated their delivery to the consignee he was entitled to recover the cost of them.—THOMSON v. LOUIS DREYFUS & CO., [1936] 3 All E. P. on giving the order, gave to pltf. co. a cheque for £50, such sum to be deducted from the purchase-price when draft was presented for payment. The bill of lading, which was made to order & not to P., was tendered, with a demand draft attached, to P. & refused. The oils, upon arrival, were seized by defts. under several distress warrants on unsatisfied judgments obtained against P. On an originating summons to determine in whom was the property in the oil :—Held : upon a consideration of the contract & all the surrounding circumstances, the intention of the parties was that the property in the goods should not pass until payment of the demand draft, & the property in the goods never passed from pltf. co.—SOCONY PROPRIETARY, LTD. v. EGGE [1931] N. While loading, a portion of the deck cargo was lost overboard owing to the ship taking a sudden list. Pltfs. alleged that the list was due to negligence in so loading the ship, that she became unstable & that the loss did not come within the exception " perils . . . of the seas." Defts. alleged that the list was caused by a strong flood tide & undercurrent, & they relied on exception (a) " perils . . . & accidents of the seas " & alternatively under (b), on the absence of negligence, it being admitted that the words " at charterer's risk " would not protect defts. if they had been negligent:—Held: (1) pltfs.' claim failed, because, although the ct. was left in doubt as to how exactly the casualty was caused, the loss was of a character to which a marine adventure was subject & was within the exception " perils . . . & accidents of the seas," (2) (if it should be necessary to decide the second point) the words " at charterer's risk " did not put on the goods owner the risk of loss in every case in which the cause of the loss was unknown, &, although the cause of the listing was left in doubt, defts. had failed to provide an explanation in any sense comparable in probability with the probability of their own negligence in the loading of the timber, & therefore, that on this issue the defence failed.—THE STRANNA, [1937] P. 130; [1937] 2 All E. sd. Burden of proof.]—Upon an action against a carrier for damages to goods shipped under bills of lading which specifically stated that the vessel should not be liable for damage caused by perils of the sea, the grounds of defence were, first that, the carrier having established at the trial a primâ facie case of loss by a peril of the sea, the burden of proving negligence consequently rested on resp., & secondly, that the carrier had discharged the burden of proof resting on him under clause q, r. 2, art. 3 of the Sched. of the Barbados Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1926, which was made applicable to the contract;—Held: the issue raised by the first ground being an issue of fact, it was incumbent upon the carrier to acquit himself of the onus of showing that the weather encountered during the voyage was the cause of the damage & it was of such a nature that the danger of damage to the cargo arising from it could not have been foreseen or guarded against as one of the probable incidents of the voyage. Also, under clause q, r. 2, art. 3 the burden rests upon the carrier to show that neither the actual fault nor the privity of the carrier, nor the fault or neglect of the agents or servants of the carrier, contributed to the loss or the damage; & the carrier does not acquit himself of this onus by showing that he has employed competent stevedores to stow the damaged cargo, or that proper directions as to the stowage of the cargo have been given.—CANADIAN NATIONAL S.S. v. BAYLISS, [1937] S. 2755a. Strike against loading ship of particular nationality.]—A clause in a charterparty provided that if the cargo therein referred to could not be loaded by reason of a strike or lock-out of any class of workmen essential to the loading the time for loading should not count during the continuance of the strike. The shippers or consignees were not to be exonerated, by reason of a strike or lock-out of their men only, from any liability for demurrage if by reasonable diligence they could have obtained other suitable labour. Owing to some labour dispute in Latvia in 1933 there was at that time in the port of Leningrad a sympathetic strike of stevedores & other dock workers as the result of which there was no loading of Latvian ships, though the ships of other nationalities were loaded there. Pltfs., Latvian shipowners, chartered to Exportles (a Russian corpn.) a steamer to load at Leningrad a cargo of wood. The steamer arrived at the port in July, 1933, while the strike was in progress, & no loading took place until the strike ended in Sept. 1933. On a claim by the shipowners for demurrage :—Held : though Exportles were a separate entity, they did not supply their own labour, there was a strike of workmen essential to the loading by which the charterers were prevented from loading, the charterers could not put an end to the strike, the strike clause applied, & the shipowners' claim failed.—SEEBERG BROS. v. RUSSIAN WOOD AGENCY, LTD. 2817a. —— —— Impossible date.]—By a charterparty, dated Aug. 30, 1934, pltfs. agreed to load certain timber at the "end of Aug. 1934." There was an option to cancel the charterparty if a vessel was not ready to load on or before Sept. 20, 1934. The vessel, was, in fact, ready for loading on Sept. 27, 1934 :—Held : as the date of the charterparty was practically the same as the date when the vessel was "expected ready to load," the parties could not have intended the vessel to load at that time, & the whole document must be looked at to arrive at the proper construction of the charterparty. Having regard to the cancellation clause the proper construction was : "Expected ready to load on or before Sept. 27, 1934."—JENSEN v. HOLLIS BROS. & CO., LTD., [1936] 1 All E. R. 140.

2826a. Delay due to both parties—Apportionment of extra insurance.]—Pltfs. were the owners of a Swedish steamer. the R., which, by a charterparty dated Oct. 9, 1931, was chartered by defts. to go to Soroka, on the White Sea, & there load a cargo of timber for carriage to Hull. As the season was coming to an end & there was the danger of ice forming it was important that the loading should be completed as quickly as possible, & by clause 36 of the charterparty the charterers undertook to complete loading in time for the steamer to leave Soroka by Oct. 31, or in default of doing so to pay any extra insurance required owing to the delay, unless the delay was attributable to pltfs. or to the ship. At the date of the charterparty the R. was at Gothenburg, where she had been laid up for some months. She started for Soroka in due course, but on the way was delayed by unseaworthiness, by collision, for which she was solely to blame, & by bad weather. In the result she did not reach Soroka until Oct. 30, & was unable to leave until Nov. 6. Extra insurance became payable in consequence of the delay, the amount payable being, in English money, £336 8*s.* 7*d.* Pltfs. brought this action to recover that sum from defts., & defts. refused to pay on the ground that the delay in loading had been caused by the delay in reaching the loading port, & that that delay was attributable to the ship. Pltfs. contended that so far as the delay in reaching Soroka was due to unseaworthiness & collision they were protected by an exceptions clause in the charterparty which relieved them from liability :—Held : the exceptions clause did not apply & the delay due to unseaworthiness & collision was attributable to the ship within the meaning of clause 36 of the charterparty, but the delay due to other causes was for the account of defts.; & the cost of the extra insurance must, therefore, be apportioned between the parties.—REDERI AKTIEBOLAG BYIGIA v. ANGLO-SOVIET SHIPPING CO. As the ship had between decks, & could carry bulk wheat in the lower holds only, the total capacity of the ship was several hundred tons in excess of its capacity for bulk wheat. The master required the charterers to supply an additional quantity of wheat in bags to be carried between decks in order to load the ship down to its plimsoll mark. The question was whether the charterers were obliged under the charterparty to supply this additional quantity of wheat in bags :—Held : the charterers having provided all the bulk wheat the ship could carry were not obliged to supply any additional wheat in bags.—WESTRALIAN WHEAT FARMERS, LTD. v. WESTFAL-LARSEN & CO., [1936] W. , 27 L. C. J. 39 n., P. C.

By a charterparty a ship was to proceed to specified ports as ordered by the charterers, there load a cargo of pit props, & deliver it to an English port. By the charterparty the vessel was to be " provided with a deck load, at full freight, at charterers' risk, not exceeding what she can reasonably stow & carry." By an exception clause accidents of navigation, or latent defects in, or accidents to, hull &/or machinery were (inter alia) excepted " even when occasioned by the negligence, default, or error in judgment of the . . . master, mariners, or other persons employed by the shipowner, or for whose acts he is responsible. . . ." The ship loaded part of her cargo at one port & then proceeded to B. to ship the remainder. When the last sling load of deck cargo had been placed on deck, but before it had been stowed, the ship took a list, first to starboard & then to port, the bulwarks carried away, & a large quantity of cargo shot overboard & was lost. The judge held on the evidence that at the time of the loss the ship was unseaworthy owing to the deck load being excessive & that the captain was negligent in loading the ship as he did. In an action by the charterers against the shipowners for the value of the cargo lost:—Held: (2) as, at the beginning of the loading, the ship was seaworthy to receive & hold the cargo, & as, at the time of the loss, the operation of loading had not been completed, all the cargo not having been stowed, there was no breach of the warranty of seaworthiness & pltfs. were not entitled to recover; (3) although the words in the charterparty, " at charterers' risk," standing alone, did not excuse defts. in the case of a loss due to negligence on their part or on the part of their servants, those words must be read with the exception clause, & the effect of reading the two together was to enable defts. to rely on the exception clause, which protected them against the consequences of such negligence.—SVENSSONS (C. 3030a. —— ——.]—A bill of lading, entered into in the United States of America, & therefore required by the law of that country to be expressed to be subject to all the terms & conditions of the Harter Act, provided for the loading of the ship under the inspection of a surveyor of the Board of Underwriters of New York, & the receipt of a certificate in the usual form, certifying that the vessel had conformed to the rules of that Board, & that such certificate should be accepted by the shipper & the owner & consignees of the goods as conclusive evidence that the vessel had been properly prepared, the goods properly dunnaged & stowed, notwithstanding that such certificate merely recites that the vessel completed her loading under such inspection & conformed to the above rules. The certificate granted by the surveyor to the Board stated that the ship had been under inspection from time to time during the loading, & that the stowage, so far as it came under the observation of the giver of the certificate, was in accordance with the above rules. The certificate further stated that the officers of the Board used their best endeavours to insure that their functions were duly carried out, but neither the officers nor the Board were, in any circumstances whatever, to be held responsible for any inaccuracy, error of judgment, default or negligence. In another clause, the bill of lading provided that, in claims for short delivery or damage to cargo, made upon the ship's reaching her destination, the price should be the market price at the port of destination, but it was agreed that the value of each package shipped did not exceed $250, & the carrier's liability should not exceed that sum unless a greater value was specially declared. The cargo consisted of motor cars, expressly stated to be unboxed:—Held: (1) the certificate was not conclusive, since it did not certify that the vessel had completed her loading under the inspection of the surveyor, & certified only as to the stowage, so far as it came under the surveyor's observation; (2) the clause providing for the certificate offended against the Harter Act, because it enabled the shipowner to escape the liability from which the Act intended he should not escape upon production of a surveyor's certificate stating that he had done that which in fact he might not have done; (3) a motor car, put on a ship without a box or crate, was not a package; (4) the clause limiting liability did not offend against the Harter Act.—STUDEBAKER DISTRIBUTORS, 3059a. —— ——.]—Resp. defts., in Oct. 1919, shipped 412 tons of West African produce on the applt. pltfs.' schooner, the R., for carriage from C. on the west coast of Africa to Liverpool. A clause in the bill of lading provided that freight was due on shipment & should be payable on demand, ship or goods lost or not lost. Defts. paid half the freight on shipment. The vessel & cargo were lost during the voyage, & as the goods never reached Liverpool, defts. refused to pay pltfs. the balance of freight, & pltfs. now claimed the balance of freight. Defts. pleaded that the vessel was in fact unseaworthy, & that therefore the bill of lading contract could not be enforced against them. By clause 2 of the bill of lading: "The co. shall not be liable for, or for any loss or damage arising from or due to, collision, . . . or any other peril of the sea . . . of whatsoever nature or kind, whether any perils, causes, or things in this clause mentioned are due to or arise . . . from the wrongful act, omission, or error in judgment or negligence of . . . any person whomsoever in the service of the co. . . . & whether due to or arising . . . from unseaworthiness of the ship . . . provided in case of any loss, injury, or damage arising from or due to unseaworthiness of the ship at the beginning of the voyage all reasonable means shall have been taken to provide against such unseaworthiness. The co. may entrust to experienced or qualified officers, servants, or agents the duty of providing against unseaworthiness, & shall then be deemed to have fulfilled its obligations hereunder . . .":—Held: defts. had failed to discharge the onus which lay on them of proving that the vessel was unseaworthy at the beginning of the voyage. Moreover, even if the vessel had in fact been unseaworthy pltfs. were protected by clause 2 of the bill of lading, as (a) they had taken all reasonable means to provide against unseaworthiness, & (b) they had entrusted to experienced & qualified officers, servants, or agents, the duty of providing against unseaworthiness, & must therefore be deemed to have fulfilled their obligations under the bill of lading.—COSMOPOLITAN SHIPPING CO. e 1. —— —— Whether contract within Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924.]—A firm of shipowners contracted to carry a cargo of machinery belonging to a firm of shipbuilders from the latter's premises in Glasgow to their shipyards at Belfast. The contract was arranged by correspondence, in the course of which the shipowners stipulated that the cargo was to be conveyed at owner's risk & subject to the conditions in their sailing-bills. These included a condition that, in contracts were there was no bill of lading, the shipowners would not be liable for loss resulting from unseaworthiness of the ship. The vessel carrying the machinery was lost on the voyage, along with the cargo. No bill of lading had been issued, but, after the loss of the cargo, the shipowners gave the shipbuilers a letter acknowledging receipt of the cargo & specifying it in detail. In an action at the instance of the shipbuilders against the shipowners for recovery of the value of the cargo based on the alleged unseaworthiness of the vessel, the pursuers contended that the contract between the parties was regulated by the Act of 1924, & that the defenders had failed to comply with the provisions of the Act for contracting out of their statutory liability:—Held: that the contract between the parties was not a "contract of carriage" within the meaning of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924, in respect (a) that the only receipt granted for the cargo, viz. the letter of acknowledgment given by the defenders to the pursuers, did not constitute either a "bill of lading" or "similar documents of title" within Art. 1 (b) of the Schedule to the Act, & (f) that, the issue of a bill of lading not being within the contemplation of the parties to the contract, the contract could not reasonably be described as "covered" by a bill of lading within the meaning of Art. 1 (b); &, accordingly, that defenders were entitled to contract out of liability for loss resulting from their vessel's unseaworthiness without reference to the Act; & action dismissed.—HARLAND & WOLFF, LTD. v. BURNS & LAIRD LINES, LTD., [1931] S. 3073a. —— —— ——.]—Under Water Carriage of Goods Act, 1910 (Canada), s. 6, if the owner of any ship transporting merchandise from any port in Canada exercises due diligence to make the ship in all respects seaworthy, neither the ship nor the owner shall be held responsible for loss or damage resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of the ship, or from latent defect. Under sect. 7 neither the ship nor the owner is liable for loss arising from dangers of the sea or other navigable waters. A shipowner had contracted to carry a cargo from Vancouver to Hull, & had arranged that his ship should call on the way at St. Thomas for the purpose of bunkering. The quantity of coal normally required by the ship for the voyage to St. Thomas was 650 tons, & the ship left Vancouver with 675 tons on board. A few days after passing through the Panama Canal the captain realised that he had not sufficient coal to reach St. Thomas & accordingly altered course for Jamaica. While proceeding there he struck a reef & his vessel & cargo became a total loss. The cargo owners claimed damages, & the ship-owner contended that (a) the ship on leaving Vancouver had sufficient coal & a proper margin to take her to St. Thomas; (b) there was a potential coaling port at Colon, & this fact must be regarded in fixing the margin:—Held: (1) on the facts the ship when she left Vancouver for St. Thomas was not carrying a proper margin of coal; (2) if Colon was to be regarded as a coaling port then the stage to be considered was Colon to St. Thomas, & it was clear on the facts that the ship when it passed Colon had not sufficient coal to take her to St. Thomas.—TIMM & SON, LTD. v. NORTHUMBRIAN SHIPPING CO., LTD., [1937] 2 All E. 3092a. —— —— Necessary for admission to port.]—A steamer was chartered to perform a Baltic round voyage, the charterparty providing as follows: The steamer was to be "in every way fitted for ordinary cargo service." The charterers were to pay all "port charges . . . & all other charges & expenses whatsoever," except certain specified outgoings, which were to be paid by the shipowners. The hire was payable by the charterers by the month "& pro rata for any fractional part of a month (the days to be taken as fractions of a month of 30 days)." On the expiration of the charterparty the steamer was to be redelivered "in same good order as when delivered to the charterers (fair wear & tear excepted)." The steamer was ordered to Stockholm, but when she arrived she had no measurement certificate, as required by Swedish law, & the charterers had to procure one & pay the cost of it. The hire began in Aug. & lasted twenty-nine days, the charterers having paid a month's hire in advance. After discharging at Stockholm the steamer went to Lulea & loaded iron ore, which was dropped into the hold from a considerable height, & which was discharged at Emden by means of grabs, & the bottom of the hold was damaged in consequence. In an arbn. the umpire found that the cost of the certificate must be borne by the charterers, that the charterers could get only one day's hire back from the shipowners, & that the damage to the hold was not fair wear & tear:—Held: the certificate was not a document which the shipowners were bound to supply, the charterers were entitled to repayment of hire for one day only, & the umpire was entitled in law to hold that the damage was not fair wear & tear, & therefore the award must be upheld on all three points.—CHELLEW NAVIGATION CO., LTD. v. A. 3099a. —— ——.]—A steamship was chartered to proceed to various ports in the River Plate & there load a cargo of grain for carriage to Hamburg. The shipowners had provided bunker coal more than enough to take the ship to the loading ports. Some of this coal was stowed in a reserve bunker on the port side separated from one of the ship's holds only by an unprotected steel bulkhead. The coal was unfit for the voyage. In this respect the vessel was unseaworthy. Shortly after she started on the return voyage a serious fire broke out in the port reserve bunker. The captain put into a port of refuge & incurred expense for the benefit of ship & cargo. In an action by the shipowners against cargo owners for contribution towards a general average expenditure defts. counterclaimed for damages for injury to their cargo owing to the fire. The fire having happened without the actual fault or privity of pltfs.:—Held: (1) by virtue of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 502, which relieved pltfs. from liability for loss of or damage to the cargo, they were entitled to general average contribution; (2) notwithstanding the unseaworthiness of the ship, pltfs. were not liable for loss of or injury to the cargo.—LOUIS DREYFUS & Co. v. TEMPUS SHIPPING CO., [1931] A. 3110b. —— Oil—Cleanliness of tanks.]—Resps. chartered a steamer from applt. shipowners for the carriage of a cargo of oil. The charterparty contained the following clauses: "1. The steamer being tight staunch & strong & every way fitted for the voyage, & to be maintained in such condition during the voyage, perils of the sea excepted. . . . 16. The captain is bound to keep the tanks, pipes & pumps of the steamer always clean. . . . 27. Steamer to clean for the cargo in question to the satisfaction of charterers' inspector." The tanks were inspected on behalf of the charterers, & the cleaning suggested by the inspector having been carried out by the master, the ship was accepted by the charterers as fit to load. Some portion of the cargo became damaged by discoloration, for which the charterers sought to make the shipowners responsible. There was no negligence by the shipowners or their servants in making the vessel fit to carry the cargo & the master took all reasonable steps to make the tanks clean & fit for that purpose. The cause of the damage was not established :—Held : clauses 1 & 16 contained an express warranty of seaworthiness that the ship was fit for the particular cargo; the shipowners were not relieved from liability by clause 27, which was superadded to the charterparty for the purpose of the charterers; & that the shipowners were accordingly liable to the charterers.—Petrofina S. 3125a. Absence of shifting boards.]—Applts., Swedish shipowners, chartered a steamer to resps. The charterparty provided (inter alia) that the steamer was "every way fitted to carry bulk & general cargoes," that the owners would maintain her in a thoroughly efficient state in hull, machinery & equipment for & during the service, "with dunnage, mats, shifting boards (as far as on board)," & that the charterers should provide & pay for coals . . . & "all other charges & expenses whatsoever appertaining to the cargo." When the steamer was delivered to the charterers she was not fitted with shifting boards. During the currency of the charterparty she was employed to carry grain in bulk, & it was necessary that shifting boards should be provided for the grain to be carried in safety. The carriage of cargo of that description was contemplated by the charterparty. A dispute arose between applts. & resps. as to which of them should bear the cost of providing the necessary shifting boards; the dispute was referred to arbn. & the arbitrator awarded, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case, in favour of resps. The special case was argued before Lewis, J.; he confirmed the award, & applts. now appealed to the Ct. of Appeal. Their Lordships dismissed the appeal :—Held : (1) as the voyage was one of the class contemplated by the charterparty & could not be safely made without shifting boards the obligation to provide shifting boards was laid upon the shipowners by the provision in the charterparty that the steamer was "every way fitted to carry bulk . . . cargoes"; (2) the provision in the charterparty that the owners would maintain the steamer with shifting boards "as far as on board" could not diminish the primary obligation of the shipowners to have the steamer every way fitted to carry bulk cargoes; (3) the provision of shifting boards was part of the duty of the shipowners & was not an expense "appertaining to the cargo" for which by the charterparty the charterers were liable; & (4) shifting boards were part of the equipment of the steamer &

sg. What amounts to improper stowage—Wheat in bulk—Lack of shifting boards.]—Wheat was shipped under a bill of lading which incorporated the Water-Carriage of Goods Act, R. S., 1927, c. 207. In the course of the voyage the ship stranded during a gale, & the wheat was lost in consequence. In an action for damages by the owners of the wheat against the shipowners, the trial judge & the appellate ct., concurrently found (a) that the ship was unseaworthy in that the wheat was loaded in bulk without shifting boards or other precaution to keep it from shifting, & that the shipowners had not exercised due diligence to make her seaworthy; & (2) that this unseaworthiness was the cause of the loss, in the sense that the master had been apprehensive that the wheat, so stowed, would shift if he were to put the ship upon her proper course, as that would involve putting her in the trough of the sea, & that for that reason he did not do so, whereas if she had taken the proper course she would have avoided the shoal upon which she stranded :—Held : the findings were findings of fact &, being concurrent, should not be disturbed; & upon them the shipowners were liable under sects. 4 & 7 of the above Act.—Paterson Steamships, Ltd. v. Canadian Co-operative Wheat Producers, Ltd., [1934] A. 3162a. —— Within Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), Sched., Art. IV., r. 4].—A cargo of coal was loaded on defts.' steamship, the I., at Swansea, for carriage to Constantinople under bills of lading, which gave the shipowners "liberty . . . to call at any ports in any order, for bunkering or other purposes, . . . all as part of the contract voyage." The shipowners were exempted by the bills of lading from liability for loss due to perils of the seas. The I. was fitted, in the interests of the shipowners, with a superheater, & when she started from Swansea she had on board two engineers, who were there to observe whether the superheater was working efficiently. It was intended that these two engineers should be landed with the pilot at Lundy, but when the vessel reached that island no satisfactory trial of the superheater having been obtained, the two engineers remained on board, & were, later, landed in St. Ives Bay. In proceeding there, & for some time after leaving there, the I. was off the usual route. Shortly after resuming her voyage from St. Ives Bay & before she had returned to the usual route the I. stranded on the Cornish coast, & both ship & cargo were lost. In an action in respect of the loss of the cargo :—Held : (1) the departure of the I. from the contract route did not come within the liberty given by the bills of lading "to call at any ports in any order, for bunkering or other purposes," as the words "or other purposes" must be construed ejusdem generis with the word "bunkering," & as meaning the calling at a port for some purpose having relation to the contract voyage; (2) the deviation was not a "reasonable deviation" within Art. IV., r. 4, of Sched. to Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22).

In considering whether a deviation is "reasonable" within Art. IV., r. 4, the interests to be considered are those of the parties to the contract adventure, & this may include consideration of the position of the underwriters (per SCRUTTON, L.J.).

The words "reasonable deviation" mean a deviation whether in the interests of the shipowner, or the cargo owner or both, to which no reasonably minded cargo owner would raise any objection (per GREER, L.J.).

The reasonableness of a deviation must depend upon what would be contemplated reasonably by both parties to the contract adventure, having regard to the exigencies of the route, known or assumed to be known to both parties (per SLESSER, L.J.).

(3) As the Act of 1924 has not altered the former rule whereby any unauthorised deviation from the contract route has the effect of displacing the exemptions in favour of the shipowners contained in the contract of carriage, the exemption from liability in respect of loss due to perils of the seas did not protect the shipowners; (4) the shipowners were liable in damages, the measure of which was the value of the coal at Constantinople if it had been delivered there in due course.—FOSCOLO, MANGO & CO., LTD. v. STAG LINE, LTD., [1931] 2 K. The vessel deviated to Hull before going to London, but the deviation did not affect the condition of the lemons. 3194a. Liability of indorsees of bills of lading—General average contribution.]—By a charterparty a firm, having sold sugar to resps., chartered applt.'s steamer T. to load the sugar at two ports in Cuba & at one port in San Domingo "as ordered." The charterers, by notice to applts.' agents in New York, specified two loading ports in Cuba & one in San Domingo. The T. loaded sugar at the first Cuban port & was sent on by the local agents of the charterers to the second Cuban port. A cablegram directing the steamer to call at a loading port in San Domingo was not delivered to the master, who therefore left Cuba for home with a considerable cargo space unoccupied. Shortly afterwards the steamer was recalled by wireless & ordered to go to the loading port in San Domingo where she completed loading. On leaving San Domingo on the homeward voyage the T. stranded & was badly damaged. The sugar had to be discharged & part of it was lost. The cargo was brought home in another steamer, & to obtain possession of it resps. signed a Lloyd's average bond under which they were required to deposit £9,500 to cover an adequate proportion of general average charges. The present resps., indorsees of the bills of lading, brought an action against the present applts. claiming the return of their deposit under the bond, & a declaration that they were not liable to contribute in general average in respect of the Cuban sugar, on the ground that there had been an unjustified deviation from the charterparty voyage. Applts. counterclaimed for proper contribution in general average & for the balance of freight :—Held : although there was an unjustified deviation it was waived by the charterers, & the charterparty thus remained in force; resps., as indorsees of the bills of lading, were not personally liable to contribute to the general average loss as they had not waived the deviation; but as the general average contributions were chargeable on the goods, & applts. gave up their lien in consideration of resps.' undertaking in the bond to make the proper contribution in general average resps. were bound by the bond to make such contribution; there was no implied obligation to pay the balance of freight.—Hain S.S. 3517a. Port requiring tug assistance—No tug assistance available.]—A charterparty provided that the charterers might order the chartered vessel to discharge at two or three safe ports in the United Kingdom or elsewhere within certain defined limits. The charterers ordered the vessel to Liverpool for part discharge & there ordered her to proceed to Londonderry for further discharge. Owing to her size she could not pass safely up the narrow & winding channel to Londonderry without tug assistance. No tugs were kept at Londonderry & the shipowners had to procure a tug from Glasgow to enable the vessel to reach her discharging berth, & after her discharge was completed had to procure another tug from Glasgow to enable her to leave. The shipowners claimed to recover from the charterers the cost of tug assistance so procured, on the ground that as the chartered vessel could not reach Londonderry without tug assistance & no such assistance was procurable locally Londonderry was not a safe port within the charterparty. The claim was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator awarded, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case, in favour of the shipowners :—Held : confirming the award, if tug assistance was required to enable the chartered vessel to reach her discharging port & no such assistance was obtainable at the port itself, that port, as regards that particular vessel, was not a safe port within the charterparty.—AXEL BROSTROM & SON v. LOUIS DREYFUS & CO. It was understood that the cargo would be taken by coasting steamer as far as Newcastle, where it would be transhipped to a vessel of defenders for carriage to Boston. The contract between the parties was based upon Shipping Instructions, containing this clause :—"All goods awaiting shipment are received & carried subject . . . to the conditions . . . of any . . . persons by whom the goods may be conveyed." During transhipment at Newcastle the goods were placed on board a lighter, where they were damaged through being left uncovered in heavy rain. The lighterman had accepted the goods from defenders under a contract, the terms of which exempted him from liability for his servants' negligence :—Held : the clause quoted from the Shipping Instructions applied during the transhipment of the goods by means of the lighter, & its effect was to import into the contract between pursuers & defenders the exemption from liability contained in the lighterman's conditions of carriage.—ABERDEEN GRIT CO. v. ELLERMAN'S WILSON LINE, [1933] S. left in seaworthy trim to proceed between ports of discharge " :—Held: the information given to the master at the port of loading was not sufficient to enable him to stow a cargo of grain so that the expense of bagging part of the cargo left on board after unloading at the first port of discharge could be avoided, the bagging being rendered necessary by the terms of Sched. 18 of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), & Board of Trade regulations; the words " in seaworthy trim " meant that after discharge at the first port the steamer must be left in a condition in which she could safely meet the perils of the sea on her passage to the second port of discharge & not simply in the condition of riding level in still water; & the shipowners were entitled to recover from the charterers the cost of bagging so as to leave the vessel in " seaworthy trim," but not the cost of emptying the bags at the second port.—BRITAIN S.S. 3611a. —— Bagging bulk cargo.]—Applts., pltfs. in the action, were the owners of a cargo of Egyptian cotton seed shipped in bulk from Alexandria to Southampton in a steamer belonging to resps. At Southampton the docks were owned by the Southern Ry. Co., who did the whole of the work of discharge. The co. refused to allow the cargo to be discharged unless it was put into bags in the hold so that the bags could be raised by the ship's tackle & placed on a weighing machine on deck before being swung ashore. As it was impossible to deliver the cargo in any other way the captain of the steamer instructed the railway co. to have it bagged, & the cargo was accordingly delivered in bags. A dispute arose between applts. & resps. as to whether the ship or the receivers must pay the cost of bagging. Applts., as receivers, brought this action to recover the cost from resps., & MACKINNON, J., by whom the action was tried, gave judgment for resps. Applts. now appealed to the Ct. of Appeal: Held: allowing the appeal, although as between a shipowner & a receiver the shipowner is entitled to deliver a bulk cargo over the ship's rail by any reasonable means, in this particular case it was impossible owing to the requirements of the port authority to deliver otherwise than in bags, & the captain, finding that he could not perform the ship's duty to deliver the cargo over the ship's rail in any other way, gave instructions to the port authority to put the cargo into bags. Those instructions were given on behalf of the ship, & resps. must therefore pay the cost of bagging.—BRITISH OIL & CAKE MILLS, LTD. v. MOOR LINE, LTD. (1935), 41 Com. Cas. 53, C. A.

3623a. Provision of lighters with men willing to perform work.]—Pltfs. were the owners of timber shipped on defts.' steamer for delivery at the port of London. The bills of lading incorporated the terms of a charterparty in Baltwood form, clause 15 of which provided:—" The cargo shall . . . be discharged by the vessel in the customary manner as fast as the vessel can deliver during the ordinary working hours of the port on to the quay &/or into lighters &/or craft &/or rafts &/or wagons &/or on to bogies & thereon stowed &/or stacked as customary at the port of discharge, the consignees having the right to select any one or more of these alternatives if customary & available at the time of discharge." Pltfs. selected customary delivery into lighters, but, owing to a strike of lightermen, could not supply the men required, & thereupon defts., without notifying pltfs., discharged on to the quay on their own responsibility, & pltfs. incurred expenses for landing charges & quay rent. In an action to recover these expenses: —Held: (1) pltfs.' right to insist on discharge into lighters ceased when that method ceased to be available; (2) it was not sufficient to supply lighters without men; (3) there was no obligation on the defts. to notify pltfs. before adopting the only method of discharge available at the time, & therefore the action failed.—FITZGERALD v. LONA S.S. 3624a. Failure of method selected by consignee—Duty to save delay by alternative method.]—A steamer belonging to applts., pltfs. in the action, was chartered to bring a cargo of timber from a Baltic port to the Surrey Commercial Dock, London. Resp. was the indorsee of the bill of lading of part of the cargo, & the bill of lading incorporated the terms of the charterparty. By a clause in the charterparty resp. had the right to select any one or more of a number of possible methods of discharge, if available at the port of discharge, & at the Surrey Commercial Dock there were in fact two methods of discharge which were available—into lighters alongside & on to the quay. The steamer arrived in the Surrey Commercial Dock in due course, & resp. selected the method of discharge into lighters. Discharge was thereupon begun, but before more than a small part of the cargo had been unloaded a strike occurred among the lightermen & discharge into lighters became impossible for some weeks. Applts. requested the resp. to make arrangements to take his cargo by the alternative method of discharge on to quay, which was still possible, but the resp., for whom the method of discharge into lighters was much more convenient, refused to take any steps to have his cargo landed. Applts. brought this action to recover demurrage or damages for detention of the steamer. MACKINNON, J., by whom the action was tried, decided in favour of resp., & applts. now appealed to the Ct. of Appeal. The ct. allowed the appeal, on the ground that when the method of discharge selected by resp. became impossible it was his duty under the charterparty to save delay to the steamer by making arrangements within a reasonable time to have the discharge completed by the other method.—REDERIAKTIEBOLAGET MACEDONIA v. SLAUGHTER (1935), 40 Com. Cas. 227, C. A.

3634a. Charges for work done beyond "delivering cargo"—Meaning of delivery.]—By a charterparty for the carriage of a cargo of timber from the B. to G. it was provided (inter alia) as follows: clause 15: "For any work done by the vessel at the port of discharge beyond delivering cargo at the ship's rail if delivered by hand, or within reach of the ship's tackle or of the shore crane tackle if thereby discharged, the consignees shall pay to the shipowner the cost thereof plus 15 per cent.":—Held: upon the true construction of clause 15 of the charterparty the vessel had not delivered the cargo until it had lowered it into wagons & released the attachment to the crane which lowered it.—DAMPSKIP SELSKAB SVENDBORG v. LONDON MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. 3634c. "Delivery from ship's tackles"—"Liberty to tranship"—Right to unload into lighters.]—A cargo of rice belonging to pltfs. was shipped on a steamship of defts.' line for carriage to & delivery at a specified port, the bill of lading containing a clause providing that the shipment was made "with liberty to tranship," a clause providing that the cargo was to be delivered "from the ship's tackles," a clause excepting the act of God & perils of the seas, & a clause incorporating the Hague Rules. By arrangement between defts. & a co. a practice existed at the port of delivery according to which defts. were entitled to use for discharging the cargoes of steamers of their line a wharf belonging to the co., unless the co. required it for one of its own vessels, when defts.' steamer lay in the harbour, the co. sending lighters to take discharge of its cargo & ultimately discharging that cargo at the wharf. On the arrival of the steamship at the port of delivery that wharf was not available, & in accordance with the practice pltfs.' cargo was discharged into lighters. While the cargo was still in the lighters they were sunk in a hurricane & the cargo was totally lost. Pltfs. alleging that defts. by discharging the cargo into lighters in accordance with the practice had committed a breach of the contract between them to which the loss of the cargo was due, brought an action against defts. to recover the value of the cargo:—Held: the action failed on the following grounds: the practice being to the knowledge of pltfs., a general practice, applicable at the port of delivery to all steamers of defts.' line, must be taken to be incorporated in the contract, unless it was unreasonable or was excluded by some provision of the bill of lading; the practice was not unreasonable; the clause in the bill of lading allowing liberty to "tranship," assuming it to be valid, not only did not by implication exclude the practice, but expressly authorised the discharge of the cargo into lighters; that clause was not prevented from being valid by Art. III., r. 8 of the Hague Rules or otherwise; the clause in the bill of lading providing for delivery from the ship's tackles did not exclude the practice; there being no other clause in the bill of lading which excluded the practice, defts., by discharging the cargo into the lighters in accordance with the practice, had not broken & determined the contract, & were therefore protected by the exception clause from liability for the loss of the cargo.—MARCELINO GONZALEZ Y COMPANIA S. EN C. v. JAMES NOURSE, LTD., [1936] 1 K. B. 565; 105 L. J. K. B. 158; 154 L. T. 497; 80 Sol. Jo. 93; 41 Com. Cas. 94; 18 Asp. M. L.

3634d. Nomination of stevedores.]—A steamer of applts., the Ben Line Steamers, Ltd., was chartered to carry a cargo to certain French ports as ordered. Under the charterparty the charterers had the right to nominate stevedores at the ports of loading & discharging "providing rates are not higher than captain can get the work done by other good stevedores." The charterers' agents at the ports of discharge nominated stevedores who were willing to discharge the steamer at a rate which was the usual rate prevailing at those ports for the discharge of individual vessels, but the shipowners had a standing contract with other stevedores at those ports by which, in consideration of the shipowners' employing those other stevedores for the discharge of all the vessels of their fleet, discharge was effected at a special low rate. The shipowners refused to pay the rate charged by the stevedores nominated by the charterers on the ground that in the circumstances prevailing at those ports they could get the work done at a lower rate within the meaning of the proviso in the charterparty. The dispute was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator awarded, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case, in favour of the charterers. The special case was argued before PORTER, J., who decided in favour of the shipowners, & the charterers now appealed to the Ct. of Appeal. Their Lordships dismissed the appeal, holding that there was sufficient evidence to justify the conclusion that the shipowners could get the work done by other good stevedores at a cheaper rate & that the charterers were therefore not entitled to nominate stevedores to discharge.—BEN LINE STEAMERS, LTD. v. COMPAGNIE OPTORG OF SAIGON (1937), 42 Com. 3649a. —— —— No other goods to be discharged.]—Certain cotton goods were carried from L. to B., where they were discharged into a lighter. Certain other iron goods, packed in a wooden case, were being lowered into the same lighter when the case broke & the iron goods fell out into the lighter & holed it. Sea-water entered & damaged the cotton goods. Under the contract of carriage lighterage was to be at the risk of the owners, & the provisions of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), were also incorporated. The owners of the cotton goods claimed damages from the owners of the ship:—Held: (1) if the sea transit had ended when the goods were placed in the lighter, defts. were protected by the terms of the bill of lading. The sea transit, however, had not ended: the discharge into the lighter was part of the operation of discharge from the ship & was not complete as long as there were other goods to be discharged into the lighter; (2) the exception relating to loss due to insufficiency of packing in Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), Art. IV. (2) (n), was wide enough to cover the case of the packing of other goods, though primarily it would apply to the goods themselves that were lost or damaged; (3) on the evidence defts. had shown no negligence on the part of themselves or their servants & were therefore exempt from liability under Art. IV. (2) (q).—GOODWIN, FERREIRA & Co., LTD. v. LAMPORT & HOLT, LTD. (1929), 141 L. T. 494; 45 T. L. R. 521; 73 Sol. Jo. 402; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 38.

"Reversible" working days—How interpreted.]—Pltf., the owner of a motor-schooner, chartered her to defts. to make a number of voyages with cargoes of bricks from R., in Belgium, to London. The charterparty provided: "The cargo to be loaded & discharged together within five reversible working days, time to commence from first high water at or off loading or discharging berth. Charterer is entitled to keep the vessel on demurrage not exceeding ten days at the rate of 1*s.* per net register ton per day payable day by day." 3821a. Value of goods at date of non-delivery—Contracts of resale disregarded.]—Pltfs., grain merchants of Hull, in Aug. 1930, bought from a German firm 1,000 tons of Roumanian wheat at 36*s.* a quarter, "as per sealed sample No. 727," Sept./Oct. shipment, from a Black Sea port, & immediately resold it under advance contracts at 36*s.* 6*d.* a quarter. The wheat was shipped on defts.' steamship, but a portion of it was not put on board until Nov., & in consequence the German seller had to take 24*s.* a quarter for that parcel. Deft. shipowners had no knowledge of the purchase or resale prices or that the wheat had been resold. When the ship arrived at Hull in Jan. 1931, it was found that there was a considerable quantity of barley mixed with the wheat; & in an action by pltfs. against defts. for non-delivery & conversion LANGTON, J., found that there was a short delivery of 47 tons & referred the assessment of the damages to the registrar. The registrar found that there was no market for Roumanian wheat "as per sample No. 727," & that the measure of damages was the price 3666 iii, ——.]—A charter-party which provided for loading at a daily rate contained a clause that the steamer should employ stevedores appointed by the charterers, but the cargo was to be stowed under the captain's supervision. Time for loading was to be reckoned from twenty-four hours after the master had given written notice that the steamer was ready to load. The master, on arriving at the port of loading, gave notice of readiness. There was only one firm of stevedores at the port, which had been nominated by the charterers, but owing to shortage of labour caused by congestion of shipping the ship could not commence to load until some days after notice had been given. There was available during this time sufficient casual labour to put the cargo, which was ready in trucks, into the ship's slings. Loading at the port was a joint operation:—Held: the charterers were liable for demurrage.—Re LOUIS DREYFUS & Co. & SIR WILLIAM REARDON SMITH & SONS, LTD., [1928] S. A. S. R. 117.—AUS.

se. Defences—Practice as to delivery at port of destination.]—Pltf. consigned a package of goods by deft.'s ship from Melbourne to Sydney under the terms of a bill of lading which provided that all liability of deft. should cease "as soon as the goods are free from the ship's tackles," & by another clause, indorsed thereon, that "should the owner fail to take delivery of the goods in accordance with the terms of this contract, such goods may be without notice transhipped into lighters or other craft, landed, warehoused, stored, or in any other way provided for, at the owner's sole risk & expense." Evidence was given that the invariable practice on the part of deft. in discharging cargo of the kind in question was that instead of the consignee taking delivery at the ship's slings the goods were taken by deft.'s servants & tallied into a store, & were subsequently tallied out by deft.'s servants to the consignees; that a small charge was made by deft. for stacking the goods; that the package in question was tallied into the store but could not subsequently be found. In an action by pltf. for damages for loss of the goods:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to succeed.—KEANE v. AUSTRALIAN STEAMSHIPS PTY., LTD. (1929), 41 C. L. R. 484; [1929] V. L. R. 116; 2 A. L. J. 367; [1929] Argus L. R. 81.—AUS.

pltfs. had paid for the wheat, which in fact (as an allowance of 6*d.* a quarter for defective quality had to be made) was the same price, except for the parcel bought at 24*s.*, as that at which the pltfs. had resold it. The price of wheat generally, however, had fallen considerably between Aug. & Jan., & defts., who contended that good Roumanian wheat equal to the sample could be bought at about 20*s.* 3*d.* a quarter, moved in objection to the registrar's report. BATESON, J., held that although, if they had received the wheat, pltfs. could have sold it, they could not buy any wheat answering to the sample, & that to make a market there must be power to buy as well as to sell; there being no market, & therefore no market price, the price pltfs. had paid for the wheat & the price at which they had resold it afforded some evidence as to what its value was to them; no other measure would give pltfs. restitutio in integrum, & the motion in objection to the report failed. Defts. appealed:—Held: the appeal must be allowed, on the grounds (a) that the true measure of damages was the value of the goods at the date of the non-delivery, disregarding circumstances peculiar to pltfs.; & although in a proper case, if there be no market, sub-contracts might be put in evidence to show what was the value of the goods, in the present case the prices fixed by the Aug. contracts could not be relied on as any evidence of the value in Jan., when the price of all wheat had fallen; (b) that in an action against a shipowner for non-delivery of goods, whether there is, or is not, a market for those goods at the port of discharge, in the absence of notice to deft., the law does not take into account, in order to fix the actual value to pltfs., intermediate contracts entered into with a third party for the purchase or sale of the goods; & therefore, although pltfs. had in fact suffered a loss of 30*s.* a quarter, they were not entitled to restitutio in integrum; (c) that on the alternative claim in tort for damages for conversion (as to which MAUGHAM, L.J., was not satisfied that any right of action existed) the measure of damages was the same; (d) that on the evidence the value of the wheat at the date of non-delivery should be taken to be 23*s.* 6*d.* a quarter.—THE ARPAD, [1934] P. 189; 103 L. 3873a. Rain—No cargo available.]—Under the terms of a berth contract a steamer was to proceed to one, two or three places on the Danube & there load a full & complete cargo of wheat &/or grain. The berth contract provided that the cargo was to be loaded at a certain rate & that "should any time be lost whilst steamer is in a loading berth owing to work being impossible through rain . . . the amount of actual time so lost during which it is impossible to work owing to rain . . . to be added to the loading time. . . . In calculating the extra time to be added to the lay days on account of interruptions by rain . . . periods of less than three hours shall be reckoned as quarter days." The charterers occupied in loading the steamer 3 days 20 hours beyond the lay days allowed for loading. Whilst the vessel was lying in loading berth in two ports ready to receive cargo rain occurred on certain occasions during working hours to an extent which would have made it impossible to load cargo into the ship had cargo been alongside. The total of the rainy periods amounted to two days. At the particular time when rain occurred the charterers had not booked cargo with shippers, although cargo was available in the port, & no cargo was alongside the ship at those times. In an arbn. the arbitrator held that the rainy periods, amounting to two days in all, were to be added to the lay days, notwithstanding that cargo was not alongside at such time, & that the shipowners were entitled to 1 day 20 hours demurrage. Upon the hearing of a special case MACKINNON, J., held that the work of loading had not been interrupted by rain, as the work of loading had not at that time commenced. The shipowners were therefore entitled to 3 days 20 hours demurrage. On appeal:—Held: the charterers, in order to bring themselves within the clause of the berth contract, must prove both that the work of loading cargo became impossible through rain & also that in consequence they lost time in loading. In the present case the charterers had not proved that the impossibility of loading owing to rain had caused them to lose time unloading.—BURNETT S.S. 3887a. ——.]—(1) A steamer belonging to pltfs. was chartered by defts. to take a grain cargo from Australia to Callao. The charterparty provided (inter alia) that discharge at Callao should be made at an average rate of 450 tons per weather working day, & that if the steamer should be longer detained demurrage should be payable at a rate calculated on her tonnage, which worked out to £65 per day. The [illegible] at Callao in due that port discharge could only be effected by the employment of stevedors who were members of a trade union which would not allow each man to do more than a limited amount of work per day & would not allow more than 80 tons per day to be discharged from any one hold. As the steamer had only four holds this rule of the union made it impossible to discharge more than 320 tons per day, although the charterparty required a rate of 450 tons. After discharge had proceeded very slowly for some days the captain made an arrangement with the stevedores that in consideration of an increased wage they would do more work, & by spending £123 in this way he saved the steamer two days' demurrage, which would have amounted to £130. In this action pltfs. claimed demurrage which had been actually incurred & also the £123 by which two days' demurrage had been avoided:—Held: the charterparty being one for discharge in a fixed time amounted to a guarantee by defts. that discharge would be completed within that time unless it was delayed by some fault of the shipowner, & as the idleness of the stevedores was not due to any fault of pltfs. demurrage was payable for the time occupied in discharge beyond the time allowed by the charterparty. Pltfs. must also recover the £123, the expenditure of which by the captain had saved demurrage amounting to £130, for which the defts. would have been liable.

(2) The charterparty incorporated the Australian Sea Carriage of Goods Act, 1924, which contains a provision identical with that of r. 3, Art. IV. of the English Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), as follows: "The shipper shall not be responsible for loss or damage sustained by the carrier or the ship arising or resulting from any cause without the act, fault, or neglect of the shipper, his agents or his servants." Defts. contended that as the idleness of the stevedores was not due to any act, fault, or neglect on their part they were protected by this rule: —Held: the rule did not abolish the old-established principle of law rendering the charterer liable for demurrage. — LEEDS SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. DUNCAN FOX & CO., LTD. 3909a. Agreement to surrender claim—Validity of contract.]—An Italian steamer, the P., was chartered by a German firm, Berlin Derunaptha, to bring seven cargoes of Russian oil from Batoum to Hamburg. A clause in the charterparty provided that any dispute arising under it should be settled by arbitration in London. Three voyages were made under the charter, & the P. arrived in due course at Batoum to load the fourth cargo on Oct. 7, 1932, & on the same day the master gave notice of readiness to load. On Oct. 8 the charterers told the master that they intended to load kerosene, which was not one of the kinds of oil specified in the charterparty. The master refused to allow kerosene to be loaded, & the owners supported him in his refusal. The charterers then raised an objection that the P. was unseaworthy & not fit to load any oil cargo whatever. Delay occurred in consequence, & finally on Oct. 28 the charterers offered to load if the ship would abandon all claims for demurrage. The master reported this to the owners, &, in reply, they cabled, without making any reference to demurrage, instructing him to give a fresh notice of readiness to load & to protest when loading was completed. On Nov. 3 the charterers induced the master to sign a document making him responsible for certain damages & expenses & agreeing to give up the ship's claim for demurrage. The shipowners, however, claimed demurrage; the dispute was referred to arbn. as required by the charterparty, & the umpire in the arbn. stated a special case for the opinion of the ct. on the question whether an alleged agreement between the parties expressed in [illegible] between the master & the charterers was a valid contract enforceable at law against the owners. On argument of the special case it was held that whether the letters did or did not constitute a contract there was no consideration, & therefore, if there was a contract it could not be enforced. The charterers appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: dismissing the appeal, per SCRUTTON, L.J. & GREER, L.J., the letters relied on by the charterers did not in terms show a concluded agreement, & if they had shown such an agreement it could not have been enforced against the shipowners because the master had no authority to make it on their behalf, & there was also no consideration for it; per SLESSER, L.J.: the letters relied on did not show that the parties were ever ad idem, but if they had shown an agreement the master had sufficient authority to make such an agreement & there was good consideration for it.—PORTOFINO TANK STEAMER OWNERS v. BERLIN DERUNAPTHA (1934), 39 Com. 3920a. —— "Per working hatch."]—A charterparty on a modified Form A of the Chamber of Shipping Welsh Coal Charter, 1896, provided that a coal cargo was to be taken from alongside by consignees at the port of discharge at "the average rate of 125 tons per working hatch per day." A marginal note or memorandum stated that consignees were not obliged to take cargo at a higher rate than 500 tons per day. Despatch money was to be payable at the rate of £15 per day. The cargo, which consisted of about 4,600 tons of coal, was loaded in unequal portions in four holds. In a dispute between the shipowners & charterers as to the method of calculating the lay days & the consequential payment or non-payment of despatch money:—Held: the term in the charterparty "working hatch" denoted a hatch which could be worked because there was cargo in the hold underneath it waiting to be discharged; the charterparty provided for discharge at the average rate of 125 tons per each working hatch per available day & not 500 tons per day for the whole ship; when in the ordinary course one hold became empty the rate of discharge from the remaining holds remained at 125 tons & was not proportionately increased; & the lay days were in the circumstances easily ascertainable by simply dividing by 125 the number of tons of coal in the hatch which contained the largest quantity of cargo.—THE SANDGATE, [1930] P. 30; 99 L. loading ore for the charterers. The time for loading was to count from 6 a.m. after the ship was reported & ready, & in free pratique (whether in berth or not) in accordance with the above provision. Lay days were not to commence before June 10, 1934, unless loading commenced sooner. The steamer arrived at her loading port on June 8, 1934, & was cleared & in free pratique, & notice given of readiness to load on the same day. There was no customary loading berth available until June 18, when in fact the loading began. The question was whether, having regard to the above provisions, the ship's loading lay time began at 6 a.m. after she arrived at the port or not until she came on turn :—Held : the ship's loading laytime commenced at 6 a.m. after she arrived at her loading port.—MOOR LINE, LTD. v. MANGANEXPORT G.m.b.H., [1936] 2 All E. The charterers were nearly five days late in giving orders as to the port of loading, but they saved 7¼ days in loading :—Held : clause 9 covered all references to time in the preceding clauses, &, as the steamer had spent a shorter time on her visit to the Danube than she might have taken under the charterparty, nothing was payable by the charterers to the shipowners either as demurrage or as damages for detention.—SOCIETA LIGURE DI ARMAMENTI v. JOINT DANUBE & BLACK SEA SHIPPING AGENCIES OF BRAILA (1931), 47 T. 4026a. —— Insistence on special mode of discharge by consignee.]—Under several bills of lading, which incorporated all the terms of two charterparties in identical terms, pltfs. contracted to carry on board their vessel certain timber consigned to the respective defts. from a Norwegian port to the port of Garston. Under the charterparties the vessel was to " proceed to Garston or so near thereto as she may safely get " ; &, by clause 13, the cargo was to be discharged in the customary manner " on to the quay &/or into lighters &/or craft &/or wagons &/or on to bogies & thereon stowed &/or stacked as customary at the port of discharge, the consignees having the right to select any one or more of these alternatives if customary & available at the time of discharge." Owing to congestion at Garston dock the L. M. & S. Ry. Co., the owners of the dock, informed pltfs.' agents that the co. were unable to accept any vessels for which storage accommodation was required for any material portion of their cargo, but that they could accept vessels where the whole cargo could be discharged into main line railway wagons & sent direct from ship to destination. When the ship arrived off Garston dock defts. refused to agree to this method of dischgear & alleged that the customary method of discharge for cargo destined for Garston itself was into " domestic " wagons which took the timber to the storage ground for sorting &/or storing. Ultimately, to put an end to the deadlock, the railway co. arranged to take the timber to another storage ground at Widnes, ten miles away. Pltfs. claimed demurrage or alternatively damages for the detention of their vessel. The judge of the Liverpool Ct. of Passage found for defts. on the ground that defts.' insistence that the timber should be sorted & stored was not a breach of their contract. Pltfs. appealed :—Held : defts. had no right to claim that they were entitled to store the timber on the railway co.'s ground at Garston ; it appeared that the respective consignments of timber could be, & in fact were, delivered without sorting ; &, as main line wagons were available, defts. were liable in damages for their breach of contract in preventing the ship arriving in her discharging berth on the date when but for their insistence on having their timber stored the railway co. would have admitted the ship into dock.—THE VARING, [1931] P. 79 ; 100 L. 4208a. Loss caused by pier—In order to save ship & cargo.]—By Rule A. of the York-Antwerp Rules, 1924, " There is a general average act when, & only when, any extraordinary sacrifice or expenditure is intentionally & reasonably made or incurred for the common safety for the purpose of preserving from peril the property involved in a common maritime adventure." Rule 5 is in these terms : " Voluntary Stranding. When a ship is intentionally run on shore, & the circumstances are such that if that course were not adopted she would inevitably drive on shore or on rocks, no loss or damage caused to the ship, cargo & freight, or any of them, by such intentional running on shore shall be made good as general average."

A steam vessel, laden with a cargo of coal, anchored three or four lengths from a pier. During a gale she began to drag, her port cable parted, & she dragged closer to the pier & was unable to get head to sea & steam away. The master feared that if he let the vessel drag ashore she would lose her propeller & possibly break her back ; & she was so close to the pier that if she attempted to turn head to sea there was danger of striking the pier with her stern & damaging the propeller. The master accordingly decided to put the ship broadside against the pier, using it as a lever to get the ship's head into such a position that he could steam out to sea. While carrying out this manœuvre the vessel was grinding against the pier & also bumping upon the ground, & damage to the extent of over £14,000 was occasioned to the pier & the ship. The shipowners claimed that this sacrifice was incurred in the course of a general average act & that they were entitled to a contribution from the insurers of the cargo :— Held : although the vessel bumped on the ground there was not a voluntary stranding within the meaning of rule 5 ; there was an extraordinary sacrifice intentionally made ; the action was reasonably taken ; & there was a general average act in respect of which pltfs. were entitled to contribution.—THE SEAPOOL, [1934] P. 53 ; 103 L. During loading at Bordeaux the foremast broke, & damage was done to the ship. For the purpose of repair she was moved to another dock within the port, & the shipowners incurred expenses as follows : wages & provisions of crew, cost of handling & discharging cargo for the purpose of repairs, cost of coal consumed in going in & out & keeping steam up, expense of towing in & out & mooring & port expenses, & cost of coal consumed in shifting the vessel. While staying at Bordeaux the ship was in no danger. On completion of repairs & loading she left for Cardiff, & while she was at sea she fouled some wreckage without any negligence of those on board her, & though there was no immediate danger she

Constantza, & for a declaration that the sum deposited on joint account in respect of freight should be paid out to them by the bank. Defts. contended that by going to Constantza to bunker the steamer had deviated from the contract voyage & the charterparty contract had thereby been destroyed & the claim for general average contribution could not be maintained. As to the sum claimed for freight, defts. admitted that it was due, but they counterclaimed for short delivery in respect of the cargo which had been jettisoned. It was admitted that Constantza was not on the direct geographical route from Poti to Sparrow's Point, but at the material time it was a regular practice for oil-burning steamers leaving Black Sea ports on ocean voyages to call at Constantza for bunkers because large supplies of cheap oil were there available. The action was tried by GODDARD, J., who delivered a reserved judgment granting both the declarations claimed by pltfs. :—Held : (1) upon the evidence, at the material time Constantza was on the ordinary commercial route for oil-burning steamers from Black Sea ports & therefore there had been no deviation from the contract voyage ; & (2) if pltfs. had not been able to prove that Constantza was on the ordinary commercial route the deviation clause in the charterparty would not have been sufficient to allow the steamer to go to Constantza to bunker.—REARDON SMITH LINE, LTD. v. BLACK SEA & BALTIC GENERAL INSURANCE CO., LTD. 4295a. Effect of deviation.]—Pltfs. were owners of an oil-burning steamer which was chartered to go from Genoa to Poti, a Black Sea port, to load a cargo of manganese ore & take it to Sparrow's Point, near Baltimore, U.S.A. The charterparty provided (inter alia) that general average should be payable according to York-Antwerp Rules, 1924, & that a guarantee for cargo's liability for general average contribution should be given by the defts. It also provided that the steamer should have liberty to call at any port or ports, in any order, to bunker. The steamer loaded the cargo at Poti & then went to Constantza to take in oil fuel for the Atlantic voyage, & at Constantza she stranded on a reef. To enable her to be refloated part of the cargo was jettisoned, & when she was moved into the harbour it was found that extensive repairs were necessary. The repairs were carried out, & by arrangement between the parties the voyage to Sparrow's Point was abandoned & the cargo which remained on board was taken to Rotterdam. The jettisoned cargo had been lost & the receivers at Rotterdam refused to pay freight on it, & in consideration of pltfs.' waiving their lien on the remainder of the cargo & giving delivery of it defts. paid a sum of £1,061 14*s.* 4*d.* into a bank to a joint account of themselves & pltfs. Pltfs. brought this action for a declaration that defts. were liable to them for a general average contribution due from the cargo in respect of the stranding at 4304a. —— Signing average bond—Application of York-Antwerp Rules as to amount payable.]—In June, 1931, pltf. as owner chartered a steamship, the S., to an Australian co. to bring a cargo of wheat to one of certain specified ports in Europe. The S., in the course of the voyage, met with bad weather & suffered damage which necessitated her putting into Durban as a port of refuge, & there she incurred general average expenditure & other charges. After repairs had been executed the voyage was resumed, & the S. finally reached Hull, which was one of the optional ports of discharge, on Oct. 21, 1931. Defts. had purchased part of the cargo on July 22, 1931 ; the purchase was made by an ordinary c.i.f. contract in which nothing was said about general average ; defts. did not see either the charterparty or the bill of lading & had no notice of any terms relating to average contained in them. When defts. claimed delivery of their wheat the ship would not part with it until defts. signed an average bond by which they agreed to pay their proper proportion of general average & other charges "to be ascertained & adjusted in the usual manner." In fact, by the charterparty & the bill of lading the shippers had agreed that general average if any should be settled according to the York-Antwerp Rules, 1924, & pltf. contended that defts. were bound by that agreement.

Defts., while admitting that they were bound to pay something for general average, contended that by the bond which they had signed they were only liable for the sum which would be payable at common law & not for the larger sum which would be payable under the York-Antwerp Rules, 1924. Pltf. brought this action to recover the latter sum:—Held: as the delivery order under which defts. obtained their wheat was expressed to be subject to the conditions & exceptions in the bill of lading, & defts. in the average bond had undertaken to pay general average or other charges which might be chargeable on their consignment or to which the shippers or owners of their consignment might be liable to contribute, upon a true construction of the average bond defts. had undertaken to pay general average settled according to the York-Antwerp Rules, 1924.—THOMSON v. MICKS LAMBERT & Co. 4313a. —— —— —— ——.]—A steamship belonging to pltfs. was chartered to carry a cargo of grain from various ports in the River Plate & to deliver the same at Antwerp or Rotterdam. The charterparty provided that average, if any, was to be payable according to York-Antwerp Rules, 1924. It also contained an exceptions clause which provided that the steamer should not be liable for loss or damage occasioned " by fire from any cause or wheresoever occurring . . . or any latent defects in hull, machinery or appurtenances . . . arising in the navigation of the steamer, even when occasioned by the negligence, default or error of judgment of the . . . master, mariners or other servants of the shipowners . . . (not resulting, however, in any case from want of due diligence by the owners of the steamer, or by the ship's husband or manager)." The steamer bunkered at Rotterdam, where she took on board enough bunker coal to take her to the Plate & bring her back to Europe. She carried a cargo of coal from Cardiff to a port in the Plate & was kept waiting a fortnight before she could get into her berth to discharge that cargo. Shortly after she had arrived at her first loading port in the Plate & had commenced to load a cargo of maize a fire broke out by spontaneous combustion in her bunker coal, which had been on the ship for two & a half months since June 30, & had been carried through the tropics, & a portion of the bunker coal was shifted on to the deck. The ship then proceeded to another port in the Plate to complete loading her cargo of maize. On the way another fire was discovered in the bunker coal, which was extinguished after a fortnight & after discharging all the bunker coal on to the deck & subsequently replacing it in the bunkers. The owners of the steamer claimed to recover from defts., who were the indorsees of the bills of lading in respect of the cargo of maize, a contribution in general average for the expense so incurred:—Held: (1) the unexplained occurrence of the fires afforded a reasonable presumption that they were due to a defect or unfitness of the bunker coal at the time of the loading of the cargo which amounted to a breach of warranty, & as the ship was unseaworthy pltfs. could not recover a general average contribution from the cargo owners for sacrifice due to their own fault & breach of contract; (2) neither the exception in the charterparty of latent defects nor Rule D of the York-Antwerp Rules, 1924, which provided that a claim in general average was not to be barred because it arose by the default of the carrier, enabled pltfs. to maintain their claim for a contribution in general average.—FIUMANA SOCIETÀ DI NAVIGAZIONE v. BUNGE & CO., LTD., [1930] 2 K. 4313d. —— —— Improper abandonment.]—Pltfs. were the owners of a steamer which was chartered to bring a grain cargo from the Black Sea to Falmouth. Defts. became indorsees of the bills of lading & owners of the cargo. The steamer met with very severe weather in the Bay of Biscay & suffered damage which rendered her unmanageable. In reply to an S.O.S. call another steamer came up & took off the crew, but owing to the state of the weather it was impossible to salve pltfs.' steamer & she was left derelict in the Bay. Subsequently, the weather having moderated, she was picked up & salved. In a salvage action an award was made under which defts. were obliged to pay £8,303 to the salvors, their contribution as owners of the cargo. Pltfs. had incurred general average expenses & claimed from defts. £1,288 odd as cargo owners' contribution to such expenses. Defts. did not dispute that they must make some contribution to general average expenses, but they counterclaimed a sum sufficient to extinguish pltfs.' claim for £1,288, on the ground that the steamer had been unnecessarily & improperly abandoned, & that if the crew had stayed on board & done their duty the eventual salvage award would have been very much smaller:—Held: (1) on the facts, the state of the weather & the damaged condition of the steamer justified the abandonment, so that the contention that the steamer had been improperly abandoned failed; (2) obiter, even if the abandonment had been improper pltfs. would have been protected, against any claim arising out of it, by an exceptions clause in the charterparty which excluded liability of the shipowners for loss resulting from the act, neglect, or default of their servants in the navigation or management of the ship.—BULGARIS v. BUNGE & Co., LTD. 4395a. —— —— —— ——.]—Resps., pltfs. in the action, as owners, chartered a steamer, the R., to charterers to bring a cargo from Oporto to Heysham. The charterparty provided (inter alia) that the cargo should be taken from alongside at the merchant's risk & expense, & that it should be delivered at Heysham in the manner customary at Heysham. The cargo was shipped under a bill of lading which incorporated the terms of the charterparty, & applts. became indorsees of the bill of lading. The port of Heysham belongs to the L.M.S. Ry. Co., & all the operations of discharging cargoes at the port are performed by the ry. co. The only practicable method of discharge is from the ship direct into wagons on railway lines at some distance from the edge of the quay. Except on one occasion the whole cost of discharging cargoes at Heysham had hitherto been borne by shipowners without objection, but in this case resps. contended that the railway wagons into which the cargo was placed were not "alongside" within the meaning of the charterparty, & that therefore applts. as receivers should repay to them a proportionate part of the sum which they paid to the railway co. to cover the whole cost. of discharge. Applts. refused to pay anything towards the cost of discharge, contending that by the custom of the port of Heysham the whole of the cost was payable by the shipowners. Resps. brought an action in the county ct. at Preston to recover the sum claimed, & obtained judgment; & applts. now appealed. The ct. dismissed the appeal :—Held : as the charterparty had expressly provided that the cargo should be taken from alongside at the merchant's expense, & the wagons on the railway lines into which the cargo was placed were too far away from the ship to come within the term "alongside," applts. must pay a proportionate part of the cost of discharge.—DALGLEISH STEAM SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. WILLIAMSON & SON, LTD. 5124a. —— Onus of proof.]—Pltf., cargo owners, contracted with a firm of wharfingers for the collection & transport of pltfs.' goods from one wharf on the River Thames to another. The wharfingers, who to pltfs.' knowledge owned neither tugs nor lighters, contracted with a firm of lighterers for the transport, & they in turn contracted with the defts. for a tug. Pltfs.' contract with the wharfingers was on the terms that the latter co. should not be liable for any neglect of its servants or others for whom it might be responsible, & that " persons supplying tugs or barges to the co. to enable it to fulfil its contracts shall incur no greater liability to the co.'s customers than that of the co. hereunder." The wharfingers' contract with the lighterers was on the terms of the London Lighterage Clause. It contained an exception in respect of damage arising from negligence, & further stated that the lighterage rates were quoted on the condition that the person with whom the contract was made was either the owner or the authorised agent of the owner of the goods intended to be carried. The lighterers' contract with the tug owners was on the usual towage terms containing a similar exemption from liability for negligence & also an indemnity clause. Pltfs.' goods, while on board one of the lighterers' barges, which with others was in tow of the tug, were damaged through the barge colliding with one of the abutments of Cannon Street Railway Bridge. Pltfs. brought an action against the tug owners, framing it entirely in tort. There being a primâ facie case of negligence against the tug, pltfs. called no evidence on this point, & defts. called one witness only, the master in charge of the tug, who did not see the actual contact but heard the blow & saw the barge " flared out," owing, in his opinion, to the breast rope not having been properly made fast by the lighterers' servants :—Held : (1) there was no greater probability that the accident happened through negligence on the part of the tug owners' servants than on the part of the lighterers' servants, &, following Lord DUNEDIN'S dictum in Ballard v. North British Ry. Co. (1923), S. C. (H. L.) 43, 54, that " if the defenders can show a way in which the accident may have occurred without negligence . . . the pursuer is left as he began, namely, that he has to show negligence," pltfs. failed on the issue of fact ; (2) assuming that a case of negligence was made out, there was a limited authorisation in each step of the negotiations that the contractor could reserve that the people with whom he in turn contracted should have the like exemptions from liability for negligence as the first contractor obtained, & pltfs. could not rid themselves of the exempting provisions by framing their action in tort.—THE KITE, [1933] P. 154 ; 102 L. 5133a. " Whilst towing."]—Under a contract of towage a tug was engaged to assist a ship from a wharf to buoys further down the river. The precise time at which the towage was to begin was not defined, but it was intimated that the tug should be in attendance about 11 a.m. About 10.55 a.m. the tug arrived ; but she was travelling too fast, failed to reverse her engines in time, & struck the ship. At the time of the collision the ship had not finished discharging ; those on board her were not ready to give orders to pick up towing ropes ; & those on the tug were not expecting such orders & were only concerned in trying to avoid the collision. The tug owners contended that the collision happened " whilst towing," within the meaning of that phrase in the conditions of the contract of towage (the U.K. Standard Towage Conditions) under which it was admitted that the tug would be exempt from liability. In clause I. of the conditions the meaning of the phrase " whilst towing " is stated as follows : " For the purpose of these conditions the phrase " whilst towing " shall be deemed to cover the period commencing when the tug is in a position to receive orders direct from the hirer's vessel to pick up ropes or lines or when the tow rope has been passed to or by the tug, whichever is the sooner. . . ." :—Held : the Towage Conditions had not begun to apply ; it would be putting an unreasonable construction on the words to hold that the collision occurred " whilst towing " merely because the tug was within hailing distance & therefore physically " in a position to receive orders direct from the hirer's vessel to pick up ropes " ; even if regarded solely from the tug owners' point of view, the tug must at least be in a position to receive & comply with the orders ; but the conditions ought to be read with reference to both parties, & until the reasonable moment had come at which orders might be expected to be given from the ship the tug could not be said to be " in a position " to receive them.—THE URANIENBORG, [1936] P. 21 ; 105 L. 5140a. —— When towage commences—More than one tug.]—The B., a tug belonging to pltfs., the Port of London Authority, came into collision with defts.' steamship C. C. in Tilbury Dock. The B. & another tug, the S., which also belonged to pltfs., were under contract to tow the C. C. from lock to berth. The S. was made fast ahead of the C. C. & was towing her, & the B. was proceeding to the C. C., which had passed through the lock into the dock when the B. was struck by the revolving propeller of the C. C. The collision was entirely due to the improper way in which the B. was handled through those on board not realising that the C. C. had twin screws. The dockmaster had given the appropriate signal for the C. C. to come ahead on her main engines, & it was not disputed by pltfs. that it was the universal practice of all ships navigating through the dock to use their main engines & that no complaint about such use had ever been made by pltfs. They contended, however, that defts. had committed a breach of bye-law 19 of the Port of London Dock Bye-laws which provides that " no person shall work, or cause to be worked, the propelling engines of any ship in the dock for any purpose except with the previous consent of the dock-master, & at such time & place & in such manner as he shall approve. Penalty £5." " Such consent is only to be given (if at all) on the terms that the person on whose behalf the application for the same is made will be responsible for all damage caused by working such engines & will indemnify & save harmless the Authority & its officers against all claims in respect of such damage." Pltfs. further contended that by clause 4 of the towage contract defts. agreed to pay for any damage to any of pltfs.' property, including the tug or tugs engaged in the towage, which might arise from collision even if caused or contributed to by the negligence of any servants of pltfs. Defts. contended that clause 4 did not apply inasmuch as under clause 1 the towage was " deemed to commence when the tow rope had been passed to or by the tug." Pltfs.' reply was that the towage was to be done by two tugs & that it commenced when one of the tugs, namely the S., had started towing:—Held: bye-law 19 did not apply at the time in question, but, even if it did, defts. did not commit a breach of it because the consent of the dock master to use the engines had been given; the towage contract could be fairly interpreted as meaning that the towage should be deemed to have commenced when the tow rope had been passed to each of the two tugs, & that until that had been done the ordinary provisions of the common law applied to the rights & duties of each party; & accordingly defts. were entitled to succeed on the claim & counterclaim.—THE CLAN COLQUHOUN, [1936] P. 153; 105 L. 5146 1. Liability for negligence.]—The owners of the P. contracted with a towing co. to have the P. towed from her berth to a grain elevator to unload her cargo. The P. had no motive power. Owing to the breaking of the tow line at one stage of the movement the P. continued her forward movement past the elevator & reached the south end of the harbour where the S. was laid up, puncturing the latter under the water line, by an anchor left hanging down on the port bow of the P. partly under water. This anchor was left so hanging down by those on the tow notwithstanding a warning by the tug master:—Held: (1) when commencing the towing of a ship her anchor is left, by the joint negligence of the tug master & those in charge of the ship, in such a position as to constitute a danger to other vessels, & does in fact cause such damage, the tow & tug are each responsible & liable for the damages so caused; (2) when a vessel at anchor or moored at a dock is run into by another, the onus is upon the moving vessel to justify or excuse her action; (3) towage is a joint undertaking, & although the motive power may be wholly that of the tug, yet both tug & tow are bound to take reasonable care & to use reasonable skill in performing the operation. This duty is not affected by the term of the towage contract, which cannot regulate the relations between the tug & tow & third parties; (4) persons on board the tow such as a shipkeeper & his helpers, though not a regular navigating crew, in regard to reasonable care & skill, may be treated as agents of the owners of the ship in performing or neglecting to perform such duties as the towage contract or the exigencies of the operation casts upon them; (5) provision in a towage contract that the operation is at " owner's risk " will not absolve the tug in case of negligence in navigation so far as third parties are concerned.—CANADA S.S. 5401a. —— Portland Harbour—Vessel "about to enter"—Collision in one of the "channels between the breakwaters."]—Rule 5 of a schedule to an Order in Council relating to the Port of Portland (1931, No. 176) provides that "When any vessel or vessels are about to enter from seaward any of the channels between the breakwaters, no vessel proceeding outward by the same channel shall enter this said channel until the before mentioned vessel, or vessels, shall have passed in."

A collision between the R., an outward bound submarine in command of deft., & pltfs.' vessel P. inward bound, took place in the North Ship Channel entrance to Portland Harbour, slightly to the southward of mid-channel & about 200 to 300 feet outside of a line drawn between the breakwaters. It was argued for deft. that r. 5 did not apply, inasmuch as a vessel "about to enter from seaward" one of the channels meant a vessel going to enter the water which might reasonably be taken to be included in the word "channels"; & that the P. was never in a position of being "about to enter," which implied that she must so approach as to indicate clearly her intention to enter, whereas, instead of "shaping up" at a proper distance to enter the channel, she was cutting the corner & then had to make a turn of five or six points :—Held : (1) the collision took place in what might fairly be called one of "the channels between the breakwaters"; taking r. 5 as a whole, its purport was not to lay down how vessels should or should not approach the harbour, but to lay down in clear language that the outgoing vessel should be the give-way vessel; & accordingly the R. was to blame; (2) the vessel with the right of way was not in the position of a "keep course & speed" vessel under the crossing rule; the P. having a bad look-out, &, considering the fine angle at which she was approaching the breakwater, too high a rate of speed, was also to blame. Both vessels accordingly held to blame in the proportions of two-thirds to the R. & one-third to the P.—H.M. SUBMARINE RAINBOW, [1933] P. 68; 102 L. J. P. 61; 149 L. T. 357; 18 Asp. M. L. The M., a dumb hopper loaded with spoil, had been moored alongside a dredger in Blackwall Reach, River Thames. Her after moorings were cast off, & she commenced to swing with the tide, being still made fast forward by her forward moorings. She was exhibiting one white riding light forward & one white riding light aft. In these circumstances the D., a steamship bound up-river, came into collision with the M.:—Held: (1) the M. was not a vessel under way; (2) in any case the M. was probably a "lighter" within the meaning of the Port of London River bye-laws 1914–26, & was not required to carry side lights when under way, & no lights were laid down by the bye-laws for her to carry; (3) the M., being moored to the dredger, which was moored to buoys, was herself moored & bound to exhibit two white riding lights in accordance with bye-law 14; (4) the D. was alone to blame for the collision.—THE DAGMAR (1929), 141 L. 5608b. —— Dumb barge.]—Pltfs.' steamship S. was lying moored at a tier on the south side of the River Thames. Defts.' dumb barge P. was lying inside of the S. & attached to her by ropes fore & aft. When the work of receiving cargo from the S. ceased for the day the P. was left alongside the S. unlighted & unattended. The S. was exhibiting the usual anchor light. During the night some unknown craft came into collision with the P. & she filled & sank, &, as the tide ebbed, the S. rested on the submerged hull of the P. & both vessels were damaged. Under bye-law 14 of the Port of London River Bye-laws, a vessel under 150 feet in length "when at anchor or moored" by night must exhibit a riding light; but by proviso (a) to the bye-law: "Where masted vessels are lying made fast at the moorings in the tiers, only the outermost off shore of such vessels in each tier shall be required to exhibit the riding light"; & by proviso (c), ". . . Lighters made fast at wharves, piers or jetties or alongside vessels thereat, shall not be required to exhibit the riding light":—Held: (1) it was not negligent to leave the P. unattended; but (2) not being a masted vessel nor made fast to a vessel at a wharf, pier or jetty, the P. could not bring herself within either proviso (a) or (c); accordingly there was nothing to take her out of the obligation imposed upon her under the main part of the bye-law to exhibit a riding light; (3) as defts. could not prove that the absence of the light was not a cause of the collision with the unknown craft, they failed to discharge the onus upon them, & there must be judgment for pltfs.—THE PRINCESS, [1929] P. 287; 98 L. Immediately afterwards the steamship ported her helm, &, in attempting to cross the bows of the barque, was struck on the port side by the bowsprit & stem of the barque & sank with all hands except one:—Held: the exhibition of the green flare by the barque was not a breach of Article 12; the green flare was intended simply to attract attention, & did not call upon the steamship to do anything except that which it was her duty to do when she saw a sailing vessel approaching with lights green to green; & the steamship, by improperly porting, was alone to blame for the collision.—ALCANTARA, S.S. Pakeha, bound up-river on the flood tide, sounded the appropriate signal under bye-law 28 (e), hard-a-starboarded her helm, & put her engines full speed astern. When she had swung two or three points the anchor was let go with thirty fathoms of chain & was reported to be holding. Her navigation lights were then switched off, the anchor lights switched on & the bell commenced to be rung for fog. The engines had then to be worked half ahead & full speed ahead for about a minute & a half to avoid a small vessel at anchor, & were then put full speed astern for about a minute & then stopped. About ten minutes after the anchor had been let go, & when the Pakeha had nearly swung head to tide, she was run into by defts.' steamship. Defts. alleged (inter alia) that the Pakeha was a vessel under way & turning in the river, & required, therefore, to continue sounding the signal of four short blasts followed by two:—Held: following the criterion laid down in The Esk, The Gitana, No. 5521, as the Pakeha was holden by & under the control " of her anchor during all the time in question, she was not " under way," & was right in ringing her bell, the appropriate signal for a vessel at anchor in a fog.—THE PALEMBANG, [1929] P. 246; 98 L. 5666a. Duty of ship hearing signals—Whether alteration of course justifiable.]—Two steam vessels, the H. & the G., came into collision in a fog. Both had headway at the time of the collision & were to blame for excessive speed in fog & for not stopping when they first heard the fog signals of the other vessel forward of their beam. The G. had been sounding a succession of two prolonged blasts (the signal prescribed by Art. 15 (b) of the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea to indicate that she was stopped in the water), when in fact she had substantial headway, & the case for the H., which had meanwhile stopped her engines, was that this signal justified her in altering course &, although she still had headway, in putting her engines slow ahead again:—Held: before altering course in fog every precaution ought to be taken to ascertain that the vessel blowing the two blast signal, a signal which is frequently unreliable, is really stopped & not altering the bearing or getting nearer; from the sound of the blasts blown by the G. it should have been apparent that she was getting nearer & not really stopped; accordingly the H. was to blame for going on again & altering her course; & both vessels were to blame in equal degrees.—THE GASTELU, [1934] P. 86; 103 L. The fact of the aircraft being in the air with only a limited supply of petrol was not a circumstance which justified the aircraft carrier for failure to comply with the regulations.—H.M.S. 5748a. —— —— Meaning of " ascertained."]—In order that the position of a vessel whose fog-signal is heard by another vessel may be " ascertained " within Art. 16 of the Regulations for the Prevention of Collisions at Sea, the vessel must be known by the other vessel to be in such a position that both vessels can safely proceed without risk of collision. An inference as to the vessel's position, based upon the direction from which the fog-signal was heard, the probable course which she is taking, & the improbability of her crossing the fairway in a fog, is not an ascertainment justifying a disregard of the precautions enjoined by the above article. Implicit obedience to the Regulations, upon which navigators are entitled to rely, is of great importance.—NIPPON YUSEN KAISHA v. CHINA NAVIGATION CO., LTD., [1935] A. C. 177; 104 L. J. P. The B., a large liner going down Channel in a dense fog at a speed of about 4 knots, heard, on the starboard side about abeam or a little abaft it, the fog whistle of the steamship B. G. After the whistle had been heard four or five times more, getting louder & nearer & apparently still on the same bearing, the master of the B. decided that he must act. He accordingly starboarded & increased his engine power to assist the helm. The B. G. then came into sight 100 to 150 yards away on the starboard side, crossing the bows of the B. from starboard to port, & the two vessels came into collision :—Held : (1) the main cause of the collision was the bad navigation of the B. G. (inter alia) in altering her course in fog, proceeding at excessive speed, & failing to stop on hearing the whistle of the B. forward of her beam.

The conclusion on the authorities is that in fog, unless the vessel hearing a whistle is quite clear that to continue course & speed will not involve risk of collision, she should always stop her engines (per CUR.).

(2) The B. was also partly to blame, inasmuch as the fact that the fog signals of the B. G. were getting louder & nearer on the same bearing was a clear indication of danger, & that accordingly good seamanship required the B. to stop after hearing the second or third blast, when those on board would know for certain that the other ship was approaching & causing risk of collision. Both vessels accordingly held to blame, the B. G. to the extent of 80 per cent. & the B. 20 per cent.—THE BREMEN, [1931] P. 166 ; 100 L. J. P. 122 ; 145 L. T. 565 ; 47 T. L. R. 505 ; 18 Asp. M. 5779a. —— ——.]—The battleship M. came into collision with the steamship K. in foggy weather. The whistle of the K. was heard by those on the M. & was judged to be 10 deg. to 15 deg. on the port bow & a long way off. The engines of the M. were stopped for about four minutes, during which time two or three more fog signals were heard. The ship's head fell off to starboard & the engines were then put ahead again. A few minutes later, the whistle having been heard several times on an estimated bearing of 15 deg. to 20 deg. or possibly 25 deg., the captain of the M., having come to the conclusion that the K. was on an opposite course & would pass port to port, made further substantial alterations to starboard, as the sound of the K.'s whistle was getting rather close & he wanted to give her more room. In fact, however, the K. was on the starboard bow of the M., & the starboard wheel action on the M., instead of terminating the risk of collision, brought it about. When the vessels came in sight of each other at a distance of about 500 yards the M. was on the starboard bow of the K. & the K. was on the port bow of the M. At that time the K., which had not heard the M.'s fog syren until just as the M. came into view, was proceeding at about 11 knots & the M. at about 7 to 8 knots :—Held : (1) the look-out on the K. was inefficient, since the marked deterioration in visibility shortly before the collision was not noticed, & both vessels were to blame in respect of their speeds ; (2) the M. was also to blame for altering course, because, although there is no rule that when two vessels are approaching one another in fog the course should not be altered, a vessel is not justified in altering without reasonable grounds for concluding that the position of the other vessel is ascertained ; that the only data known to those on the M. were that the bearing of the whistle signals of the K. appeared to be one or two points on the port bow & broadening slightly, but that it was only a guess as to the direction of approaching whistle signals two to four miles away with a strong head wind blowing, & the guess was in fact erroneous.—MALAYA, H.M.S., [1937] P. 179 ; 106 L. 5891a. ——.]—Two steam vessels, the S. & the K., while on courses crossing one another at the fine angle of 8 degrees, sighted each other's lights at a distance of several miles. The S. first sighted the masthead light of the K. fine on the starboard bow, & afterwards, as the K. was yawing considerably, saw both her sidelights. The K. had the masthead & green lights of the S. open to her a little on the port bow, & the Elder Brethren were of opinion that there must have been times also when, although those on board the K. denied seeing it, the red light of the S. must also have been open. The S. crossed on to the starboard bow of the K., & having got into a position of green light to green light altered her course to starboard, rendering a collision imminent. The K., which up to that time had kept her course & speed, then went full speed astern & hard-a-ported her helm (old command). LANGTON, J., held that art. 18 applied, & that while the S. was to blame for porting & hard-a-porting when the vessels were green to green & for not sounding any whistle signals, the K. was also to blame for not at an earlier stage altering her course to starboard so as to pass port to port, & he accord-

5757 i. When duty arises—Vessel approaching.]—The question whether vessels approaching one another in a fog should not merely stop their engines but also their way, or reverse their engines, must be decided under the circumstances of each case. In the present case it was held that the H., which did not reverse her engines immediately after hearing the second whistle of the A., did not "navigate with caution," within the meaning of art. 16 of the Collision Regulations, after, at least, she heard that whistle & thereupon should have realised that as it showed no indication of broadening the danger was imminently increasing.—OLSEN & CO. When still a long way off pltfs.' vessel wrongly starboarded & showed her green. Defts.' vessel then kept her course & speed, & the vessels approached close together, green to red. Not more than one minute before the collision, defts.' vessel sounded a short blast & hard a-ported, & afterwards before the collision stopped & reversed; pltfs.' vessel blew a short blast in reply, but by some mistake starboarded instead of porting, though, if she had ported, there would have been no collision:—Held: defts.' vessel was bound under Art. 21 of the Sea Regulations, 1897, to keep her course & speed until the other vessel could not by her own action alone avoid the collision.—THE ORNEN (1900), 79 L. The O., the stand-on vessel, had the K. M. broad on the port bow at a distance of several miles. As the bearing of the K. M. did not alter, the O., when the vessels were under three-quarters of a mile apart, hard-a-starboarded to pass under the stern of the K. M. & sounded two short blasts. Twenty or thirty seconds afterwards the K. M. hard-a-ported & sounded one short blast, & the two vessels came into collision less than three minutes after the alteration of course by the O. It being admitted that the K. M. was partly to blame for the collision, the question was whether the O. was also to blame:—Held: the master of the O. was justified in acting when he did, but not in starboarding & maintaining his speed. He ought, first of all, to have stopped & reversed his engines &, in addition, whatever action he took should have been under a port helm:—Held: both vessels were to blame.—KITANO MARU S.S. Two small steam vessels, the M. & the L. B., on courses crossing so as to involve risk of collision, took no measures at all to keep clear of each other & came into collision. The M., which had the L. B. on her own starboard side & consequently under art. 19 had to keep out of the way, admitted that she was partly to blame, but contended that the L. B., on her own pleadings, was also to blame, as it was admitted that she merely kept her course & speed from first to last. The L. B. attempted to justify taking no measures under the note to art. 21 on the ground that up to the last moment the M. could have avoided the collision, & that in keeping her course & speed the *L. The C. was heading for the Inner Automatic Buoy, & the K. was northward & westward of the buoy, each showing her red light to the other, until the K., almost immediately after passing the buoy, altered her course suddenly, showing her green light on the port bow of the C. which would be about half to three-quarters of a mile S.S.E. of the buoy, & in attempting to cross the bow of the C. was struck as aforesaid. The K. gave no signal of her intention to change her course:—Held: as the vessels were travelling red to red, the K. by altering her course without justification, & especially without signalling the C. her intention to do so, & in attempting to cross the C.'s bow, thus creating a danger of collision, violated Arts. 19, 22, 23, 27 & 29 of the International Rules of the Road, & was guilty of mismanagement & bad seamanship, & was solely to blame for the collision which occurred. — THE CAVELIER v. LIVERPOOL [illegible] Co., [1931] Ex. fact taking the action which would best aid to avert collision:—Held: although the exact moment when the stand-on vessel must act under the note must not be unduly pressed against her, it would render the note nugatory to say that she can be excused from taking any action at all; that at a very late stage the action of taking the way off the L. B. would have averted the collision, & that she also was to blame in the proportion of three-fourths to the M. & one-fourth to the L. B.

While it may be desirable in particular cases to sound a warning blast or blasts to attract the attention of a vessel which apparently is taking no steps to keep out of the way (& it would have been a wise precaution if the L. B. had done so), it is not the ordinary practice of seamen to sound whistle signals for which no provision is laid down in the Regns., & accordingly it is not negligent to omit to sound the whistle in such circumstances.—THE LADY BELLE, [1933] P. 275; 102 L. 5958a. —— Channel between line of buoys & open sea.]—By the practice of pilots navigating in & out of the Thames estuary, steam vessels rounding the N.E. Spit buoy from the southward to proceed up river pass outside the buoy at a sufficient distance to the northward to enable an outward bound vessel to pass between them & the buoy port to port. Two steam vessels, the A., inward bound, & the T., outward bound, got into collision about 400 yards to the northward of the buoy. The T., which had the A. on her own starboard side, &, therefore, under the crossing rule (Art. 19) had the duty to keep out of the way, alleged that the narrow channel rule (Art. 25) & not Art. 19 applied, & that the A. was to blame for being too close to the buoy & for not keeping to her own starboard side of the channel, the southern limit of which was the buoy. LANGTON, J., held that it was impossible to apply Art. 25 to waters which were defined only by one or more buoys & which had on the other side the whole of the North Sea; Art. 19 applied, & the T. was to blame for not keeping out of the way. He found, however, the A. also to blame, not for having been set down by wind & tide closer to the buoy than she had intended, but under the Note to Art. 21, which provides that when the vessel which has the duty of keeping course & speed under the crossing rules "finds herself so close that collision cannot be avoided by the action of the giving-way vessel alone, she also shall take such action as will best aid to avert collision"; & in the result the T. was held three-fourths to blame & the A. one-fourth. On appeal:—Held: (1) the crossing rule & not the narrow channel rule applied; (2) the practice did not exclude the crossing rule, but was in fact the direct consequence of the group of rules of which Art. 19 was one; for, by Art. 22 the vessel which is to keep out of the way "shall . . . avoid crossing ahead of the other," &, if she does not cross ahead, she will ultimately pass port to port; (3) on the facts it appeared that with close navigation there was room for the T. to pass between the A. & the buoy, but (4) if there was not room, although a vessel ought not as a general rule to pass inside a channel buoy, the T., whose draught enabled her to do so, should, to avoid immediate danger, have gone inside the buoy; (5) up to the time the A. acted the T. could easily have avoided the collision by her own unaided action, & the T. was alone to blame.—THE TREHERBERT, [1934] P. 31; 103 L. By bye-law 41: "Any regulations for preventing collisions at sea for the time being in force, under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts, shall be deemed to apply to the port, & shall be construed as if the following bye-laws, Nos. 42 to 52 (inclusive), were added thereto, & the entire fairway shall be deemed to be a narrow channel." The interpretation clause prefixed to the said bye-laws defined "fairway" as "the space within the port for the time being reserved as a highway for vessels in motion." In 1916 the Harbour Comrs. issued a "Description of Fairway," para. 6 of which was as follows: "From the eastern limit of the inner man-of-war anchorage to the White Point Buoy there are two fairways—the northern fairway & the southern fairway. The northern fairway is bounded on the north by an imaginary line from 20 fathoms south of Copper Point Buoy to the western end of Queenstown Deep-water Quay, & thence towards White Point House until Rushbrooke Church bears N.W. by W.½W., & thence to White Point Buoy showing a fixed white light, & on the south by the line of Admlty. battleships' mooring buoys. 6163a. Vessel turning—Duties of other vessels—Both to blame.]—By Article 40, r. 3, of the Scheldt Bye-laws a vessel turning in the river must give the appropriate signal, & every vessel in the vicinity ("proche") proceeding against the tide must stop her way over the ground, & every vessel proceeding with the tide must slacken her speed, until the vessel turning no longer presents any obstacle "au passage."

Applts.' steamship C., a collier, bound up the Scheldt with the tide, had ahead of her the steamship A., which sounded the appropriate signal, that she was going to swing to get head on tide. Resps.' vessel B., one of the Harwich & Antwerp mail boats, was coming down the river at her full speed of 14 knots. She saw the lights of the C. coming up astern of the A., & when she got down towards the A., which was blocking about half of the navigable waterway of some 1,000 feet, she saw the lights of the C. coming under the stern of the A. on the B.'s side of the waterway. The B. kept her speed until about one minute before the collision when she slowed, &, about half a minute afterwards, stopped & went full astern. The President absolved the B. from blame for the ensuing collision on the ground that Article 40, r. 3, did not apply to her under the circumstances, as there was ample waterway for her on her own proper side of the river under the stern of the A. He held that the B. was justified in keeping her speed "until her master saw that there was an element of risk in the turning movement of the A. combined with the oncoming of the C. but before that risk had developed." He held the C. alone to blame for over-starboarding into the water of the B. & for not sounding a signal that she was starboarding. The owners of the C. appealed :—Held : Article 40, r. 3, is directed, not to the moment when the approaching ships get up to the turning ship, but to the time when they are coming towards her & do not know where she may be when they get up to her ; the ship coming against the tide cannot excuse herself by saying that when she arrived in the vicinity of the turning ship there was in fact room for her to pass ; (per GREER, L.J.) r. 3 is a regulation for the purpose of ensuring the safety of vessels navigating the river at the time the turning movement is taking place quite as much as it is directed to the safety of the turning vessel herself, & that the rule has to be applied until the turning vessel no longer presents any obstacle "au passage" ; & (per CUR.) while the C. was to blame, the B. was also to blame for keeping her speed & not stopping & reversing her engines until the risk of collision was apparent. Decision of the President varied by holding both vessels to blame in equal degrees.—THE "CHATWOOD," [1930] P. 272 ; 100 L. J. P. 1 ; 143 L. T. 735 ; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 165, C. A.

6165a. Vessel tying-up.]—Defts.' vessel A., while tying-up to the bank in the Suez Canal to allow pltfs.' vessel B. to pass, was exhibiting three clusters of lights which, under the Canal regulations, should only be exhibited when the operation of tying-up is completed. The A., however, was still exhibiting an arc lamp which should not be extinguished until the tying-up is completed, & she was also exhibiting her masthead lights &, until a moment before the collision, her starboard side-light. Her lights, therefore, were more consistent with her not being finally tied up than with that operation being completed so as to enable the B. to pass in safety. In answer to pltfs.' allegation that they were misled by the lights, defts. contended that if the B. had kept a better lookout she would not have been misled :—Held : the mere fact that if the B. had been keeping a better lookout, she might have appreciated the situation sooner, was not sufficient to exonerate defts. ; the burden was on defts., who had broken, not indeed one of the International Regulations, but a rule of an accepted code laid down for Canal pilots, to prove not only that the breach ought not to have misled the B., but that it did not in fact mislead her ; & the ct., being of opinion that the B. was to some extent misled, found the A. one-fifth to blame, & the B., which was coming too fast & took drastic helm & engine action causing her to sheer into the A., four-fifths to blame.—THE AENEAS, [1935] P. 128 ; 104 L. 6121 iii. —— In narrow channel —Check signal.]—Where a vessel is overtaking another in a narrow channel such as the Welland Canal & signifies her desire to pass by blowing one blast, but receives no reply, she is bound to wait, & not attempt to go forward so as to affect the overtaken vessel until permission is obtained. Rule 29 of the Rules of the Road for the Great Lakes is imperative, & overrides the General Rules which deal with conditions not covered expressly by said Rule.

The "check" signal is not recognised by the Great Lakes Rules, & its meaning & effect can only be determined by the circumstances under which it is given & received.—SINCENNES-MCNAUGHTON LINES v. "STEEL CHEMIST," [1928] Exch. C. R. 182.—CAN.

Duty to give sound signal.]—By Art. 34 of Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914, steam vessels crossing the river "shall do so at a proper time having regard to vessels navigating up & down the river, & shall be navigated so as not to cause obstruction, injury, or damage to any other vessel."

Pltfs.' steamship D., which had been at anchor head down on the north side of the river waiting to cross over to the south side to enter the Surrey Commercial Docks, was proceeding to work slowly across the river under port helm. In this position only her stern light was visible to defts.' steamship B., which was coming down the river to the south of mid channel. The B. sounded a short blast to a tug coming up the river & the D. sounded two short blasts & starboarded her helm a little. As the D. got more athwart the river she opened her green light to the B., which thereupon reversed her engines & dropped both anchors, but her stem came in contact with the starboard quarter of the D. :—Held : although a crossing vessel had not the duty, as she had under the old Thames Bye-laws of 1898, of keeping out of the way of vessels navigating up & down the river, Art. 34 did not give her the right of way, but specially put upon her the obligation of care both as to the time when she crossed & the way in which she crossed : the D. ought to have given ample warning either by means of a long warning blast or preferably a short blast to indicate that she was crossing the bows of the B., or have taken timely action to allow the B. to pass if there was not room to cross ahead of her ; & the D. was alone to blame.—THE BORS, [1926] P. 5 ; 95 L. I. Vessel leaving Dock.

212a. St. Katherine's Docks—Sufficiency of signal.]—Bye-law 26 of the Port of London River Bye-Laws, 1914-21, provides that "A steam vessel coming out of dock or leaving a wharf or tier shall signify the same by a prolonged blast of the steam whistle, except in the case of a vessel coming out of the St. Katharine Docks requiring the bascules of the Tower Bridge to be raised in order to get into position in the river which shall signify the same by a prolonged blast of the steam whistle followed by three short blasts in rapid succession."

Defts.' steamship having, on the flood tide, come stern first out of the lock of the St. Katharine Docks into the Upper Pool of the Thames, was in collision with the pltfs.' steamship. When entering the lock defts.' steamship sounded a signal of one long blast followed by three short blasts, & this signal she twice repeated as she passed through the lock & into the river. It was contended for pltfs. that she ought in addition to have sounded the prolonged blast mentioned in the first part of bye-law 26 :—Held : the framers of the bye-laws must have had in mind that almost the only occasion when a vessel leaving St. Katharine Docks would require the bascules of the Tower Bridge to be raised was when she was coming out of the docks stern first on the flood tide & so would need all the room she could obtain in which to turn head down river ; the combination of one long blast & three short blasts conveyed a warning to those whom it might concern that a vessel was leaving the dock & in doing so coming astern ; if the bye-law required a vessel in those circumstances also to sound the general warning signal of a prolonged blast prescribed in the earlier part thereof, it followed that she must also, while going astern, sound three short blasts if & when any other vessel in the crowded reach came in sight ; & such a series of blasts would be wholly unnecessary & lead to confusion, & defts.' steamship was right in sounding only a signal of one long & three short blasts.—THE FALCON (1931), 47 T. L. R. 621.

J. Vessel at Anchor.

6212b. Barge dropping down river on anchor—Under-way lights shown.]—While defts.' sailing barge was dropping down the River Thames on the tide the anchor of the barge fouled the chain of a dredger lying just above Battersea Bridge. The barge continued to exhibit the regulation side lights & stern light for a sailing vessel under way. About half an hour afterwards, the master of pltfs.' tug, which was coming down the river with six barges in tow, saw the red light of the sailing barge & thought that she was under way & about to pass through the bridge. In attempting to avoid the sailing barge, when it was realised that she was foul of the dredger, the tug & one of her craft in tow struck the bridge & received damage. Bye-law 5 of the Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914-34, provides that "the expression 'under way,' when used in relation to a vessel, means when she is not at anchor, or moored, or made fast to the shore, or aground, & includes a vessel dropping up or down the river with her anchor on the ground." Bye-law 14 provides that "a vessel under one hundred & fifty feet in length when at anchor or moored shall, by night exhibit forward . . . a white light. . . ." :—Held : the sailing barge was "at anchor or moored" within the meaning of bye-law 14, & ought to have taken in her side lights & put up an anchor light, & she was alone to blame.—THE CURLEW, [1937] P. 30 ; 106 L. 6212c. Lights not sufficiently visible.]—This was a claim by the owners of the Greek steamship N. against E. W.'s Line Limited, of Hull, owners of the steamship T., for damages in respect of a collision which occurred about abreast of Shellhaven Point, Sea Reach, River Thames, on a clear but dark night, at about 2.30 a.m. on Dec. 12, 1936. The N., with no pilot on board, was at anchor ; the T., in charge of a fully-licensed Trinity House pilot, was proceeding down-river on a voyage from London to Hull. Pltfs.' case was that the N., having failed to find a pilot off the Tongue Light Vessel, had proceeded up the river in the wake of another vessel, whose pilot had undertaken, by wireless, to lead the N. to a safe place of anchorage ; that when the N. was about abreast of Holehaven

Creek the pilot on board the other vessel had sent a wireless message to the N. telling her to drop anchor there & promising to return in a couple of hours to pilot the N. to London Docks; that the N. thereupon immediately dropped her starboard anchor, she being then about 300 yds. off Holehaven Creek & stemming the ebb tide, put out her navigation lights & posted her anchor lights, which thereafter burned brightly. About ten minutes before the collision those on board the N. observed the red light of a vessel which proved to be the T., about a mile distant & bearing on the N.'s port bow. The T. came on, but instead of passing the N. portside to portside as she could & ought to have done, the T., with her stem & port bow, struck the N.'s port bow, doing damage. Defts.' case was that the T. was proceeding down the river at full speed & doing about twelve knots over the ground. After passing West Blyth buoy on her starboard side at a distance of about 150 ft., the T. set a course of E. ½ S., which was maintained until just before the collision, & on that course she proceeded down Sea Reach well on the southern side of mid-channel. When about half a cable away, those on board the T. descried the loom of the N. about ahead, & very shortly afterwards a faint light was seen. Although the wheel of the T. was hard-a-starboarded & her engines were put full speed astern, the T.'s port bow struck the port bow of the N., whereby the T. sustained considerable damage. As the T. then scraped along the port side of the N., it was observed that some of the N.'s portholes appeared to be very dimly lit. Defts. denied liability & blamed pltfs. for the collision, alleging that the N. was improperly anchored in the fairway & was not exhibiting the anchor lights required by the Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914–1934. The learned judge having found as a fact that the N. was not lying where she said she was, but was anchored well in mid-channel about abreast of Shellhaven Point:—Held: even if the N.'s lights were visible at a cable's distance, as the evidence called on behalf of defts. appeared to establish, this was in flagrant breach of bye-law 14 of the Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914–1934, which required that anchor lights should be clear & visible all round the horizon at a distance of at least one mile; the failure of those on board the T. to descry such lights as the N. had before they did, did not amount to a bad look-out, & in the circumstances there was no negligence on the defts. for not having avoided the collision. Pltfs. were accordingly alone to blame.—THE TRENTINO (1937), 157 L. T. 70.

433a. —— ——.]—Pltfs., as owners of the barge H., brought an action in the Mayor's & City of London Ct. against the owners of the barge V. in respect of damage sustained by the H. in Milton Creek, River Swale, through coming in contact with the V.'s anchor, which was admittedly being carried in an improper position, with the stock projecting over the bows, in breach of one of the Milton Creek bye-laws. But for the position of the anchor, the use of fenders would have avoided damage to either vessel. The judge held that the master of the H. knew of the position of the anchor & took the risk of coming in contact with the V. when the rush of the flood tide swung the H., which was aground, athwart the creek & into contact with the V. lying moored on the opposite bank. He found that the master of the H. was negligent in not taking measures to avoid coming in contact with the V., &, on the authority of The Monte Rosa, No. 6430, which he thought was in conflict with The Dunstanborough, No. 6429, gave judgment for defts. 6453a. Collision with vessel at anchor.]—Pltfs.' vessel C. at anchor in London Reach, River Thames, was run into by defts.' vessel E. proceeding up the river. The C. had her anchor lights exhibited, but she was lying nearly athwart the river with her whole length to the north of mid-channel in such a position that she was obstructing a large part of the fairway. The practice in Long Reach, according to the evidence, was for vessels to anchor to the south of mid-channel, & for large vessels proceeding up & down to pass to the northward. Defts.' case was that the C.'s lights were defective, & that those on the E. only saw the dim forward anchor light, & immediately afterwards the hull, of the C. about 650 feet away. The ct. found, however, that the lights were effective & that they were, or should have been, seen at a considerably greater distance than 650 feet ; but that the failure of those in charge of the E. to identify the lights as anchor lights in time to avoid the collision was partly due to the C.'s improper & unexpected position in the river in a locality where bright lights on the north shore would probably make it more difficult to pick up her lights, & partly to the fact that those on the E., which had a speed of at least 10 knots, were not sufficiently alert as to the possibility of danger ahead :—Held : (1) the E. was to blame, inasmuch as those in charge of her on seeing the lights should have realised the possibility that they were those of a ship or ships ahead the precise position of which was obscure, & should have reduced the speed of the E. immediately ; (2) the C.'s negligence in anchoring in an improper position contributed to the failure

6455b. —— ——.]—This was a claim by the owners of the motor barge C., which was towing their dumb barge F. up-river in the Thames, against the owners of the steamship R. for damage suffered by the F. in a collision with the R. which occurred on the night of Apr. 4, 1935, opposite the Royal Albert Dock, which the R. was waiting to enter. Pltfs. contended that as the C. was proceeding up-river with three barges in tow laden with cement, the R. which was waiting to enter the Royal Albert Dock but which was moving slowly down river & was angled across it, struck the F., the port hand barge in tow of the C., doing her so much damage that she had to be beached to avoid sinking in deep water. Defts. denied liability & said that the R. was not moving; she was stemming the tide & not altering her heading; they contended that the C. was alone to blame for the collision in that, instead of passing the R. on the starboard side, the C. tried to pass ahead of the R. from starboard to port, & although the starboard engine of the R. was immediately put full speed astern, the C. having got her craft across the tide was unable to regain control of the barges, with the result that the F. fell across the stem of the R. At a later stage in the hearing & after the conclusion of the evidence, defts. applied for leave to amend the defence by alleging that the C. failed to give any sound signal of her intention to alter course so as to pass the R. port to port. The amendment was allowed:—Held: in a reserved judgment, the governing fact of the collision was that the R. was moving down river & trailing across to the northward while her head was falling off to port; she was swinging from time to time & straddling across the water. The R. was to blame for bad look-out, for going across into the northern water when she ought to have been held steady in the channel if she were going to remain there at all, & for not taking timely steps to assist the C., which, owing to the action of the R., had to go closer to the north shore than she originally intended; further, the C. was also to blame for not letting the R. know by sound signal what she was doing & for substantially contributing to the collision thereby. The blame was apportioned as to two-thirds on the R., & as to one-third on the C., the judge directing that the costs of the action should follow the event in the same proportion.—THE ROTORUA (1936), 155 L. 6628a. —— Detention due to collision—Owner unable to use ship owing to contract during period of detention.]—On Mar. 12, 1927, resps.' steamship suffered damage by a collision with applts.' steamship, for which the applts. admitted liability. The damage did not render resps.' vessel unseaworthy, & she continued trading without effecting repairs. While she was so trading her owners by a memorandum of agreement dated Dec. 21, 1927, contracted to sell her. The agreement set forth that the vessel was "due London on Dec. 24, thence H. & A., expected ready for delivery between, say, Jan. 10 & Jan. 31, & to be delivered to buyer at Antwerp or a U.K. port at seller's option, but not later than Feb. 25, 1928, subject to buyer's approval afloat & to bottom examination in dry dock, as specified in Clauses 4 & 5 of this contract . . . 4. The buyer shall commence the inspection of the steamer afloat within twenty-four hours of receiving notice of steamer's readiness for inspection, & if on superficial inspection the buyer is satisfied with the general condition of the steamer, seller shall at his own risk & expense open up the engines, boilers & tanks for the inspection of the steamer afloat by the buyer. . . . The buyer shall declare acceptance or refusal of the steamer in writing within twenty-four hours after completion of such inspection afloat . . . 5. For examination of bottom &/or other water parts &/or tailend shaft, seller agrees to put the vessel into dry dock. . . ." The steamship arrived at Antwerp on Jan. 10, 1928, & her owners gave notice to the buyer of her readiness. On Jan. 16 they proceeded to open up the vessel's engines, boilers & tanks for inspection, & while the vessel was in that condition & therefore unable to trade, they took the opportunity to effect the repair of the collision damage, which was of such a nature that it could be repaired while the ship was afloat. The repairs admittedly occupied four days, & were completed on Jan. 24. Subsequently the vessel was put into dry dock for bottom examination. On the reference to assess the damage caused by the collision resps. claimed (inter alia) loss & expenses in respect of four days' detention while their ship was undergoing repairs:—Held: inasmuch as resp. shipowners had entered into contractual obligations which prevented them from trading with the vessel & earning profits during the time when the repair of the collision damage was being executed, they had not suffered any loss by the detention of their vessel in consequence of the collision, & were therefore not entitled to recover from the wrongdoer.—THE YORK, [1929] P. 178; 98 L. 6653a. —— —— ——.]—A British battleship damaged by collision was put into a naval dry dock for her repairs. The ship's effective life was estimated at twenty years & she was under four years old at the time of the collision. In assessing the damages the registrar allowed nothing in respect of the use of dock & cranes, on the ground that the Admiralty had suffered no pecuniary expenses or loss, & in respect of the loss of use of the ship for fifteen days, the time estimated for the collision repairs, he allowed interest at 2½ per cent., on half the initial costs of the ship for the fifteen days. The Admiralty appealed:—Held: that the case must go back to the registrar for re-assessment, for (i) the ship occupied the dock & used the cranes, etc., to the exclusion of other vessels & some allowance, therefore, must be made to the Admiralty in respect of these items, & (ii) having regard to the estimated life of the ship, her annual depreciation & cost of maintenance, the amount awarded for detention appeared to have been computed on a wrong basis.—THE WEST WALES, [1932] P. 165; 101 L. 6671a. —— Although ship sold.]—Pltfs.' & defts.' vessels, while laid up, ranged against each other & each sustained slight damage. Before any action was brought both vessels were surveyed, but no estimate of the cost of repairs was made. Pltfs.' vessel was then sold to be broken up. Defts. afterwards agreed with pltfs. that the repairs, if executed, would cost £250, but no repairs were in fact done. Defts. contended that pltfs. had suffered no loss & were not entitled to any damages:—Held: (1) the mere facts that the vessel had been sold to shipbreakers, & that the repairs would never be carried out, did not discharge the onus, which was on defts., of proving that pltfs. had suffered no damage; (2) primâ facie the value of a vessel damaged in collision is less, by the cost of the repairs, than her value if undamaged, & the fact that a vessel has been sold to be broken up is an accidental circumstance not to be taken into account in the way of diminution of damages.—THE LONDON CORPORATION, [1935] P. 70; 104 L. 6694a. —— —— On special contract.]—While the dredger L. was lying moored alongside the breakwater at Patras Harbour in the Hellenic Republic the steamship E. fouled the dredger's moorings & carried her out to sea, where she sank & was lost. The owners of the E. admitted sole liability for the loss. In proceedings before the Admiralty Registrar & a Merchant between the owners of the L. & the owners of the E. to assess the damages it appeared that the L. had been bought in 1927 for £4,000 by her owners, who had spent a further £2,000 in bringing her to Patras. They were a syndicate of civil engineers. Under a contract with the Patras Harbour Comrs. they were engaged in constructive work in the harbour, for which a dredger was necessary & for which they were using the L. The contract provided for completion of the work within a specified time. Delay in completion involved payment of heavy penalties &, if prolonged, cancellation of the contract. The owners of the L. had staked their capital & credit on the successful result of the contract. The loss of the L. stopped the work &, being unable from want of funds to purchase any suitable dredger which was for sale, on May 4, 1929, they hired a dredger, the A., which was lying in harbour at Carlo Forte, Sardinia, to take the place of the L. The A. was more expensive in working than the L., & required the attendance of a tug & two hopper barges. The L. was sunk on Nov. 26, 1928. The A. got to work on the harbour on June 17, 1929. On June 30, 1930, Harbour Comrs. bought the A. from her Italian owners for £9,177, & on Sept. 5, 1930, they resold her to the owners of the L. for the same sum payable in instalments: —Held : the measure of damages was the value of the L. to her owners as a profit-earning dredger at the time & place of her loss; & that it should include :—

(1) A capital sum made up of (a) the market price on Nov. 26, 1928, of a dredger comparable to the L.; (b) the cost of adapting the new dredger & of transporting & insuring her from her moorings to Patras; & (c) compensation for disturbance & loss suffered by the owners of the L. in carrying out their contract during the period between Nov. 26, 1928, & the date on which the substituted dredger could reasonably have been available for use at Patras, including in that loss such items as overhead charges & expenses of staff & equipment & the like thrown away, but neglecting any special loss or extra expense due to the financial position of one or other of the parties.

(2) Interest upon that capital sum from Nov. 26, 1928.

11 i. —— No market for such ... of ship.]—On Aug. 14, 1926, a hopper digger barge belonging to the ... of the Clyde Navigation was sunk in collision with the s.s. Ronda, admitted that those in charge of her were solely to blame for the accident. In an action at the instance of the trustees, brought on Jan. 24, 1928, to assess & recover damages for (inter alia), the loss of the barge, it was proved that there was no market for such a vessel, so that the test of market value was not available. The Lord Ordinary awarded the pursuers the cost of a reasonably efficient second-hand hopper barge, & the cost of adapting it for their special purpose :—Held : the Lord Ordinary's method of assessing the value of the barge was not erroneous.—CLYDE NAVIGATION TRUSTEES v. BOWRING S.S. aid doing. At that time the *T. Pltfs. claimed salvage. Defts. denied that any salvage services were rendered, as the N. was under a statutory duty to go to the assistance of the T. B.; they alleged that the damage sustained was while she was performing that duty; that the only assistance requested—namely, to stand by, was not rendered; & that they already knew the course to steer to get out of the ice-field, but this last point was found against them. The value of the N., her cargo & freight, was alleged to be over £225,000; the value of the T. B. was agreed at £10,000:—Held: each separate item of the proceedings could not be isolated & regarded by itself & the whole of the circumstances must be taken into account; without quantifying the moral support given to defts. by the knowledge that the N. was coming to their assistance, pltfs. rendered a very definite salvage service, in the course of which the N. sustained considerable damage, in giving information that the T. B. would find clear water within twelve miles by steering E.; & the proper award was the sum of £2,000, of which, having regard to the damage, £1,500 would go to the owners of the N., £200 to the master & £300 to the crew.—THE TOWER BRIDGE, [1936] P. 30; 105 L. 5140a. —— When towage commences—More than one tug.]—The B., a tug belonging to pltfs., the Port of London Authority, came into collision with defts.' steamship C. C. in Tilbury Dock. The B. & another tug, the S., which also belonged to pltfs., were under contract to tow the C. C. from lock to berth. The S. was made fast ahead of the C. C. & was towing her, & the B. was proceeding to the C. C., which had passed through the lock into the dock when the B. was struck by the revolving propeller of the C. C. The collision was entirely due to the improper way in which the B. was handled through those on board not realising that the C. C. had twin screws. The dockmaster had given the appropriate signal for the C. C. to come ahead on her main engines, & it was not disputed by pltfs. that it was the universal practice of all ships navigating through the dock to use their main engines & that no complaint about such use had ever been made by pltfs. They contended, however, that defts. had committed a breach of bye-law 19 of the Port of London Dock Bye-laws which provides that " no person shall work, or cause to be worked, the propelling engines of any ship in the dock for any purpose except with the previous consent of the dock-master, & at such time & place & in such manner as he shall approve. Penalty £5." " Such consent is only to be given (if at all) on the terms that the person on whose behalf the application for the same is made will be responsible for all damage caused by working such engines & will indemnify & save harmless the Authority & its officers against all claims in respect of such damage." Pltfs. further contended that by clause 4 of the towage contract defts. agreed to pay for any damage to any of pltfs.' property, including the tug or tugs engaged in the towage, which might arise from collision even if caused or contributed to by the negligence of any servants of pltfs. Defts. contended that clause 4 did not apply inasmuch as under clause 1 the towage was " deemed to commence when the tow rope had been passed to or by the tug." Pltfs.' reply was that the towage was to be done by two tugs & that it commenced when one of the tugs, namely the S., had started towing:—Held: bye-law 19 did not apply at the time in question, but, even if it did, defts. did not commit a breach of it because the consent of the dock master to use the engines had been given; the towage contract could be fairly interpreted as meaning that the towage should be deemed to have commenced when the tow rope had been passed to each of the two tugs, & that until that had been done the ordinary provisions of the common law applied to the rights & duties of each party; & accordingly defts. were entitled to succeed on the claim & counterclaim.—THE CLAN COLQUHOUN, [1936] P. 153; 105 L. 5146 1. Liability for negligence.]—The owners of the P. contracted with a towing co. to have the P. towed from her berth to a grain elevator to unload her cargo. The P. had no motive power. Owing to the breaking of the tow line at one stage of the movement the P. continued her forward movement past the elevator & reached the south end of the harbour where the S. was laid up, puncturing the latter under the water line, by an anchor left hanging down on the port bow of the P. partly under water. This anchor was left so hanging down by those on the tow notwithstanding a warning by the tug master:—Held: (1) when commencing the towing of a ship her anchor is left, by the joint negligence of the tug master & those in charge of the ship, in such a position as to constitute a danger to other vessels, & does in fact cause such damage, the tow & tug are each responsible & liable for the damages so caused; (2) when a vessel at anchor or moored at a dock is run into by another, the onus is upon the moving vessel to justify or excuse her action; (3) towage is a joint undertaking, & although the motive power may be wholly that of the tug, yet both tug & tow are bound to take reasonable care & to use reasonable skill in performing the operation. This duty is not affected by the term of the towage contract, which cannot regulate the relations between the tug & tow & third parties; (4) persons on board the tow such as a shipkeeper & his helpers, though not a regular navigating crew, in regard to reasonable care & skill, may be treated as agents of the owners of the ship in performing or neglecting to perform such duties as the towage contract or the exigencies of the operation casts upon them; (5) provision in a towage contract that the operation is at " owner's risk " will not absolve the tug in case of negligence in navigation so far as third parties are concerned.—CANADA S.S. Another ship, the S., was also anchored near her. The P. knew these vessels were ahead but notwithstanding the fog came on without slowing, until her captain came on the bridge at G. The S. & the tug regularly sounded their bells, & the R. also carried her two mooring lights, but not quite disposed according to the rules, being on the same level. 5401a. —— Portland Harbour—Vessel "about to enter"—Collision in one of the "channels between the breakwaters."]—Rule 5 of a schedule to an Order in Council relating to the Port of Portland (1931, No. 176) provides that "When any vessel or vessels are about to enter from seaward any of the channels between the breakwaters, no vessel proceeding outward by the same channel shall enter this said channel until the before mentioned vessel, or vessels, shall have passed in."

A collision between the R., an outward bound submarine in command of deft., & pltfs.' vessel P. inward bound, took place in the North Ship Channel entrance to Portland Harbour, slightly to the southward of mid-channel & about 200 to 300 feet outside of a line drawn between the breakwaters. It was argued for deft. that r. 5 did not apply, inasmuch as a vessel "about to enter from seaward" one of the channels meant a vessel going to enter the water which might reasonably be taken to be included in the word "channels" ; & that the P. was never in a position of being "about to enter," which implied that she must so approach as to indicate clearly her intention to enter, whereas, instead of "shaping up" at a proper distance to enter the channel, she was cutting the corner & then had to make a turn of five or six points :—Held : (1) the collision took place in what might fairly be called one of "the channels between the breakwaters" ; taking r. 5 as a whole, its purport was not to lay down how vessels should or should not approach the harbour, but to lay down in clear language that the outgoing vessel should be the give-way vessel ; & accordingly the R. was to blame ; (2) the vessel with the right of way was not in the position of a "keep course & speed" vessel under the crossing rule ; the P. having a bad look-out, &, considering the fine angle at which she was approaching the breakwater, too high a rate of speed, was also to blame. Both vessels accordingly held to blame in the proportions of two-thirds to the R. & one-third to the P.—H.M. SUBMARINE RAINBOW, [1933] P. 68 ; 102 L. J. P. 61 ; 149 L. T. 357 ; 18 Asp. M. L. 8083a. —— Company managing barge under verbal agreement with lightermen.]—For the purposes of certain constructional work pltfs. supplied defts. with barges for the removal of soil. By the negligence of a bargee damage was done to a coffer dam, part of defts.' works, & in previous proceedings, pltfs. were held to be liable. The present action was brought under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503, to limit their liability to £8 for each ton of the ship's tonnage. Pltfs. had in 1916 formed a subsidiary co., Cory Lighterage, Ltd. & all lighters were transferred to the new co. & the men employed on them became employees of the subsidiary co. From 1917 the management of the subsidiary co. was carried on by the principal co. & in 1927 a notice was sent out that trading in the name of the subsidiary co. was to cease. The co. itself, however, continued to exist, & although all agreements with third parties were made with the principal co., all profits were credited to the subsidiary co. & all expenses, wages & the like were debited against it. There was not at any time any document in writing transferring the property or any rights therein from the subsidiary co. to the principal co. In these circumstances the question arose whether pltfs. were the "owners" or the charterers by demise of the barge within Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503, as amended by Merchant Shipping (Liability of Shipowners & Others) Act, 1900 (c. 32), s. 1, Merchant Shipping Act 1906 (c. 48), s. 71, & Merchant Shipping Act, 1921 (c. 28), s. 1 (2) :—Held : pltfs. were neither the owners nor the charterers by demise of the barge & were not entitled to limit their liability under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503.—Cory (William) & Son, Ltd. v. Dorman, Long & Co., Ltd., [1936] 2 All E. 1 i. — Reconstruction of collision—One party absent.]—E., the master of a steam ferry which had been involved in a collision with a coastal steamer, was summoned to appear before a Ct. of Marine Inquiry appointed to investigate the circumstances of the collision. After evidence had been entered upon, the ct. attended a reconstruction of manœuvres of vessels concerned in the collision. The reconstruction took place in E.'s absence, & without his knowledge. E. became aware of what had taken place before termination of proceedings before the Ct. of Marine Inquiry, but there was no evidence that he had communicated with his legal advisers in regard thereto. The ct. found that the collision was due to the negligent navigation of E., & indicated that he would be called upon to show cause why his certificate should not be dealt with. E. thereupon obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition to restrain further proceedings :—Held : the rule nisi must be made absolute on the grounds : (1) the reconstruction & the order of the ct. subsequent thereto involved a denial of natural justice to E. ; (2) the reconstruction, not being a mere view, amounted to evidence adduced otherwise than in open ct. ; it was not open to appct. to waive his rights as the inquiry was one in which the public was interested.—Re Court of Marine Inquiry, Ex p. Evans (1935), 52 N. " —— .]—Held: for the purposes of limitation of liability under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, s. 503, as amended by Merchant Shipping Act, 1906, s. 69, the words "engine room space" in sects. 78, 503 of the Act of 1894, & in r. 3 in Sched. II. thereto, mean the whole of the space occupied by the propelling power of a steamship, including the engine room space, &, accordingly, the proper method of calculating the tonnage of a vessel for the above purpose is to add to the net register tonnage, as shown by the ship's certificate of registry, the tonnage therein deducted "on account of space required for propelling power."—THE MILLIMUMUL (1929), 30 S. The vessel was subsequently libelled & sold in New Brunswick, Canada, & the proceeds of the sale were deposited in ct. for subsequent distribution. The mtgee. appeared & claimed that his mtge. should be preferred to the claim of materialmen:—Held: though by English law a maritime lien created by a foreign law, under circumstances which do not give rise to a maritime lien according to English law, is recognised; the priority which it will be given in the distribution of proceeds is treated as relating only to the remedy determined by the law of the forum at which the vessel is libelled & sold, the mtge. should be preferred to the claims of the materialman.—MARQUIS v. THE ASTORIA, [1931] EX. 8594a. —— Construction of special Act against company.]—By the Liverpool Dock Acts of 8 Anne & 2 Geo. 3, certain tonnage duties are payable to the dock co. on all vessels sailing with cargoes outwards or inwards, so as no ship shall be liable to pay more than once for the same voyage out & home. This is one entire duty imposed upon one entire voyage out & home, if there be either an outward or an inward cargo in such voyage, but without making any advance if there should be both.

Must we not suppose that the legislature intended to use these words in the sense in which they are commonly understood ; that is, as descriptive of a voyage commencing from & terminating in the country to which the ship belongs, or, as here, in some particular port of such country ? If the words would fairly admit of different meanings, it would be right to adopt that which would be most favourable to the interest of the public, & most against that of the co. ; because the co. in bargaining with the public ought to take care to express

8618a. Lighter sinking after being moved—Onus of proof.]—While pltfs.' lighter W. was loading cargo from defts.' steamship in the Royal Albert Docks defts.' servants moved the W. to another position, & she was left for the night moored alongside the quay & a little inside the stem & port bow of the steamship. On the following morning the W. was found sunk through water having entered her hull from an unknown cause. Pltfs. failed to establish any positive evidence of negligence, but they alleged that the fact that defts. had moved & remoored the W., & that she sank, raised a primâ facie case of negligence which defts. could only discharge by proof that the W. sank from a cause which they could not have avoided by the exercise of reasonable care:—Held: defts. were not insurers of the W.'s safety; they had no greater duty than to exercise reasonable care & skill in the handling & management of her; & having shown such care & skill they had discharged the burden upon them; further, assuming that the sinking of the W. afforded primâ facie evidence of negligence, defts.' suggestion that the leakage which caused her to sink was due to her condition as an old wooden barge was a reasonable suggestion; having shown a reasonable way consistent with the accident having happened without their negligence, they had shifted the burden of proof back to pltfs. to establish that it was the negligence of defts. which caused the W. to sink; & that accordingly the claim failed.—THE MULBERA, [1937] P. 82; 106 L. 8629a. —— —— No duty to disclose condition of berth.]—Pltfs.' steamship was damaged by lying in an uneven berth at a wharf owned by defts., a railway co. Defts.' harbour master at the wharf acted as ship's agent for pltfs. for the limited purposes of reporting the ship at the Custom House, paying the pilot, & providing the master with funds to pay the labourers discharging the cargo. Before pltfs. arranged to send the vessel to the wharf the harbour master had in writing informed them that the berths were "perfectly safe for steamers to lie aground." Defts. alleged that the vessel came to the wharf subject to printed conditions, known to the harbour master, whereby the railway co. did not represent, warrant or guarantee that the berths alongside the wharf were safe or suitable for the accommodation of vessels, & all vessels brought alongside remained at the sole risk of their owners & on the terms that the co. should "in no event whatever be liable for any damage . . . however caused to or suffered by any such vessel." The harbour master did not in fact know that the berth was defective:—Held: (1) even if the harbour master ought to have known of the defective condition of the berth, which was doubtful, it was not his duty to impart to pltfs. information, acquired as harbour master, which would be against the interests of defts. & of the harbour master to disclose; (2) the notice did not form part of the contract between pltfs. & defts., & afforded defts. no defence; & accordingly pltfs. were entitled to judgment.—THE HAYLE, [1929] P. 275; 99 L. 8632a. —— —— Whether loss recoverable from Harbour Board under Maritime Conventions Act, 1911 (c. 57), s. 1.]—Pltfs., the owners of the K. O., sued defts. the owners of the R., for damages arising out of a collision between the K. O. & the R. near the entrance to the Princes Half Tide Dock in the River Mersey. The owners of the R. pleaded that the R. had been ordered to leave the dock as & when she did by the officials of the Mersey Docks & Harbour Board. Pltfs. thereupon added the Dock Board as defts. The K. O. was lying at Princes landing stage, River Mersey; the R. was in the Princes Half Tide Dock, which is a little lower down the river than the landing stage. BUCKNILL, J., found on the facts that the K. O. left the stage before the R. was directed by the harbour-master to come ahead into the entrance, & absolved the K. O. from blame, but held both the R. & the Dock Board to blame on the ground that the employees of the Dock Board were co-operating with the master of the R. in bringing the R. out of dock into the river & did so at a time when, if either of defts. had had a better look-out, they would have seen that the K. O. had started away from the stage. He accordingly gave judgment for the K. O. against both defts. & dismissed the counterclaim of the R. against the Dock Board on the ground that the common law rule as to contributory negligence, & not the maritime rule of division of loss, applied. On appeal:—Held: (1) the K. O. was to blame for a bad look-out & for leaving the stage as & when she did, which (per SCOTT, L.J.) was at or about the same time as the R. began to come ahead through the entrance; the R. was also to blame because, after the direction to come ahead had been given, if she had been keeping a good look-out she would have seen the approaching K. O. & ought to have stopped her way & remained in the entrance; & the proportion should be two-thirds to the K. O. & one-third to the R.; (2) (per SLESSER & SCOTT, L.JJ.) that the directions of the dock-master were orders within the meaning of sect. 49; but (3) (per GREER & SCOTT, L.JJ., SLESSER, L.J., dubitante) the employees of the Dock Board at the time the direction was given were not negligent; (4) if, however, there was any negligence on the part of the Dock Board (per CUR.) the rule as to division of loss provided for in the Maritime Conventions Act, while applicable as between the K. O. & the R., did not apply to the Dock Board, & that, both the K. O. & the R. being negligent, on the application of the common law rule, the Dock Board would be entitled to judgment.

Per SCOTT, L.J.: the ordinary rule unless there is reason to depart from it, should be that costs should be divided in the same proportion as the liability.—THE ROCKABILL, [1937] P. 93; 106 L. J. 8683a. —— Responsibility of owners—Custom of port—Grimsby.]—Pltfs.' steam trawler, having sustained injury which necessitated repairs, was placed in a graving dock at Grimsby belonging to the London & North Eastern Ry. Co. for the purpose of being repaired by defts. (a local firm of ship-repairers) under a contract, by the terms of which the first dock dues were payable by pltfs. & subsequent dues by defts. In carrying out the repairs defts. removed certain of the trawler's bow plates, exposing the vessel to the necessity, when in the normal course of business the dock was refilled with water, of floating on her forward watertight bulkhead. Unknown to all the parties the said bulkhead had in its face three small rivet holes, & through these holes the dock water entered the trawler & caused her to sink & suffer damage. There was on board her at the time only a watchman employed by her owners, pltfs. Pltfs. claimed damages on the ground that it was an implied term of the contract that the repairers should safely keep the trawler during the execution of the repairs:—Held: defts. were entitled to judgment, for in the circumstances of the case there was no surrender of the trawler to the repairers for the purpose of the repairs, such as would have put upon them a special duty to take care, &, moreover, as regards trawlers in the public dock in question there existed a local custom that some one acting on the owners' behalf should inspect an exposed bulkhead & if necessary keep watch over the ship during the repairs.—THE REHEARO, [1933] P. 286; 102 L. J. P. 108; 149 L. T. 570; 49 T. L. R. 559; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 422.

8684a. Failure to light wreck—Limitation of action.]—Defts.' sailing barge sank & became an obstruction to navigation in the channel of the River Orwell within the limits of the Port of Ipswich, of which pltfs. were the port & harbour authority. Defts. wrote to pltfs. saying that they presumed pltfs. would take steps to raise the barge & that they (defts.) would pay the reasonable expenses. Pltfs. replied that they hoped to raise the wreck of the barge on the next spring tides, & they did so & moved the barge nearer to the shore. They negligently omitted, however, to put a light on the barge, & she was run into by a passing vessel, dragged further into the channel again, & damaged. Defts. refused to pay the expenses of raising the barge a second time &, more than six months afterwards, counterclaimed in respect of the damage the barge had received. Pltfs. alleged that in raising the barge they were acting in the exercise of their statutory duty under sect. 56 of Harbours, Docks & Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), &/or other public duties as the authority responsible for the conservation of the navigation of the river, & that the counterclaim, not having been brought within six months of the act complained of, was barred under sect. 1 of Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61):—Held: pltfs. were under no obligation to raise the barge, which they could have blown up or got some one else to raise; they raised her in pursuance of a contract made between the parties; the negligent act complained of was not done in the direct execution of any statutory or public duty; & the provisions of sect. 1 of Public Authorities Protection Act did not apply.—THE RONALD WEST, [1937] P. 212; 53 T. 8685 iii. ——.]—In an action of damages brought by a shipowner against harbour trustees for injuries sustained by his ship through being given a foul berth in their harbour, it was established that the berth in question was in a tidal river; that débris discharged into the berth from a sewer formed a mound on the bottom of the berth which was a danger to ships taking the ground at the ebb of the tide; that when dredging the berth defenders, in view of this tendency, made it their practice to dredge at the locus of the mound to a greater depth than at other parts of the berth, but that no regular system of examination existed; that the berth had in fact been dredged some three weeks before the ship arrived, but that no special precaution had been taken to ascertain its condition before assigning her to it:—Held: defenders had failed to establish that they had taken reasonable care to make sure that the berth should be in a safe condition for vessels using it; & accordingly, as the ship had been injured owing to the condition of the berth, defenders were liable for the damage occasioned by their negligence.—CORMACK (OWNER OF THE S.S. 8693a. Breach of covenant to maintain berth—Measure of damages.]—A corpn. which owned the bed of a river & the quays & berths alongside, leased one of the quays to a co. & undertook to keep (inter alia) the quay & river berths in good order & condition. While lying aground at the quay to which she had come to discharge a cargo for the co. pltfs.' vessel received damage owing to the defective state of the berth; &, in an action against the corpn. as first defts. & the co. as second defts., recovered judgment against both on the following grounds: (a) that the corpn.'s harbour-master knew that the ground alongside the quay was not safe & had taken no steps to put it right, & (b) that the co. were liable, because, although they did not know of the actual hard ridge which caused the damage, they knew that the berth was in a generally defective state, & took no steps to assure themselves that some repairs, which the corpn. had carried out, were satisfactory or to warn pltfs.' master that they had not done so. In a third party claim by the co. against the corpn. for an indemnity in respect of the damages & costs for which they had been rendered liable:—Held: the fact that the co. had not fulfilled their duty to pltfs. involved no breach of duty to the corpn.; the co. were entitled to rely on the covenant by the corpn. to keep the berth in good order; the resulting damage to the vessel for which the co. were liable flowed naturally from the breach of covenant; accordingly the damages were not too remote; & the indemnity claimed would include the solr. & client costs incurred by the co. in defending the action.—THE KATE, [1935] P. 100; 104 L. 8697a. Damage "in connection with" towage—What amounts to.]—Pltfs.' steamship with two tugs in the employ of defts., the Port of London Authority, fast to her, was proceeding from the Albert Dock to the Victoria Dock. Defts.' lock foreman had signalled to her to enter the narrow Cutting, some 300 feet long, between the two docks, but at about the same time he had signalled to another tug that she could enter the Cutting from the opposite end. In order to avoid collision with that tug the steamship put her engines astern, with the result that she got out of position & struck the walls of the Cutting, doing herself damage. Defts. relied on the terms of the towage contract, which contained a clause that the owners of the ship being towed or transported would "indemnify & hold harmless the Port Authority" against claims in respect of damage of any kind "arising in the course of & in connection with the towage or transport," & whether caused or contributed to by any negligence on the part of the Port Authority's servants:—Held: (1) the clause was not an indemnity against party & party claims, but only against third party claims; (2) the damage did not arise "in connection with" the towage or transport; & accordingly the shipowners were entitled to recover the amount of the damage caused by the negligence of defts.' servant.—THE CARLTON, [1931] P. 186; 100 L. 8715a. —— ——.]—Pltf., a lighterman, was in charge of a barge, which was being taken from a dock through a lock. The dock & lock were both the property of defts. While pltf. was navigating the barge under the orders & directions of defts., a rope attached to the barge broke & struck pltf., causing him personal injuries. Pltf. had no option to refuse to take the rope on board. Defts. relied on the terms of a notice, exhibited on the pierhead of the lock, to the effect that lightermen availing themselves of the facilities & assistance of defts.' servants must do so at their own risk, & upon the understanding that no liability whatsoever should attach to defts. or their servants for any injury from whatever cause arising to or by the craft or to or by any person on board thereof:—Held: the words of the above notice were primâ facie adequate to exempt defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, & the fact that pltf. was compelled to regulate the barge according to the directions of the dockmaster was in no way inconsistent with the fact that he was in the circumstances "availing himself of the facilities & assistance" of defts., & did not deprive defts. of the exemption afforded by the notice.—WICKETT v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1929] 1 K. 8732a. Survey by Lloyd's Register—Liability of individual surveyor—Negligence.]—Pltf., who was the owner of a yacht, requested the society known as Lloyd's Register to make a special survey of the yacht for classification. The society stipulated for freedom from liability, & the survey was conducted by two of the society's surveyors. Deft., who was one of these two surveyors, was responsible for the mainmast. The society certified that the yacht had been reported to be in a good & efficient state & that she had been classed as A1. In fitting out the yacht for sea pltf. found that the mainmast was rotten in places & wholly unfit for use, & he claimed damages from deft. for negligence & breach of duty :—Held : there was no privity of contract between pltf. & deft., & that independently of contract deft. owed to pltf. no duty of care or skill with regard to the survey, & therefore the action failed.—HUMPHERY v. BOWERS (1929), 45 T. 8755a. —— —— ——.]—The C. M. was requisitioned on behalf of the Crown in 1917 by a charterparty, which provided that the Crown should not be liable for marine risks, but should be liable for "all consequences of hostilities or warlike operations." Whilst so requisitioned, the C. M. sailed from New York in convoy, destined for Nantes, then a war base, but also an ordinary commercial port, with a cargo, 84 per cent. of which in weight was for the civil commissariat, & 16 per cent. in weight was for war purposes. She was the third ship in the second column from the port hand in the convoy, another vessel, the W. F., which admittedly was at all material times engaged upon & carrying out a warlike operation, being in the corresponding position on the port column. While the convoy was proceeding at night without lights the steering-gear of the C. M. suddenly broke down, she sheered seven points off her course & came across the bows of the W. F., by which she was struck & sunk. There was no negligence on the part of those on board the C. M. :—Held : (1) the arbitrator was entitled to find that the C. M. was at no material time engaged, upon or carrying out a warlike operation, notwithstanding a portion of her cargo consisted of war material ; (2) the loss of the C. M. was not the consequence of a warlike operation, inasmuch as the dominant & direct cause of the loss was the break-down of her steering-gear & her sheering off her course.—CLAN LINE STEAMERS, LTD. v. BOARD OF TRADE, THE CLAN MATHESON, [1929] A. 8746 i. Amount of compensation—Interest.]—The Crown, in Apr. 1918, pursuant to Order in Council passed under War Measures Act, 1914, requisitioned resps.' ship. The Exchequer Ct. of Canada fixed the compensation at $11,000 with interest thereon from date of requisition to date of judgment. The Crown appealed against the allowance of interest :—Held : the allowance for interest should be set aside. The right to interest does not depend on the income earning capacity of the property requisitioned. Where interest is allowed, it is on the ground of express or implied contract or by virtue of a statute ; & no such ground existed here. Interest was really asked for here as damages for detention of the compensation money pending the ascertainment of what was due ; & as such it could not be recovered.—R. v. MACKAY, [1930] S. C. At that time she was lying partly submerged, at Kingston, a derelict hulk of no value, & claimant refused to take delivery thereof :—Held : on the facts, the question of hire disappeared, & that the controversy resumed itself into a question of compensation for the value of the vessel so appropriated, as at the date of the requisition thereof, & not for the profits that could have been made out of the vessel during the period of requisition.—MACKAY v. R., [1928] Exch. 8763a. —— Spontaneous combustion—Use as submarine tender.]—The Admiralty requisitioned resps.' steamer on the terms of charterparty T.99, by which the Admiralty undertook the risk of damage from "all consequences of hostilities or warlike operations," & which provided that if the working of the steamer was suspended owing to deficiency of men & stores, breakdown of machinery, or any other cause, the hire should cease until the steamer was again ready for service. The vessel was loaded with steam coal at Cardiff & dispatched with it to Malta. The coal was not discharged at Malta, but petrol & other stores were put on board & the naval authorities sent the vessel to Tenedos & used her there as a submarine tender. After about four months at Tenedos the cargo took fire by spontaneous combustion, & the vessel was damaged & had to be sent back to Malta:—Held: the risk was a consequence of hostilities or warlike operations as the vessel had become part of a combatant fleet, & the cesser clause had no application to a case where the suspension of working was due to injury which was the result of compulsory orders.—HINDUSTAN S.S. On the faith of the agreement the landlord advertised the farm for sale with entry at Martinmas 1926, & the farm was sold. 8a. Jurisdiction of Benchers.]—Held : pltf. was entitled to have his name restored to the rolls. The benchers' order striking it off was null & void. Under the Legal Profession Act, R. S. A., 1922, such an order could be made only after investigation & recommendation by the discipline committee, which never took place. The fact that the official discipline committee comprised all the benchers who eventually received & adopted the recommendation of the special committee, could not, even apart from the fact that those benchers adopting it had made no investigation of their own, overcome the statutory requirement of the acting by the discipline committee as a distinctive body.—HARRIS v. LAW SOCIETY OF ALBERTA, [1936] S. Appct. applied for admission as a candidate attorney & the application was opposed by the Law Society :—Held : granting the application, by entering into the articles prior to the repeal of r. 53 appct. had acquired a right which was preserved to him by sect. 13 of Act 5, 1910.—Ex p. DE SOUZA (1930), 51 N. An articled clerk, whose articles contained such special provisions & whose required term of service was four years, was absent from service during the fourth year for 114 days owing to illness. Under the special provisions in the articles he served for an additional period of thirty days, which ended on Apr. 16. He continued to serve the master, & on June 27 entered into supplementary articles for a further period of eighty-four days :—Held : the clerk's service did not comply with the requirements as to service under articles, & a special order that his service had been sufficient should be refused.—Ex p. AHERN, [1931] V. He was called to the Bar in the latter year. In 1918 he became a judge of the Chancery Div. of the then High Ct. in Ireland, & later in the same year a Lord Justice of the then Ct. of Appeal in Ireland. He held the latter office until 1924, when, following the change of government in Ireland, the office was abolished. Subsequently he was called to the English Bar, but, owing to illness, was compelled to abandon his practice. He was then disbarred both in Ireland & in England at his own request, with a view to his being readmitted a solr. in the Irish Free State. He now applied to be so re-admitted. The Incorporated Law Society did not oppose the application : —Held : the application be granted having regard to the special circumstances of the case, viz., that appct. did not retire from his judicial office voluntary, but owing to its abolition; that as a solr. he would not be an officer of, or practise in, any ct. in which he sat as a judge; that upwards of five years had elapsed since he had ceased to hold judicial office, & during the greater part of that time he had lived out of Ireland; & that the reason for the application was the state of his health, which required active occupation, this motive displacing the idea of any improper or corrupt consideration behind the application. 449a. —— ——.]—Deft. had embarked upon a variety of investments & transactions which were likely to result in serious losses. She retained pltfs. generally to prosecute all such actions & proceedings as might be necessary to get her out of her difficulties. Having successfully prosecuted several matters pltfs. delivered a bill of costs. Deft., while offering to meet all disbursements in arbn. proceedings which were then being prosecuted on her behalf, intimated that she could not pay anything further. Pltfs. then discharged themselves from their retainer & delivered a second bill & brought this action upon both bills :—Held : this was not a case of a solr. retained to prosecute an action & no question of entire contract arose. The retainer here was one to prosecute a variety of matters & in such a case it was not reasonable that a solr. should engage himself for an indefinite time without payment. In this case the solr. could upon reasonable notice cease to act & sue for his costs.—WARMINGTONS v. MCMURRAY, [1937] 1 All E. R. 562 ; 53 T. L. R. 395 ; 81 Sol. Jo. 178, C. A.

On summons for directions issued by pltf., counsel for the solrs. moved the learned judge to order that the Official Solr. should leave the control of the defence in the hands of the said solrs., & that they should remain on the record, & that the notice of change of solrs. should be removed from the file. The learned judge accordingly varied in this sense his original order appointing the Official Solr. to represent deceased deft. The Official Solr. appealed :—Held : as the Official Solr. had the same right as any other litigant to choose who should be his solr., & was entitled to act for himself, he was entitled to control the defence of himself as representative of deceased deft. & the change of solr. on the record was properly made, & the learned judge had no jurisdiction to make the variation complained of.—WATTS v. OFFICIAL SOLICITOR, [1936] 1 All E. The ct. will allow a client to institute proceedings against a solr. within a reasonable number of years after the connection of solr. & client has ceased. A solr. took an assignment of some leasehold property from his client in 1810 ; their connection determined a few months afterwards. In 1828, the client filed a bill against the solr., insisting that the assignment was intended to be a mtge., & not a sale. The bill was dismissed by the Master of the Rolls in 1830 ; a petition of appeal was presented in 1840. Pltfs. retained deft. as their solr. (inter alia) to arrange for the transfer of the registration of the New Atlantic Club. Deft. sent the necessary documents to the justices' clerk who refused the registration on the ground that the Danesbury Club was on the register as of that address, but the papers were left at the clerk's office. It was found as a fact that deft. never notified pltfs. of this refusal, & the New Atlantic Club moved into their new premises. The police raided the club & pltfs. were prosecuted & fined for supplying drink at an unregistered club. In an action for damages for negligence, deft. denied negligence & contended that even if he was negligent the damage to pltfs. resulted not from his negligence, but from a decision of the magistrates which was wrong in law :—Held : deft. was negligent in not notifying pltfs. of the clerk's refusal to accept registration of the New Atlantic Club at their new premises ; notwithstanding that the clerk's duty was purely ministerial & that he could not decide whether the club should or should not be registered, the leaving of the registration papers was not sufficient to register the club, & the convictions were right ; in considering the damages recoverable no reduction should be made because the fines have been paid out of club funds.—ASHTON v. WAINWRIGHT, [1936] 1 All E. Pltf.'s car was run into by a motor lorry, the collision being caused solely by the negligence of the lorry driver. A passenger in pltf.'s car was seriously injured, & issued a writ against the owners of the lorry & also, at their request, against pltf. The latter informed the insurance co., & left the matter in its hands, as he was bound to do under the policy. The co. sent the papers to its solrs., who entered an appearance to the writ & acted in the conduct of the defence. Neither the co. nor the solrs. ever at any time communicated with pltf. in any way & eventually the solrs. delivered a defence on behalf of pltf. admitting that the accident was caused solely by his negligence & write a letter to this effect to the solrs. opposing them. Having accidentally found out what was happening, pltf. protested to the local agent of the insurance co., to which agent the latter wrote. " If we had repudiated liability we ran a very serious risk of the ct. holding a different view." At the trial of the action, judgment was entered against pltf. for £1,124 12*s.* 10*d.*, damages & costs. The latter now claimed damages against the solrs. & the insurance co. for breach of duty, negligence & libel :—Held : (1) the question whether there was a breach of duty on the part of the insurance co. fell within the doctrine of Scott v. Avery & was a matter for arbn., the policy containing the usual clause making arbitration a condition precedent ; (2) the letter written by the insurance co. was not defamatory ; (3) the letter written by the solrs. was defamatory, the occasion on which it was written was privileged, but there was evidence of indirect motive ; (4) the solrs. were negligent ; (5) the damages for negligence were not nominal, as pltf. might have to pay an additional premium on future insurances. They must be taken at the figure assessed by the jury, £1,000 ; (6) pltf. was also entitled to recover the £1,124 awarded against him as damages in the previous action, but would hold the same as trustee for the insurance co. ; (7) deft. was entitled to a declaration that by reason of the negligence of the solrs. he was not liable to pay any part of their costs while acting for him in the action.—GROOM v. CROCKER, [1937] 3 All E. The solr.-trustee was a partner in a firm of solrs., & had before this transaction arranged with his partners that he should do only a limited amount of work in connection with the partnership & should receive a salary of £600 a year out of the profits of the firm, that amount being only a small portion of their profits. The solr.-trustee employed his firm to do the legal work in connection with the trust, the work being done by a partner who was not a trustee. In taxing the solr.-trustee's bill of costs the taxing master disallowed all his profit costs & allowed only out-of-pocket disbursements, on the ground that he had employed his firm to do the work : —Held : inasmuch as the solr.-trustee derived some benefit from the profits of the partnership, although limited in amount, he was not entitled to employ the firm in which he was a partner to do work in connection with the trust for which profit costs could be charged. —Re HILL, CLAREMONT v. HILL, [1934] Ch. 623 ; 103 L. C., Ord. 65, r. 27, reg. 29 (a).]—(1) For the purpose of taxation of a solr.'s bill under Solicitors Act, 1932 (c. 37), the phrase "costs due to a solr." in sect. 65 (1), must be deemed, having regard to the definition of "costs" in sect. 81, to include "disbursements" due from the client to the solr., which means actual payments before delivery of the bill, & any sums claimed in the bill as disbursements, e.g., fees to counsel, which have not been paid before its delivery, must be disallowed. Solrs. Act, 1932 (c. 37), has not made any alteration in the law in this respect & R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27, reg. 29 (a), is still in force.

sb. Absence of agreement as to scale of commission—Effect.]—Where a solr. & client agree that the former's remuneration for collecting a claim shall be a commission, but they decide to leave the matter of the scale of the commission in abeyance, the solr., if he intends to exact payment according to the scale provided by Ord. 65, r. 27, reg. 29, should draw the client's attention to said rule & give the client to understand that, in the event of the scale of commission, not being otherwise agreed on, he will apply the rule in demanding payment. sc. "Fair & reasonable"—What is.]—In deciding whether a contract between a solr. & client is "fair & reasonable to the client," within sect. 73, Law Society Act, R. S. M., 1913, the word "fair" is to be taken as relating to the means by which the contract was brought about, & "reasonable" as relating to the quantum of remuneration therefrom resulting to the solr. In deciding whether the amount is reasonable the actual work which the solr. was called on to do is a factor but not the sole factor to be considered; & where the contract is one on the contingency & percentage basis, the mere fact that under the percentage agreed on the amount payable to the solr. in the event of success has turned out to be in excess of the costs taxable on the ordinary solr. & client basis is not ground for holding the contract unreasonable. The reasonableness of such excess must depend on the reality & extent of the risk the solr. undertook & the amount of work anticipated at the time he assumed his obligation.—GALBRAITH v. MURRAY, ROBERTSON & THOMAS, [1930] 3 W. The client was adequately warned that the senior's fees were special & such as would not be recoverable from the other party on a party & party taxation. The client was informed that the junior counsel's fees were ordinarily two-thirds of senior counsel fees, & agreed in writing to pay fees amounting to about half those of senior counsel. These fees, as agreed, were reduced by the taxing master:—Held: although the statement as to the proportion of junior counsel's fees to senior counsel's fees was not inaccurate, it was in the circumstances of the case incomplete, & might be misleading &, accordingly, that the client was not bound thereby.—SYMON v. HAY, [1934] S. These provisions apply equally whether damages are recovered by a verdict & judgment after trial or by an order staying proceedings upon the terms of a settlement out of ct. In either case there is a direction by the ct. that the costs of pltf., both as between party & party & as between solr. & client, are to be taxed, & it is the duty of the solrs. on both sides to see that the direction is complied with. For this purpose he employed English solrs., who in turn employed auctioneers. The co. went into liquidation, & a petition was presented by the liquidator craving that the law agent should be ordained to deliver to him the titles of certain heritable properties belonging to the co. The law agent maintained that he had a lien over the titles for his own account as law agent (which was admitted), & also for the accounts of the English solrs. & auctioneers, for which the English solrs. had intimated that they hold him personally liable : —Held : the lien of a law agent did not extend to accounts incurred on behalf of his client which he had not in fact paid & for which he was not personally liable ; accordingly, the law agent's claim to a lien in respect of the accounts of the English solrs. & auctioneers fell to be dismissed, in respect that there was no averment either that he had paid the accounts or that he was liable to pay them.

Act, 1932 (c. 37), s. 69, is discretionary on the part of the ct. & should not be made if the solr. has stood by while the fund sought to be charged has been dealt with under circumstances which render it unjust that the interest of other parties should be postponed to the lien of the solr. Solrs. for a petitioning wife in a matrimonial suit obtained an order for the costs payable by resp. husband without obtaining payment from him. Petitioner became a bkpt. & the solrs. proved in the bkpcy. as unsecured creditors of petitioner for the amount of the costs ; the solrs. subsequently applied for a charging order on the amount of a legacy bequeathed to the husband in respect of which the Official Receiver in the bkpcy. had already obtained a garnishee order :—Held : the discretion of the ct. to make the charging order should not be exercised (a) because the admission of the proof of the solrs., as unsecured creditors was inconsistent with the security which the charging order would afford ; (b) because the property involved in the legacy had not been recovered by the solrs., being still in the hands of the trustees of the will by which it was bequeathed ; & (c) because a charging order would create a new right of creditors in the bkpcy., which did not exist at the date of the bkpcy., contrary to Bkpcy. The judge directed that the matter should be brought before him on a later day. It was then contended that the judge had no jurisdiction, on the ground that, before judgment had been given, both solrs. had ceased to be solrs. on the record. Objection was also taken that the judge was not entitled to hear the application because no affidavits had been filed verifying the facts on which the application was based :—Held : (1) the ct.'s summary jurisdiction over a solr. does not cease merely because he ceases to be on the record ; (2) the summary jurisdiction has not been impaired by the Solrs. 4567a. —— Borrowing trust funds.]—Applt. was suspended from practice as a barrister & solr. of the Supreme Ct. of Fiji for professional misconduct. The case against applt. was twofold:—

(1) On Aug. 25, 1923, the trustees of the estate of one C., deceased, leased a portion of the trust estate to one H. for a period of ten years from May 1, 1923, with an option to purchase the freehold for £4,000. Applt. was H.'s solr. at the date of the lease & for some time prior to it. On Jan. 1, 1926, applt. became a partner with another solr., E., who acted for the C. trustees, applt. continuing to act for H., but when either was absent from Fiji the partner remaining attended to the affairs of all the firm's clients. The property leased to H. improved considerably in value, & in 1932 H. consulted applt. about the exercise of the option. On Nov. 2, 1932, H. exercised the option by a written notice to E. On Nov. 4, 1932, E. left Fiji & did not return till Dec. 23, 1932. The terms of the purchase were that of the purchase price £4,000, £1,350 were to be paid in cash, & the balance was to be secured by a mtge. at 6½ per cent. H., being unable to provide the necessary funds, agreed to sell the property to applt. on Nov. 8, 1932, in the terms of the sale to him by the C. trustees, & applt. agreed to employ H. as his commission agent for the sub-division & sale thereof. Applt., who had advanced moneys to H. on previous occasions, disclosed to E. that he was going to finance H. to the extent of £1,350, but he did not disclose to E., the extent to which he was interested in the transaction. On Mar. 15, 1933, the estate was conveeyed to H. by the C. trustees & H. executed the mtge. for the balance. The sum of £1,350 was paid by a cheque of applt. on his own account:—Held: the intention to exercise the option originated with H. & he solicited the assistance of applt. to enable him to carry out his intention. In those circumstances, though it is most desirable that a solr. acting for a client in any transaction should not have a personal interest in that transaction without making full disclosure, there was no duty to the C. trustees on the part of applt., since he had not instigated H. to exercise the option, to abstain from assisting his client H. to complete the purchase.

(2) The Public Trustee, as custodian trustee of the estate of one, V., appointed applt. managing trustee of that estate on Dec. 22, 1931. On Sept. 6, 1933, applt., as solr. for H., had sent a written notice to E. that the amount outstanding on the mtge. by H. to the C. trustees would be paid off on Dec. 15, 1933, & on that day applt. advanced to H. the amount necessary to obtain the transfer of the mtge., using the funds of the V. estate to repay himself the amount advanced. It was established that when applt. gave notice on Sept. 6, 1933, he intended so to use the V. trust funds, & it was admitted that applt. did not at any time disclose to the Public Trustee his interest in the transaction. On Dec. 18, 1933, the mtge. was transferred to applt. as managing trustee for the V. estate, the interest being 6½ per cent. per annum, the mtgor. to give 3 months prior notice in writing to repay the principal or any part of it. On Jan. 8, 1934, as managing trustee of the V. estate, applt. made an agreement with H. altering the terms of the mtge., agreeing that the beneficiaries for whom he was trustee should be paid only 5½ per cent. interest, & that the mtgor. could pay off at any time without prior notice to the mtgee.:—Held: in using the V. funds applt. was in fact lending trust money to himself & thereby committed a serious breach of trust. This in itself was not necessarily sufficient to constitute professional miscon-

sl. Dispute as to terms of contract—Powers of Law Society.]—It is not the proper function of the Benchers of the Law Society to assume the jurisdiction of the cts. in determining questions of contract where a solr. is interested as a party. When on the hearing of a complaint against a solr. for not paying over moneys alleged to belong to a client, the discipline committee becomes aware that a question of the terms of a contract is involved, as to which there is a dispute of fact, its proper course is to direct the complainant to take such action in the cts. as he may be advised.—Re A SOLICITOR, [1932] 2 W. 4657a. —— From "findings"—No order made.]—A complaint was made on behalf of the Law Society to the disciplinary committee appointed under Solrs. Act, 1932 (c. 37), s. 4, asking that a solr. might be required to answer allegations contained in an affidavit. After hearing evidence the committee promulgated their "findings & order," setting out their findings of fact & ending with the words "while not finding any professional misconduct the committee make no order as to costs." The complainant, on behalf of the Law Society, appealed:—Held: on a preliminary objection by resp., no appeal lay except from an "order" of the committee. There was no appeal from the "findings" with which the order was required to be prefaced, & the committee had made no order. But even if the finding that there was no professional misconduct did amount (as the ct. held that it did not) to an order dismissing the complaint, the words of Solrs. Act, 1932 (c. 37), s. 8, giving a right of appeal to appct. were not so definite as to override the long-established principle that there could be no appeal against an acquittal. The right contemplated by the sect. must be limited to cases where an order, which appct. deemed inadequate, had been made against the solr.—Re A SOLICITOR, [1934] 2 K. B. 463; 152 L. T. 22; 50 T. so. Assisting director to obtain undue preference.]—A practitioner, while acting as a solr., was knowingly party to a scheme whereby L., a director, who was an unsecured creditor of a co., obtained an undue preference over the assets of the co. The scheme was carried through by B., a party to the scheme, purporting to lend money to the co. & securing a debenture to himself for the loan. The "loan" was arranged by L., the director, obtaining from the co.'s bank, a bank cheque drawn on the co.'s account, which cheque was paid to the credit of B.'s account at another Bank. The amount of the cheque thus paid in, except a negligible sum, was immediately withdrawn by B. by cheque, & this cheque was paid to the credit of the co.'s account. A document purporting to be a transfer of the debenture from B. to L. was prepared in anticipation of the debenture being given, which furnished evidence that the practitioner knew that the money lent to the co. was not B.'s but L.'s money. The co. went into liquidation within six months of the giving of this debenture. 107a. —— Acceptance by agent of purchaser subject to ratification—Withdrawal by vendor before ratification.]—Pltf. was chairman of the board of management of a charity. Deft. wrote a letter to the board saying that he would sell certain property to the board for £6,500. At a full meeting of the board instructions were given to arrange for an inspection of the property by members of the board on a specified date. A deputation, consisting of pltf. & twelve other members of the board, viewed the property & had an interview with the deft. The price of £6,500 was again mentioned, & deft. was told that all the members of the board present had resolved to buy the property, & that they could carry the necessary resolution, & they purported to accept deft.'s offer subject to a formal meeting. The secretary of the charity stated that the deputation was not a quorum & could not act as a properly constituted board. On the next day deft. wrote to the secretary promising that the deeds of the property should be left to be inspected by the solr. to the charity, & that his own solr. would forward a form of contract; & the secretary thereupon sent out a notice to members of the board of a special meeting to be held two days later "to receive the report & recommendation of the deputation." On the day of that meeting deft. telegraphed to the secretary cancelling all negotiations. The meeting, however, passed resolutions to ratify the deputation's acceptance of deft.'s offer to sell for £6,500, & to instruct the solr. to the charity to require deft. to complete. 282a. Agreement subject to "model form of conveyance specially prepared"—Absence of model form.]—Where one or more of the material terms of an alleged contract cannot be determined, either by interpretation or as being of a kind which the law will supply, there is no contract, even though there has been an act of part performance, & the ct. can grant neither specific performance nor damages.

Pltf. signed an agreement, in the form of a letter prepared on behalf of deft., to purchase certain premises subject to the conditions indorsed thereon, & to take the conveyance "in the model form of conveyance specially prepared" for use in relation to the same. The conditions stated (inter alia) that the property sold was subject to restrictions appearing in the model form, & that if the purchaser should not after notice withdraw any objection which the vendor could not or would not remove, the vendor might by notice in writing annul the agreement. The premises were part of property conveyed to deft. by three conveyances, among others, dated respectively 1908, 1910 & 1911. They were comprised in the 1908 conveyance, & were part of what was known in deft.'s agent's office as block 4, other parts of the property being there known as blocks with other numbers. Most of the property had come to deft. subject to restrictions against user for trade purposes. At the date of the agreement the restrictions were obsolete in regard to blocks 4, 7 & 9; but in all dealings with property comprised in those blocks deft. had imposed like restrictions. No model form had been prepared for use in dealings with block 4, & through a mistake of deft.'s agent, pltf. received one appropriate to block 8. Pltf. took possession before completion, & soon raised the question of turning the premises into a shop. After long negotiations, during which the question of restrictions was thoroughly discussed, deft. refused permission, maintaining that, despite his agent's mistake in sending the wrong model form, the restrictions against trade ought to stand; & a new draft conveyance, incorporating such restrictions, was prepared on his behalf. Pltf. refused to execute it, & sought by this action to enforce the original agreement subject only to restrictions in one of the schedules to the conveyance of 1908, & thus free from restrictions on trading:—Held: there was no enforceable contract, as by reason of the non-existence of the appropriate model form of conveyance there were missing from the original agreement material terms which the ct. could not supply, & also that damages could therefore not be assessed.—STIMSON v. GRAY, [1929] 1 Ch. 629; 98 L. 707a. Property subject to old closing order.]—On July 11, 1929, the purchaser bought Lot 2 at a sale by auction & paid a deposit. The particulars of sale described Lot 2 as an unrestricted freehold, practically an island block, with four frontages to Little Orford Street & three other streets in Chelsea, the block forming an excellent building site, when the existing buildings came into hand. On examining the vendors' registered absolute title the purchaser found Entry 7 in the Charges Register stating in effect that on the transfer of Lot 2 & other property to the vendors on May 23, 1929, by mtgees. selling under their power of sale in a mtge. of Feb. 17, 1903, from Co. A., the former owners, the vendors by way of indemnity to the mtgees., but not further or otherwise covenanted to perform the obligations of Co. A. under a deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made between Co. 277 i. Term omitted from written agreement—Terms contained in parol agreement.]—In an action by a vendor for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of farm lands deft. contended that the whole agreement was based upon the understanding that the farming equipment would be included in the sale although no express mention of it was made in the written agreement. Deft. or his tenant remained in possession of the equipment during the winter following the making of the agreement, without any suggestion being made by pltf. that deft. was not entitled to the equipment. In Mar. pltf. retook possession of the equipment & testified that he did so because deft. had defaulted in paying certain instalments:—Held: if the omission of express reference in the written agreement to the equipment deprived deft. of any remedy at law, the case was a proper one in which to apply sect. 13 (i) of King's Bench Act, which authorises "the administration of justice in all cases in which there exists no adequate remedy at law," & justice could be done only by replacing the parties as nearly as possible in the same position in which they were before the agreement was reduced to writing.—MCLEOD v. KRYSKO, [1930] 3 W. Council & under a London County Council Order of Dec. 12, 1905. The deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made in pursuance of a large building scheme by Co. A. provided for the stopping up (inter alia) of Little Orford Street & for making certain new streets, including a new transverse street bisecting Lot. 2. The Borough Council were to obtain the necessary Closing Orders, & Co. A. were to lay out the new streets at their own expense. By their order of Dec. 12, 1905, the London County Council on the application of Co. A. sanctioned the new streets subject to certain conditions including a condition that Co. A. should covenant to lay them out, & on Dec. 21, 1905, Co. A. covenanted accordingly. On July 10, 1906, on the Borough Council's application the justices made a Closing Order for Little Orford Street. For financial & other reasons this part of Co. A.'s scheme had not yet been proceeded with. Little Orford Street was still open; it was in fact repaired by the Borough Council; & at the date of the contract neither the vendors nor the purchaser knew of the Closing Order's existence. On discovering Entry 7 the purchaser required the vendors to delete it from the Register & to obtain a release of the obligations, &, on their refusal, he issued a vendor & purchaser summons for a declaration that a good title was not shown. On subsequently discovering the Closing Order he discontinued the summons & brought this action claiming a declaration that he was entitled to repudiate the contract, damages for breach, & return of the deposit. The vendors denied any breach & counterclaimed for specific performance:—Held: (1) the twenty-four years' old Closing Order did not affect the title, but, if & so far as it was inconsistent with the particulars, merely raised a case of innocent misrepresentation, on which the purchaser could neither repudiate the contract nor recover damages, his only remedy being to resist specific performance. Therefore, the purchaser's action failed; (2) on the vendors' counterclaim for specific performance that there was in fact no misrepresentation in the particulars, as the word "street" even in London did not necessarily mean a public highway. There was therefore no ground for refusing specific performance.—BARNES v. CADOGAN DEVELOPMENTS, LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 479; 99 L. J. Ch. 274; 142 L. T. 626.

Defts. took up their residence on the land & built a house & other improvements thereon referable only to said agreement. Pltf. brought an action to recover possession, & defts. counterclaimed for specific performance. The ct. dismissed the action & declared that defts. were entitled to specific performance on the death of pltf. or upon her removing from the neighbourhood:—Held: on appeal, the dismissal of the action ought to be sustained, but the decree of specific performance was premature.—LYELL v. CORMACK, [1928] 4 D. sg. Contract to take supply of gas.]—Under a contract between deft. city & a co. to whose rights thereunder pltf. co. was held to have succeeded, the city agreed to permit the co. to connect gas wells, which the co. agreed to drill by a certain date, with the city's main & then to withdraw from the main for its own use a certain percentage of the gas thus added to the city's supply. The co. not having proceeded to drill, the city notified it that the city would not perform its part of the contract after a date specified, which was prior to that to the contract was found on the trial to have been extended by agreement of the parties. The co. then sued for a declaration that the contract was a good & subsisting contract extending to said later date, which should be specifically performed by deft., & for an extension of time in which to complete the well or wells, & for damages. Said later date had passed at the time of the trial:—Held: although the contract had been broken by the city, it was one with respect to which it was impossible to decree specific performance; moreover, it was beyond the power of the ct. to extend the time, &, since the question whether the co. had really sustained any damage depended upon a question which could not be answered, viz., whether by said date the co. could or would have sunk the well or wells & have found sufficient gas to justify it in carrying it to the city's main, pltf. could recover nominal damages only.—MEDALTA POTTERIES, LTD. v. MEDICINE HAT CITY, [1931] 1 W. STATUTES.

Part I.—In General.

3a. Meaning of Act of Parliament—Act of Imperial Parliament.]—In 1800, by the Act of Union, 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67, the two Parliaments were united, & thereafter the words "some Act of Parliament" mean an Act of Parliament of the United Kingdom. Now looking at the Lotteries Act, 1923 (c. 60), it is clear to me that the words "some Act of Parliament" mean some Act of the Imperial Parliament. Although it is true that in 1922 an Act of the United Kingdom set up a Legislature for Ireland, that has not altered the meaning of the expression, "Act of Parliament" in the Act of 1823, & it is impossible to say that an Act passed by the Irish Legislature is an "Act of Parliament" within Lotteries Act, 1823 (c. 60), s. 41 (SLESSER, L.J.).—R. v. REGISTRAR OF JOINT STOCK COMPANIES, Ex p. MORE, [1931] 2 K. —.]—One further point was taken upon the Superannuation Act, 1859 (c. 26), with which it is necessary to deal. The marginal notes of sect. 3 refer to "existing rights" & of sect. 12 to "right." It was contended that these catchwords could be used to explain the meaning of sects. against which they appear. For my part I cannot allow this. As explained by BAGGALLAY, L.J., in A.-G. v. Great Eastern Ry. Co., No. 70, marginal notes are not a part of an Act of Parliament. The Houses of Parliament have nothing to do with them, & I agree with the learned Lords Justices in that case, BRAMWELL, JAMES, & BAGGALLAY, that the cts. cannot look at them. Their imperfections, spoken of by BRAMWELL, L.J., are illustrated by the note of sect. 9 of this Act (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—NIXON v. A.-G., [1930] 1 Ch. 566, 593; 99 L. J. Ch. 259; 143 L. 764a. ——.]—It was suggested by the A.-G. in the course of his argument for the Revenue Officers, that the ct. was entitled to consider some of the provisions of the later Derating Act as affecting the construction of the 1928 Act. It was contended that as the later Act obliged railways to pass on the benefit of the derating by reduction of railway rates to the users of railways the definition clauses of the 1928 Act should, if possible, be read as applying only to that part of their property which earned rates that could be reduced in proportion to the derating benefits received by the railway, & therefore the Act should if possible be read as excluding from the privileged classes warehouses for the use of which a customer pays rent & not railway rates & therefore could not be given the advantage of having the derating benefit passed on to him. It was further argued that if railway warehouses are outside the definition for these reasons, dock warehouses should also be deemed outside the definition. In my judgment this argument ought not to have any weight attached to it. The Act of 1928 cannot be interpreted by what Parliament chose to do by an Act of 1929. We are not entitled to assume that the need of so wording the Act as to confine the prospective advantages of differential rating to those hereditaments whose rateable occupiers could pass on the benefit to their trade customers was present to the mind of the Legislature when they passed the Act of 1928. We can, however, treat as relevant the purposes for which the Act was passed as stated in the title (GREER, L.J.).—BOTTOMLEY v. WEST DERBY ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, MERSEY DOCKS & HARBOUR BOARD v. WEST DERBY ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, BOTTOMLEY v. MERSEY DOCKS & HARBOUR BOARD, BOTTOMLEY v. LIVERPOOL GRAIN STORAGE & TRANSIT CO., LTD., [1932] 1 K. sb. Comparison with Imperial Act.]—Although in the interpretation of a colonial statute a comparison thereof with a similar Imperial statute on the same subject-matter, & reference to the decisions on the latter statute, may often be helpful, it is quite a different thing & a perilous course to adopt to institute an elaborate textual comparison between the two statutes & to rely on conjectures as to the intention of the draftsman of the colonial statute in selecting some & rejecting other provisions of his presumed model.

The fact that the general words of a statute are subject to certain admitted qualifications does not of itself afford any presumption that they are subject to a further restriction which is not admitted.

If the decision is one of the Privy Council, & there is no difference between the Union statute & the English statute & if there is nothing in our common law which would require a different interpretation, then we would follow the decision of the Privy Council, & if an interpretation has been put upon a section of an English statute by one of the higher English cts., we would attach great weight to such an interpretation. It would be an unnecessary step to take, unless it were intended, contrary to the general principles of legislation, to make the explanatory Act retrospective, seeing that the subsequent statute could by independent enactment do what was desired. It is also possible that where Acts are to be read together, as they are in this case, a provision in an earlier Act that was so ambiguous that it was open to two perfectly clear & plain constructions could, by a subsequent incorporated statute, be interpreted so as to make the second statute effectual, which is what the cts. would desire to do, & it is also possible that, where a statute has created a crime or imposed a penalty, a subsequent Act showing that that crime was intended to have a limited interpretation or the circumstances regarded as narrow, in which the penalty attached, would be used for the purpose of giving effect to the well-known principle of construction to which I referred at an earlier stage (LORD BUCKMASTER).—ORMOND INVESTMENT CO. v. BETTS, [1928] A. 1681a. ——.]—By the will of a testator who died in 1878 land in New Zealand was devised upon trusts under which testator's natural daughter became tenant for life with remainders over in tail male to her sons. Her son, the first tenant in tail, attained the age of twenty-one years, but was killed in action in 1915 during his mother's lifetime. He was survived by an infant son who, upon the death in 1930 of testator's natural daughter, became tenant in tail in possession. The will contained no power to sell the settled land, but a private Act (the Rhodes Trust Act, 1901) was obtained & gave the trustees power to lease or sell any part of it. sale were to be invested by the trustees & all income produced by the investments was to be paid to the person " who but for such sale or lease would have been for the time being beneficially entitled to the occupation of the land in respect of which such moneys shall have been received." Upon an originating summons issued in 1932 :—Held : the fund representing the proceeds of sales, whether made before or after the death of the infant's father, belonged absolutely to the infant. Under sect. 5 of the private Act the income derived from the proceeds of sales, like the rents, was payable to the person entitled under the will as tenant in tail ; but the vesting of the corpus was postponed until there should be a tenant in tail who was entitled to actual possession or receipt of the rents & profits of the settled land.

The private Act, having been passed for the strictly limited purpose of authorising the trustees to sell or lease the settled land, should not, in the absence of unambiguous language, be given an effect which would unnecessarily alter the rights of the parties.—BARTON v. MOORHOUSE, [1935] A. 211a. Right of jobber to sue third party.]—C. an outside broker, who conducted his brokerage business through defts., who had a seat on the Toronto Standard Stock & Mining Exchange, gave instructions for the purchase & sale of shares without disclosing the name of his clients. Most of the transactions were on margin. C. found himself unable to find the cash for large purchases of a certain class of stock then open, & could not find the client for whom the purchases had been made. Defts., purporting to act under powers given by the contract between them & C., proceeded to sell shares bought & held as security on the general account, which mainly consisted of shares bought on behalf of C.'s clients, & in that way indemnified themselves against the loss on the particular stock in question. C. went into bkpcy., making an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. On a claim for damages by C. & his trustee in bkpcy. against defts., the trial judge made a declaration (inter alia) that defts. held the securities which they sold in trust for C. or his trustee in bkpcy. as trustee for C.'s customers & clients, & that defts. had no right to charge those securities with the purchase price of the stock, & the judgment made provision for the determination & payment of damages. On appeal by defts. the Ct. of Appeal of Ontario set aside this judgment. Pltfs. appealed :—Held : that judgment of the trial judge could not stand. So far as the rights of the parties depended upon contract, C. had no claim against defts. in the capacity of trustee. Although there had been numerous actions in which an agent for undisclosed principals had sued in his own name, there appeared to be no precedent for such an agent suing as trustee for his principals; further, if the case were regarded as a wrongful dealing with property apart from privity of contract the result was the same. If there was nothing due from the undisclosed principal in respect of the shares which had been bought, either he or the agent must sue: no question of trusteeship arose. With regard to shares deposited as margin, the agent was in the position of mtgee. with a right to submtge. A mtgee. was not a trustee, & if the shares were improperly dealt with by the submtgee., the mtgee. could sue in his own right, or the mtgor. might, under proper conditions, sue to protect his property. The mtgee. could not sue as trustee for the mtgor., for he was not a trustee. In the present case either C.'s rights passed to his trustee in bkpcy., or C.'s customers alone could sue, & neither C. nor his trustee could sue as Defts. introduced to pltfs. one W., & as a result of his transactions he incurred a debt to pltfs. no part of which had been paid. W. executed a deed of assignment of his property for the benefit of his creditors, & both pltfs. & defts. were assenting creditors to the deed. Pltfs. claimed that on the execution of that deed of assignment a loss had been sustained by them within the meaning of the above-mentioned agreement, & they brought an action to recover 50 per cent. of W.'s debt :—Held : the mere signing of the deed of assignment by W. did not establish a loss sustained by pltfs., & that in the absence of evidence of actual loss sustained by them the action failed.—STANLEY (MONTAGU) & Co. v. SOLOMON (J. 384a. —— Trustee not entitled to recover against jobber.]—Applt. was a director of S. M. & Co., a Canadian stock brokerage co. with several branches. T. F. & Co. were a stock brokerage co. carrying on business at a town in British Columbia where there was no stock exchange. In Apr. 1928, S. M. & Co. agreed to accept orders from T. F. & Co. for the sale & purchase of shares, both for cash & on open account, & to divide the commissions with them; T. F. & Co. were to provide 33⅓ per cent. as margin. T. F. & Co. made numerous contracts with S. M. & Co. in pursuance of orders from their clients, also some on their own behalf. The contract notes were all in the name of T. F. & Co., who did not send them to their clients, but a separate contract was made for each order. Money paid to T. F. & Co. by their clients went into their general account. S. M. & Co. knew that the transactions were entered into by T. F. & Co. mainly, at least, on behalf of their clients. In Sept. 1929, T. F. & Co. became bkpt.; resp. was trustee in the bkpcy. In an action brought by him as trustee he obtained judgment for the return of all sums paid by T. F. & Co. to S. M. & Co. on transactions upon open account, & against applt. for the amount of those sums as damages. The grounds were that S. M. & Co. adopted a fraudulent system of not making independent contracts in respect of shares dealt in, & that applt. was a party thereto. There was no appeal by S. M. & Co. :—Held : the judgment against applt. should be set aside, because T. F. & Co.'s clients were undisclosed principals to the contracts made upon their orders, & resp. therefore could not maintain the action as to those contracts, & because the action failed as to all the contracts in the absence of evidence that the fraudulent system had been used in connection with any particular contract; further, that even if the judgment could be sustained against the co., applt. was not liable in the absence of proof of loss.—SOLLOWAY v. JOHNSON, [1934] A. On Oct. 1 they drew on defts. for the price, attaching the certificates to the draft. Defts. on Oct. 4 refused to take delivery on account of the delay :—Held : in the absence of an express stipulation as to the immediate forwarding of the certificates or of a demand to forward them at once, the delay in procuring & forwarding them was not unreasonable & defts. were not justified in repudiating the contract.—CRANG & CO. v. PLOTKE & CO., [1931] 1 D. In the present case it was held that this point of time was fixed as at that date when pltf., after objecting to a statement of his account which showed said shares as sold, requested that they be placed to his credit because he wanted to sell them. In the former case the shares will not be held to be the property of the claimant unless certificates therefor have been specifically appropriated to the claimant's contract. In the latter case, i.e. where the relationship was that of principal & agent, it must be held that the certificates on hand include those for the shares bought for the claimant if the certificates on hand of the kind in question are sufficient to meet the demands of all purchasers of such shares; & the claimant will be entitled to delivery of the certificates provided he has either paid, or pays therefor in full, or if he has to his credit on the books of the broker an amount sufficient to meet the balance, if any, due from him on said shares.—Re STOBIE-FORLONG-MATTHEWS, LTD., Re KERN AGENCIES, LTD., [1931] 1 W. e x [illegible] of turning across the line of oncoming traffic is one that involves a duty of care, which is not necessarily discharged by giving the conventional signal of the intention to turn. The public safety is best conserved by imposing upon every vehicle the duty of observing the precautions appropriate to its own situation. If undue stress is laid upon any particular circumstance there must always be some tendency for the other vehicle to consider itself absolved from the full duty of care appropriate to the particular situation. In default of anything that brings or ought to bring to the knowledge of the driver of a vehicle that another person is acting or likely to act without a reasonable regard for his own safety, the driver of every vehicle may be excused for acting upon the assumption that other people will act reasonably. The act of passing at an important intersection involves a degree of care which is at least equal to that required of the driver who turns out of a road.—KLEEMAN v. WALKER, [1934] S. A. S. m x. —— ——.]—In an action resulting from a collision of motor cars at a street intersection the driver at the left does not satisfy the onus of proving that in entering upon the intersection he was acting with reasonable care merely by establishing the fact that his car was within the intersection before the car to his right entered it. He must show that he had reached the intersecting street substantially ahead of the car having the right of way & that the way appeared to be clear; or, in other words, he must show that he had made a reasonable as well as a substantial prior entry upon the intersection, that is, had exercised reasonable care in entering upon, as well as continuing the crossing of, the intersection. A driver of a motor car must exercise reasonable care not only when entering upon an intersection but also while crossing it. Although the driver coming from the right has by statute & bye-law the right of way at an intersection, yet where a vehicle at his left has reached the intersecting street substantially ahead of him the driver at the left is not obliged to wait upon the other if the way appears to be clear. A driver who has ceased to go forward at a "stop sign" long enough for him to make, & has made, the necessary observations as to all the then existing relevant circumstances on the "through highway" & elsewhere around him, has come to a "full stop" according to the requirements of a bye-law requiring him to do so; but, nevertheless, the question of his right to proceed is left to be determined according to the then existing circumstances.—HAINES & HAINES v. WILLIAMS, WILLIAMS & WILLIAMS v. HAINES, [1933] 1 W. Pltf. was on deft.'s right, but when pltf. reached the intersection deft. was well within it & gave no indication of intending to stop. The intersection was on a wide street divided by street car tracks into thoroughfares for one-way traffic & declared by bye-law to be an arterial highway. By usage & necessity the statutory definition of "intersection" was not, in fact, applied to the whole intersection as so defined but to each of the two squares comprising it. When pltf., who was on the arterial highway, reached the intersection deft.'s car was between the two lines of street-car track & pltf. continued on his way on the assumption that deft. had seen him & would stop:—Held: the action failed because of pltf.'s improper insistence on the right of way.—FRANKLIN v. GEDDES, [1935] 1 W. A. L. R. 3.—AUS.

m xviii. —— ——.]—In an action resulting from a collision of motor cars at an intersection:—Held: the accident was due solely to the negligence of deft., who was on the right of pltf., in not keeping a proper lookout & in not giving pltf. the right of way which he had obtained. Pltf., after coming to a full stop at the stop sign, looked both to the right & left, &, having concluded that there was no danger of collision, proceeded to cross, deft.'s car being then at least 250 feet away from the intersection & going about 30 miles an hour:—Held: therefore, he was justified in proceeding & had displaced deft.'s right of way. purposes of sect. 27 of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43)—a cartage co. was charged with "unlawfully aiding, abetting, counselling & procuring" a driver of one of its motor vehicles "to fail to conform to the indication given by a traffic sign . . . for regulating the movement of traffic" authorised by the Minister of Transport, pursuant to sect. 48 of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), as amended by the Road Traffic Act, 1934 (c. 50). By a second information the driver was charged with failing to conform to the indication given by the said sign. The sign consisted of a portable revolving board, bearing on one side the words "Stop, Road Traffic Officer, Bucks C. On appeals by defts. from the decisions of the justices it was contended that the device in question was not a traffic sign within the meaning of sects. 48 & 49 of the Act of 1930; that the purported authorisation of the said device by the Minister was ultra vires; & that the road traffic officer had no authority or right in law to stop a motor vehicle travelling on the road:—Held: the said device was a sign for regulating the movement of traffic within the meaning of sects. 48 & 49 of the Act of 1930; the stopping of a vehicle was the regulating of its movements within the meaning of those sects.; & the authorisation by the Minister was therefore intra vires his powers, & the appeals must be dismissed.—LANGLEY CARTAGE CO., LTD. v. JENKS, ADAMS v. JENKS, [1937] 2 K. The provision in sect. 47 of Vehicles & Highway Traffic Act, 1924, that a driver meeting another vehicle upon the highway must keep to the right:—Held: not to apply to pltf. in the circumstances since deft.'s automobile was not meeting pltf.'s motor cycle but was crossing in front of it.—BATTAGIN v. BIRD, [1937] 1 W. sb. General rule.] — Drivers of vehicles on highways cannot be required to regulate their driving as if in constant fear that other drivers who are under observation, & apparently acting reasonably & properly, may possibly act at a critical moment in disregard of their own, as well as others, safety.—COLDWELL v. MUNICIPAL TRAMWAYS TRUST, [1929] S. 26 iii. —— ——.]—The driver of a motor car is usually able, & is expected, to keep a look out for vehicles & pedestrians crossing his path upon their lawful occasions, & to warn them if they appear to be unaware of his approach.—MATHEWS v. WARD, [1930] S. A. S. R. 286.—AUS.

k i. —— Duty to slow up at intersection.]—A pedestrian crossing at an intersection has a right to assume that anyone who may come up to the crossing she has already entered will exercise care by reducing his speed, or stopping.—ALTER v. SOLOWAY, [1931] 2 D. L. R. 328; 66 O. L. R. 610.—CAN.

k ii. —— Pedestrian walking in same direction.]—The fact that a motorist sounds his horn once or oftener on seeing a pedestrian on the road ahead of him & walking in the same direction does not justify him in driving on without taking due care according to the circumstances. If he perceives that the pedestrian is not heeding the horn it is his duty to bring his car under such control, even to the extent of coming to a full stop, that he will be able to guard against an accident should the pedestrian suddenly swerve in his course so as to come in front of the car.—WOOD v. POWELL, [1932] 3 W. W. R. 100.—CAN.

k iii. —— ——.]—When the driver of a motor car perceives that a pedestrian is not heeding the horn & is not aware of the car's approach he should bring his car under control & if necessary stop it. If he first blows his horn when so close to the pedestrian as to alarm him he should take care to have his car under sufficient control to be prepared for any emergency resulting from the pedestrian's alarm.—MALAWSKI v. WALTON, [1932] 3 W. W. R. 330.—CAN.

k iv. —— Pedestrian boarding street car.]—A pedestrian stepping from a sidewalk at a street intersection with the object of boarding a street car has a right to expect that the driver of an approaching automobile then some distance away will see him & not come too close to the crossing for safety; & that the driver will slacken his speed & have his car under such control that it can be stopped almost instantly.—JAMES & JAMES v. PIEOL, [1932] 3 W. W. R. 365.—CAN.

k v. —— Pedestrian alighting from street car.]—The effect of sect. 11 of Motor-vehicle Act, R. S. B. C., 1924, which provides that an automobile must stop behind a street car when that street car is halted & discharging passengers & must remain stopped until the passengers get to the curb or are otherwise in safety, is that the onus is placed on a motorist to watch passengers getting off street cars & make sure before proceeding that they have reached the curb or else that they are in safety, as, e.g. if they clearly intimate that they intend to remain in the safety zone until the automobile has passed. This provision of said Act cannot be altered by any city bye-law so as to affect civil rights defined by the Act.—MACDONALD v. BAILEY, [1934] 1 W. W. R. 342.—CAN.

k vii. —— Motorist driving on wrong side—Overtaken by another car.]—Even though there be no provision by statute or bye-law forbidding a motorist to travel on the left part of the right-hand side of a street, nevertheless, since the fact that a motorist occupies that position virtually compels another driver overtaking him to do so on his right, he is bound to use a particularly high degree of care as soon as he realises that the other car is coming

31a. Duty to halt at major road.]—A motorist was approaching certain cross-roads when he passed a road sign which read: "Halt at major road ahead." The word "Halt" was in large letters fitted with reflecting lenses, the other words being in small letters without reflecting lenses. It was dark at the material time & the motorist could reasonably see only the word "Halt." He had, however, passed the sign previously in daylight. The motorist halted at the sign & then slowly approached & turned into the major road. The construction of the sign conformed with the directions for such signs in the regulations & orders issued by the Minister of Transport: —Held: the motorist failed to conform to the

up to him. Moreover, such an emergency is expressly provided for by sect. 37 (4) of Highway Traffic Act, 1930, which says that if the driver of an overtaken vehicle finds it impracticable to give way to the right, he shall immediately stop.—HRABEC v. LUCID, [1933] 2 W. W. R. 636; 4 D. L. R. 452; 41 Man. L. R. 383.—CAN.

k viii. —— Contributory negligence of pedestrian.]—Pltf. when walking across a street between intersections about 4.30 a.m. on Jan. 1, in order to get to his parked motor car, saw deft.'s car approaching on his left about 225 feet away. He continued to walk until when about three feet from his car he stopped for about two seconds to see what the driver of a car parked to his right, the self-starter of which was working, intended to do. He was struck by deft.'s car. Deft. did not see pltf., but he was seen by a passenger in deft.'s car, when it was 150 to 160 feet away. She said pltf. would not have been struck had he not taken a step back; & pltf. admitted that if he had looked again he could have avoided the accident by taking one step:—Held: deft. was negligent in not seeing pltf.; & deft. was contributorily negligent in not looking to his left when he stopped; his degree of the total fault was 25 per cent.—DIXON v. SINCLAIR, [1936] 3 W. H.:—Held: the cause of the accident was the fact that deft. did not "seasonably" move his car to the right of the centre line of the highway; under the circumstances pltf. when faced with the oncoming car was not negligent in turning his bicycle to his left when he saw deft. was not moving his car to his right.—HARRIS v. HOWES & CHEMICAL DISTRIBUTORS, LTD., [1929] 4 D. As no signal was given, there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltfs. in not seeing deft.—DE MOTT v. CLYSDALE, [1931] 2 D. L. R. 316; O. R. 1.—CAN.

These coaches started from Upper Regent Street, London, where the booking office of the co. was. The Minister of Transport gave notice that he proposed to make regulations under London Traffic Act, 1924 (c. 34), s. 10, which in effect provided that motor coaches should not at any time on any week-day be on any street within a prescribed "inner area" of London, & that they should not be on any street within a prescribed "outer area" except at certain permitted hours. Upper Regent Street was within the outer area, & just on the border of the inner area:—Held: the Minister had power under the Act to make the proposed regulations.—R. v. MINISTER OF TRANSPORT, Ex p. SKYLARK MOTOR COACH CO., LTD. Applt. was charged with having unlawfully & wilfully committed a breach of the said order by using one of the streets referred to in the sched. for the purposes of selling confectionery, & was convicted & fined 5*s.* Applt. contended (inter alia) that the order was not a valid order, in that it was too general, as it did not specify the hours within which the streets might not be used for the sale of the articles mentioned:—Held: the order was valid, as the generality thereof was not in excess of the powers conferred on the borough council by sect. 21 of 1847 Act.—ETHERINGTON v. CARTER, [1937] 2 All E. It also provided that no owner of a licensed cab should require or permit any driver employed by him to be on duty more than sixty hours in any week. A further provision prohibited the granting of a licence to an operator of a motor vehicle who was not insured in the form required by Part VII. of Highway Traffic Act, 1930, subject to a proviso in the case of an owner of ten cabs; & provided for depriving of his licence an operator whose insurance had terminated:—Held: said provisions of the bye-law, except that requiring insurance, were valid.—Re WINNIPEG BYE-LAW NO. 14272, [1932] 2 W. before Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43)—Validity of regulation fixing date when service must have been operating.]—Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 72 (1) prohibits the use of any vehicle as a stage carriage or express carriage for public service, as defined by sect. 61, except by persons holding a road service licence or licences to be granted by the comrs. of the traffic areas created by the Act, through which the route passes subject to the conditions thereby provided. By sect. 96 the Minister of Transport is authorised to make such orders as he may consider necessary for the transition from the enactments superseded by Part IV. of the Act, regulating the use of public service vehicles, to the provisions of Part IV., & may provide that existing licences in force before the commencement of the Act shall continue in force for a period fixed by the Order. By Public Service Vehicles (Transitory Provisions) No. 2 Order 1931, dated Mar. 13, the Minister ordered that where a person was, on Feb. 9, 1931, operating a service of public vehicles, & had before Mar. 31, 1931, applied for a road service licence under the Act, it should not be deemed to be an offence for him to continue that service pending the grant or refusal of that application. The prohibition contained in sect. 72 (1) of the Act was first brought into force, by Order of the Minister of Transport, on Apr. 1, 1931. Defts. commenced to operate a service of express coaches over a route between London & Aylesbury on Feb. 26, 1931, & applied in the prescribed manner for the grant of a road service licence from the Comrs. of the Eastern Area through which the route passed before Mar. 31, 1931, but their application was refused & an appeal to the Minister from the refusal dismissed. Defts. were later prosecuted & convicted at petty sessions for running their service without a road service licence, but, notwithstanding the conviction, continued to do so. In an action by the A.-G., at the relation of other motor coach owners holding licences to operate on the same route, for an injunction to restrain defts. from continuing their service :—Held : (1) the action was maintainable notwithstanding that the Act created a statutory offence & provided a penalty for its breach ; (2) as defts. were not operating a service of coaches on the route in question on Feb. 9, 1931, they did not come within the terms & conditions of Public Service Vehicles (Transitory Provisions) Order, No. 2 ; (3) in fixing Feb. 9 as the critical date on which coach services must have been in operation to obtain the protection of the last-mentioned Order, the Minister was not acting ultra vires the Act or unreasonably ; (4) sect. 81 (3), dealing with appeals to the Minister from a refusal to grant a new licence to a person who had held an old licence did not apply to defts. as they had never held any licences for the particular route under the Act, only under earlier superseded Acts ; (5) the ct. made a declaration in favour of the relators on defts. undertaking not to renew the service without obtaining a licence.—A.-G. v. PREMIER LINE, LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 303 ; 101 L. PART IV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

s. Licence for taxi-cab—Requirement that owner insured—Validity of bye-law.]—A bye-law provided that no person licensed to keep a cab should operate it until he had filed with the inspector of licences an "owner's policy" as defined in sect. 165 of Insurance Act, 1932, issued by an insurance co., & that no person should operate an automobile after such policy had lapsed or been cancelled. Applt., whose insurance policy had been cancelled, was convicted of continuing to operate her car contrary to said bye-law :—Held : the bye-law in compelling licensees to obtain insurance went beyond the authority conferred by the statute, there being no authority clearly conferred with respect to insurance, except as to the "placing" of the same ; &, moreover, the bye-law left a licensee at the will or mercy of insurance cos. & delegated to such cos. the power to determine whether an appct. should be granted a licence. Therefore the provisions of the bye-law on which the conviction was based were held bad & the conviction set aside.—R. v. HELFRICK, [1933] 3 W. W. R. 179 ; 61 C. C. C. 60 ; revsd., [1933] 3 W. W. Applts. were summoned on an information signed by a superintendent & an Assistant Commissioner of Metropolitan Police (who held a general letter of authorisation from the Commissioner) with using the vehicles & causing them to be used as stage carriages without a road service licence in that behalf. The magistrate convicted:—Held: (1) the effect of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 61 (2), was to bring into the category of "stage carriages," in the circumstances there defined, vehicles which but for that sub-sect. would have been "contract carriages" & exempt from the necessity for a road service licence, & the magistrate was entitled to find that the payments made by the passengers for admission to the stadium were made partly in respect of the journey, & therefore the vehicles were used by applts. as stage carriages; (2) the information was duly laid by a person authorised in that behalf by a chief officer of police.—WESTMINSTER COACHING SERVICES, LTD. v. PIDDLESDEN, HACKNEY WICK STADIUM, LTD. v. PIDDLESDEN (1933), 149 L. 76g. —— —— —— ——.]—A dance was organised, & the advertisement thereof in a newspaper contained the words "Bus to Chesham after dance." The organisers arranged to hire a 20-seater motor-coach from resp. to take passengers to Chesham after the dance for the price of 15*s.*, which sum was paid on a date after the dance. Resp. was unaware of the terms of the advertisement, & did not know that during the dance one of the organisers announced that any person who desired to travel by the coach to Chesham must buy a ticket at the door of the hall, & that tickets were issued to those persons, who each contributed not less than 6*d.* Any person attending the dance, although not a member of the club which organised it, could obtain a ticket. An information was preferred in two separate cases by applt. against resp., under Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 72 (1), (10), for permitting the motor vehicle to be used as a stage carriage otherwise than under a road service licence. The justices dismissed the information, holding that the coach was being used, not as a stage carriage, but for conveyance of a private party on a special occasion. Applt. contended that, as the driver of the vehicle was in possession of a work ticket as required by statute, resp. must have known that separate payments were to be made by each passenger, & he therefore deliberately abstained from making inquiries regarding the fares, & whether there had been any advertisement in the newspapers:—Held: the vehicle was being used as a stage carriage, but, as the resp. was unaware of the use to which it was being put, he was not guilty of the offence charged. The only element which prevented the use of this vehicle being innocent was that the possibility of using the vehicle had been advertised to the public.—EVANS v. DELL, [1937] 1 All E. Persons taking part in these combined rail & road excursions obtained from the railway co. two tickets, one for the rail journey & the other for the journey by road from the station to the works, & did not pay any fare direct to the motor omnibus owners, who received from the railway co. a certain sum for each passenger carried. Part of the sum paid by the railway co. was contributed by the owners of the works where the conducted tours took place. Neither the railway co. nor the motor omnibus owners held a road service licence to operate public service vehicles in connection with the visits to the works:—Held: the motor omnibus owners were guilty of an offence under Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 72, as their vehicles were being operated as "express carriages" within sect. 61 (1) (b). They were not protected by the proviso to that section as the vehicles were not being used "for the conveyance of a private party" nor "on a special occasion."—BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND MOTOR OMNIBUS CO., LTD. v. NELSON, [1933] 1 K. 761. —— —— —— ——.]—Two persons, C. & P., severally hired taxicabs (neither of which had a road service licence as an express carriage) to drive themselves & friends to a certain destination & back for 14*s.* in each case. C. had made an antecedent arrangement with her friends that each of them should pay her share of the fare. P. had made no such arrangement, though some of her friends in fact subsequently offered to pay & did pay their shares. On the journey the taxicabs were stopped by a police officer & a traffic examiner, who questioned the passengers as to the arrangements for payment, but did not caution them. The hirers were charged with causing & the drivers with permitting the taxicabs respectively to be used as express carriages when there were not in force licences authorising them to be so used. The justices dismissed all the summonses, & expressly found that the drivers did not know, & had no reason to know, that the passengers were sharing the fares:—Held: since there was in C.'s case an antecedent contract for payment by the other passengers of their shares they were " carried in a motor-vehicle in consideration of separate payments made by them," & therefore by sect. 61 (2), the vehicle was to be " deemed to be a vehicle carrying passengers for hire or reward at separate fares," & was brought within the definition of " express carriage " in sub-sect. (1), & C. was therefore guilty of the offence charged. In the absence of an antecedent contract by P. the justices were right in dismissing the charge against her. Nor could it be said that they had erred in law in dismissing the charges against the drivers; further, there is no provision of Road Traffic Act which authorises the questioning of passengers in taxicabs as to who is paying the fare, or which requires passengers to furnish such information. If such questions are to be asked it is the duty of the officer to administer the usual caution. —NEWELL v. CROSS, NEWELL v. COOK, NEWELL v. PLUME, NEWELL v. CHENERY, [1936] 2 K. Informations were laid against H. for using & against M. for causing to be used motor vehicles as express carriages otherwise than under road service licences, contrary to Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 72. The justices found that H. had been induced by M. to believe that the party was a private one, &, therefore, there being no mens rea, that he had committed no offence under sect. 72. The justices consequently found that M. had not caused an offence to be committed, & dismissed both informations. The informant appealed:—Held: as the drivers had not carried work tickets, the conditions of Road Traffic Act, 1934 (c. 50), s. 25, had not been complied with & resps. could not be heard to say that the party was a private one within that sect. Therefore in the absence of a road service licence, both H. & M. had committed offences against sect. 72 of the Act of 1930; mens rea is not a necessary ingredient of an offence against Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 72.—EVANS v. HASSAN, [1936] 2 All E. 76o i. Public service vehicles—Necessity for licence—Conveyance of private party—" On a special occasion."]—In a prosecution of the owner & hirer of a motor omnibus for using it as an express carriage without having in force a road service licence, it was established that the hirer, having decided to get up a party to go to Blackpool for the day to see the illuminations, hired the omnibus for the purpose for £14. The party consisted of the hirer & friends or acquaintances of his or of the owner's sister, & of friends of the these friends or acquaintances. There was no public advertisement. The owner of the omnibus drove. The hirer collected £13 12*s.* from the party which, with a contribution of 8*s.* from himself, made up the £14. The accused held no road service licence for the omnibus:—Held: the omnibus was a vehicle " used on a special occasion for the conveyance of a private party," &, accordingly, it was not an " express carriage."—M'DOUGALL v. PATERSON, [1933] S. The club was supported by the villagers generally, & the excursion party consisted of villagers, not all of whom were members of the club. The proprietors of the omnibuses & their servants took no part in collecting fares, which was done by club officials. In a prosecution of the proprietors of the omnibuses & the secretary of the club for using the omnibuses as express carriages without having a road service licence:—Held: although the particular excursion constituted a " special occasion," the party conveyed by the omnibuses was not a " private party," &, accordingly, the vehicles were used as express carriages & required a road service licence; further, it was no defence on the part of the proprietors to maintain that they were ignorant of the use made of the vehicles. Opinion reserved as to whether an ordinary football match would amount to a " special occasion."—MACMILLAN v. WESTERN S. —— —— "Permitting" user of motor vehicle—Meaning of.]—Resp. owned a motor-coach, which he was licensed to use as a contract carriage, but not as a stage carriage. A club which was organising a dance, open to the public, hired the coach to convey persons between the dance hall & the club's headquarters. Resp. received a fixed sum for the use of the coach, which was driven by his servant. It was arranged that the driver should collect tickets from passengers, to prevent unauthorised persons from using the coach. Tickets were in fact sold by the officials of the club entitling the holders to travel in the coach, which on the return journey set them down, if desired, at intermediate points. The tickets (which were plain cards bearing numbers but no indication of price) were collected by the driver, but no money was paid by passengers either to him or to the resp. Resp. was charged with permitting the vehicle to be used as a stage carriage, & the justices found that it was in fact so used, & that the dance was not a "special occasion," nor were the persons attending it a "private party," so as to exempt resp. under Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 61 (2). But they found that resp. was unaware that it was so used & therefore could not be held to have permitted the use: —Held: if a person hires out a vehicle in circumstances in which he ought to know that it probably will be or may be used as a stage carriage & puts his servant in charge of the vehicle to use it in any way which the hirer may direct, he is, within the meaning of the statute, permitting it to be used as a stage carriage, even though he does not actually know that it is so used. In the present case, since resp. knew that tickets were to be collected, & that either the price was included in that of the dance ticket or that a separate charge must be made for the coach tickets, he in fact allowed the vehicle to be used & did not care whether it was used in contravention of the statute. In those circumstances actual knowledge was immaterial, & the justices ought to have found the offence proved.—GOLDSMITH v. DEAKIN (1933), 150 L. T. 157; 98 J. P. 4; 50 T. L. R. 73; 31 L. G. When therefore opponents to the grant of a road service licence & backing authorising the running of a service of motor-coaches along a particular route appealed to the Minister against the grant on the ground that the service was not needed in the interest of the public, the Minister had no jurisdiction to make orders on the appeals which in effect were orders for the revocation of the licence & backing as soon as adequate provision had been made for road services on the particular route. In 1933 their licence was made subject to a provision that they should only issue return tickets for a journey from London & then back to London & a single ticket should only be issued in respect of an outward journey from London. In 1935 they secured the relaxation of these conditions by a proviso which allowed them to issue single tickets in the reverse direction subject to certain conditions, & their licence was so backed in the south eastern area. The Southern Railway Co. & Southdown Motor Services, Ltd., who ran services competing with appcts. & who, though they had not opposed the grant of the original licence, had opposed the insertion of the proviso, appealed to the Minister of Transport against the inclusion of the proviso & the Minister ordered its deletion:—Held: (1) no objection to the backing could be sustained on the ground that the conditions thereby imposed affected the scope or utility of the licence not in the south eastern area, but also elsewhere, including the area in which it was granted; (2) the Southern Railway Co. & Southdown Motor Services, Ltd., were entitled under the Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 81, as amended by Road Traffic Act, 1934, s. 40, to appeal to the Minister; (3) the order of the Minister was good, though it nullified an order made by the comrs. in the exercise of their discretion; (4) the Southern Railway Co., who were mainly concerned with rail traffic, had a right of appeal to the Minister, because under Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 72 (3) (d), the comrs. must have regard to the co-ordination of all forms of passenger transport, including transport by rail.—R. v. MINISTER OF TRANSPORT, Ex p. VALLIANT DIRECT COACHES, LTD., R. v. TRAFFIC COMRS. g iv. —— Police car.]—The driver of a motor car was charged with exceeding the speed limit on a road in a built-up area. At the time of the alleged offence the accused was admittedly driving his car at a speed which exceeded the statutory limit applicable to such a road, but it was proved that he had done so in good faith while following a police car for the sole purpose of ascertaining the speed at which the police car was travelling so that he might have evidence to place before the Chief Constable that the driver of the police car was guilty of an offence against the provisions of the Road Traffic Acts. The accused's car was not being used for police purposes in the sense of Road Traffic Act, 1934, s. 3, & he should have been convicted. Observed, that prosecutions of the police for exceeding the speed limit in circumstances in which sect. 3 does not justify them in so doing should be instructed & conducted on exactly the same footing as prosecutions against private individuals.—STRATHERN v. GLADSTONE, [1937] S. f i. —— ——.]—Deft., a taxi-cab owner, was convicted for unlawfully permitting his taxi-cab to stand at other than a cab-stand contrary to a municipal bye-law which read as follows : " Excepting at places designated by bye-law as cab stands, no cab shall stand in any street or lane unless hailed by a prospective passenger & then only for sufficient time to take in such passenger, or unless waiting for a passenger for whom the cab has been ordered. The fact of any sign being exhibited on a cab indicating that it is vacant or waiting to be hired shall be conclusive evidence that such cab is not waiting to keep an engagement. Nothing herein shall be construed as prohibiting a cab from stopping at the side of any street for a sufficient length of time, & in order to discharge a passenger, nor as relieving any cab-driver from the duty of complying with all bye-laws of the City relating to parking." During the time in question the car was parked at the side of a street & its windshield carried a card marked " Engaged," & deft. & his wife were at a nearby theatre, & when they came out they drove home in the car. On appeal :—

146a. —— Agreement not to compete with tramway company—Construction of agreement.]—A local authority entered into an agreement with a tramway co. that they (the local authority) would not promote or be financially interested in any vehicles plying for hire "between any points served by the co.'s service." The local authority later established a motor omnibus service running approximately parallel to the route of the co.'s tramways at a distance of some 300 yards away from any point served by those tramways:—Held: the expression "between any points served by the co.'s service" meant definite spots or places on the route of the co.'s tramways which were actually passed by the tramway cars & not points within areas the inhabitants of which might reasonably be expected to use the tramway service. Therefore, there had been no breach by the council either of the agreement, or of sect. 57 of the Cleethorpes Urban District Council Act, 1928, which substantially reproduced it.—GREAT GRIMSBY STREET TRAMWAYS CO. v. CLEETHORPES URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1934), 99 J. A bye-law was accordingly made which provided: "Every driver of a hackney carriage shall when working or plying for hire . . . conduct himself in a proper civil & decorous manner at all times." In a prosecution under the bye-law it was contended that the bye-law was uncertain as to the standard required & unreasonable, & that it was therefore void & unenforceable:—Held: the bye-law was neither uncertain nor unreasonable & was therefore valid & enforceable.—IRELAND v. WILSON, [1936] 3 All E. sq. Licence granted subject to approval of time-table—Failure to observe time-table—Liability of owner.]—Art. 14 of the Omnibus Bye-laws for Aberdeen, 1926, is as follows: "the proprietor of any omnibus shall submit, for the approval of the magistrates, a time-table showing the time of arrival at & departure from the stance . . . & every such omnibus shall leave the aforesaid stance . . . punctually at the time stated in the said time-table as approved by the magistrates." A co. owning motor omnibus, with which it was duly licenced to ply for hire in Aberdeen, obtained from the magistrates approval of a time-table showing the starting times of its omnibuses from a particular stance. On a day when it was anticipated that, owing to special traffic congestion, the arrivals at the stance of the co.'s incoming omnibuses would be delayed, a servant of the co. acting with the manager's approval, took out an additional omnibus to augment the usual service. A motor driver was charged in the Sheriff Ct. upon a complaint which set forth that over a distance of 7 miles on a public highway he "did drive a motor car, viz., a motor omnibus, at a speed exceeding 20 miles per hour, viz., about 27 miles per hour, contrary to the Motor Car Act, 1903, s. 9." The weight of the omnibus unladen exceeded 3 tons. None of the Statutory Orders were libelled in the complaint. The sheriff having repelled an objection that sect. 9 did not apply to the omnibus, & having convicted the accused:—Held: the complaint as laid was irrelevant, in respect that the provisions of sect. 9 of the 1903 Act

The driver was subsequently prosecuted for an offence against the Order of 1905. In defence he pleaded that he had not received the warning required by sect. 9 of Motor Car Act, 1903:—Held: a prosecution for a contravention of the Order of 1905 is not a prosecution for an offence under sect. 9 of Motor Car Act, 1903; &, accordingly, the warning or notice required by that sect. is not a condition precedent to conviction for a contravention of the Order.—TAYLOR v. HORN, [1929] S. They deponed that, for a distance of 300 yards, their motor cycle kept 20 yards behind the charabanc, & that, during this distance, the speedometer registered a speed of twenty-six miles per hour. An objection to the sufficiency of the evidence, on the ground that the method of registering the speed of the charabanc was unreliable, repelled; & conviction sustained.—TAYLOR v. HORN, [1929] S. 188b i. Driver's licence—Driving car while disqualified—In place to which public have access.]—The driver of a motor vehicle was convicted of an offence under sect. 7 (4) of Road Traffic Act, 1930, on the ground that, while disqualified for holding a driving licence, he had driven a vehicle on a road forming the access from a public highway to a farm. The road in question was part of the farm & led only to the farmhouse, where it terminated. It had no other houses on it, & it was not maintained by any public authority but by the farm tenant in terms of his lease. There was no gate at the entrance to it, & no intimation that it was not open to the public; & except at times in summer, when the farmer placed a pole across it to prevent the straying of cattle, there was no obstacle to prevent the public having access to it. The road was used by the public as an access to the farm, & members of the public not having business there also frequently walked on it. 199a. —— Speedometer—Whether corroboration necessary.]—Resp. was charged with driving a motor car on a road in a built-up area at a speed greater than 30 miles per hour. Applt., a police inspector gave evidence that he followed resp.'s car in another car for a distance of about a mile & a half & that the inspector's speedometer showed that the speed of his car varied between 35 & 42 miles an hour. A police officer also gave evidence that he tested the speedometer on applt.'s car & that it was correct. No evidence was tendered by or on behalf of resp., who submitted that there was no corroboration of applt.'s evidence as required by Road Traffic Act, 1934 (c. 50), s. 2. Applt. contended that the evidence was sufficient as it was coupled with the evidence of the accuracy of the speedometer. Without ruling upon the submissions made by the parties, the justices dismissed the charge, " being of opinion that in cases of this kind it is not desirable that the evidence of a police officer checking a person's speed from the speedometer in his own car should be accepted unless corroborated by another witness present at the time " :—Held : (1) although resp.'s submission was incorrect in point of law, the justices were wrong in laying down what purported to be a new rule of law of universal application, as there was no rule of law requiring corroboration in the circumstances of the case; (2) as, but for the justices' decision, resp. might have desired to call evidence by way of answer, the proper course was to remit the case back to the justices to hear & determine it according to law.—RUSSELL v. BEESLEY, [1937] 1 All E. Driving motor vehicle in a manner dangerous to the public, contrary to sect. 11 (1) of the Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43). Particulars of offence. Charles Wilmot . . . on a certain road . . . in the county of Lincoln, drove a motor car recklessly, or at a speed or in a manner which was dangerous to the public, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, condition & use of the road, & the amount of traffic which was actually at the time, or which might reasonably have been expected to be, on the said road." Applt. was represented by counsel at the trial, but no objection to the validity of the count was taken until after verdict:—Held: the point with regard to the validity of the count was one which under the old practice could have been taken on a writ of error &, although it had not been taken at the trial, the ct. were bound to allow it to be raised on appeal. As the count charged several offences in the alternative, it was bad for duplicity, & the conviction must be quashed.—R. v. WILMOT (1933), 149 L. T. 407; 97 J. P. 149; 49 T. L. R. 427; 77 Sol. 222e. —— —— Validity of conviction—Acquittal on charge of manslaughter in same indictment.]—Applt. was charged on an indictment containing two counts: (1) manslaughter of a man who was knocked down & killed by applt.'s motor lorry; (2) driving the lorry in a manner dangerous to the public, contrary to Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 11. The jury acquitted applt. of manslaughter, but convicted him of dangerous driving. On a submission that this verdict was bad, in that the mens rea required for the two officers was identical, & that it was therefore impossible for the jury to negative that mens rea on the first count, & to find it proved on the second, MACKINNON, J., overruled the submission, & upheld the conviction. He sentenced applt. to one month's imprisonment in the second division, but admitted him to bail, & granted a certificate that the case was fit for appeal:—Held: the conviction was right. Each count in an indictment is a separate indictment, & since applt. on an indictment for manslaughter could not have been convicted of dangerous driving, he could not have pleaded autrefois acquit if the charge of dangerous driving had been tried separately. It is, however, in the opinion of the ct., undesirable that a charge of dangerous driving should be made a count in an indictment for manslaughter. Objection was taken that it was incompetent to incorporate in the indictment averments of intoxication & failure to stop, matters which might each have been charged as a separate & independent statutory offence:—Held: the averments objected to formed part of the circumstances surrounding the crime charged, & might cast a light upon the culpability of accused with regard to that crime &, further, they gave accused notice of the case which he would have to meet.—H.M. 222g. —— — —— On charge of manslaughter.]—Applt. was indicted at the Central Criminal Ct., charged with manslaughter. By Road Traffic Act, 1934, s. 34, it is enacted that, on an indictment of manslaughter in connection with the driving of a motor vehicle, the jury can bring in a verdict of driving to the public danger under Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 11. The accused was driving his car along a road on a dark night when he collided from behind with a young woman, causing her injuries from which she died. The accused did not know that he had struck anybody at all. He was driving at a speed of about 20 miles per hour with side lights only. In his summing up to the jury, the judge referred to the opinion that if a person by reckless driving kills another the proper verdict is a verdict of manslaughter. "I apprehend," he continued, "that what Parliament intended [by Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 11] was this, that there might be cases where a man was driving a motor car in a dangerous manner, & then had the misfortune to kill somebody, where nevertheless a jury might think, either having regard to the age of the accused or for some reason or other, there were circumstances which would justify the jury in returning a less serious verdict":—Held: the direction to the jury in the summing up was adequate & correct.—R. v. LEACH, [1937] 1 All E. 222o. Failure to give hand-signal of intention to stop.]—Applt. & resp. were defts. in an action for damages for personal injuries caused by negligence. Applt. had suddenly & violently applied her brakes while driving her motor car in a stream of traffic. She gave no signal by hand of her intention to stop, but her car was fitted with a stop-light which was automatically operated when the brakes were applied. A car travelling immediately behind her was unable to pull up in time, & collided slightly with applt.'s car. Resp.'s car, the last one in the stream of traffic, was also unable to pull up, & collided violently with the car in front. Pltf. was a passenger in resp.'s car, & suffered severe injury. At the trial, the judge found that applt. had been negligent, in that she stopped too suddenly & failed to give any warning by hand-signal. Resp. was also found to have been negligent, in that he failed to apply his brakes sufficiently to stop, but instead first pulled out to his off side in an endeavour to overtake. Immediately after judgment had been delivered, an application was made to the judge to apportion the blame between two defts. in accordance with the provisions of Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30). The judge apportioned the blame, two-thirds to applt. & one-third to resp.:—Held: (1) such an application was within the terms of Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30), s. 6 (2), & the judge therefore had jurisdiction to make an apportionment; (2) such an apportionment was a matter of discretion for the judge, & would not be disturbed by the Ct. of Appeal unless it could be shown that the judge had acted upon a wrong principle in law; (3) a stop-light automatically operated by the brakes of a motor car does not give sufficient warning of the intention of a driver to slow down or to stop. A hand-signal should also be given. It is no defence to an allegation of negligence for a driver to contend that he has done everything suggested in the Highway Code, which is merely a code of suggested behaviour on the road, & is not binding as a statutory regulation.—CROSTON v. VAUGHAN, [1937] 4 All E. 232e. Excessive load—In relation to speed—Heavy motor car.]—Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 2 (1) (d), defines a class of vehicles to be known as heavy motor cars, & by para. 2 (d) of Sched. I., a maximum speed of 16 miles an hour is prescribed for heavy motor cars if all the wheels are not fitted with pneumatic tyres but are fitted with soft or elastic tyres. By Reg. 38 of Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) Regulations, 1931, a heavy motor car is required to have its maximum speed painted on it. By Reg. 59 of those Regulations the sum of the weights transmitted to the road surface by all four wheels of a heavy motor car is not to exceed 12 tons. By Reg. 10 of Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) (Amendment) Provisional Regulations, 1931, Reg. 59 is altered by the addition of the following proviso: "Provided that in the case of a heavy motor car with four wheels & propelled by steam . . . the sum of the weights transmitted to the road surface by all the wheels of such heavy motor car may equal, but shall not exceed . . . 14 tons, provided that its maximum speed with or without a trailer does not exceed 12 miles per hour":—Held: this proviso did not allow a vehicle whose maximum speed, as allowed by the Sched. to the Act, & painted on the vehicle, was 16 miles an hour, to carry a load between 12 & 14 tons if it reduced its actual speed on that journey to 12 miles an hour; & on proof of the facts that 16 miles an hour was painted on the vehicle, & that the load exceeded 12 tons, the justices were entitled to convict of an offence against Reg. 59 without any evidence that the speed in fact exceeded 12 miles an hour.—PRITCHARD v. DYKE (1933), 149 L. The justices dismissed the information on the ground that there should be no unevenness of surface or gradient between the places where the front wheels & the rear wheels stood, & that no evidence had been given of this fact. They also held there was no evidence that the defts. " permitted " the offence :—Held : the Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) Regulations, 1931, reg. 59, in its universal language, makes no exception with regard to the place at which or the gradient on which the weight is to be ascertained ; defts., in accepting the load to be carried, permitted the user of the vehicle contrary to the regulation.—PROSSER v. RICHINGS, [1936] 2 All E. 232g. —— To what vehicles applicable—Date of registration.]—A certain four-wheeled motor vehicle fitted with pneumatic tyres was stopped & found to weigh, with its contents, 13 tons. The owners were charged with having unlawfully caused or permitted the use of a vehicle which did not comply with the Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) Regulations, 1931, reg. 59. The vehicle had been registered under the Roads Act, 1920, in Sept. 1931. The justices dismissed the information, holding that reg. 59 did not apply to the vehicle as it was registered " on or after Jan. 1, 1932 " within the Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) (Amendment) Provisional Regulations, 1931, reg. 10 (ii). The informant appealed :—Held : the Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) (Amendment) Provisional Regulations, 1931, reg. 10 (ii) applies only to a vehicle which is registered for the first time on or after Jan. 1, 1932, & the justices should have found that the offence charged had been proved.—MACKINNON v. PEATE, [1936] 2 All E. 232h. Indivisible load of exceptional length.]—Applt. used on the road a motor-drawn trailer loaded with five fir trees, securely fixed, which projected over the back of the trailer for 32 ft. He was convicted at petty sessions for using a trailer in such a condition that danger was likely to be caused, in breach of the Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) Regulations, 1931, regs. 62, 85. He appealed to quarter sessions on the ground that reg. 51 provides that a trailer may exceed 22 ft. in length if constructed & normally used for the conveyance of indivisible loads of exceptional length. This appeal was dismissed : —Held : there was evidence on which the justices could find that the distribution of the load was dangerous to persons on the trailer or on the highway, & therefore the proviso in reg. 51 did not protect the user of the vehicle. —CRIPPS v. COOPER, [1936] 2 All E. car being towed.]—Accused, while intoxicated, was in control of the steering wheel of a motor car, which, having become disabled at night on a main highway owing to the choking of the gasoline pipe, was being towed at the end of a rope by a service motor truck which he had hired. The steering apparatus was in order. He was charged with having " under his care or control a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated," contrary to sect. 285 (4) of Criminal Code. The magistrate, holding himself bound by R. v. Higgins, 63 O. L. R. 101, dismissed the charge. On appeal by the Crown by way of a stated case :—Held : the magistrate was not right in holding that the accused could not be convicted, on said facts, of said offence. The order of dismissal was set aside & the case remitted to the magistrate.—R. v. HENRY, [1934] 1 W. W. R. 234 ; 2 D. L. R. 51 ; 61 C. C. C. 207 ; 41 Man. L. R. 545.—CAN.

sz. Leaving car without brakes set—In drive.]—The driver of a motor vehicle was convicted of having near a road quitted his vehicle without having set the brakes so as effectually to prevent two at least of the wheels from revolving. The driver had left his vehicle in the drive at the side of his house, & it had run down the drive, through the gate at the end of the drive, which was open, & on to the public road, where it ran into & damaged the wall & railing in front of another house. The public had no right to use the drive, & tradesmen & others seeking access to the house generally used a path leading from another gate : —Held : the Sheriff-Substitute was entitled to convict, per the Lord Justice Clerk & Lord Anderson on the ground that the drive was a road in the sense of the Act, & per Lord Murray on the ground that, on the assumption that the drive was not a road, the vehicle had been moving on the public road with its brakes not set. Opinion, per the Lord Justice Clerk, that the offence might be committed although the vehicle was not on a road.—DAVIDSON v. ADAIR, [1934] S. sc. Taking car without consent of owner.]—J. was charged under sect. 526A of Crimes Act with taking & using a certain motor car without the consent of the owner. The facts disclosed that J. had the consent of the owner to take & use the car up to a certain time. He used the car after the expiration of the said time, & was convicted under this section by the magistrate :—Held : inasmuch as deft. had the consent of the owner to take & use the car during a certain period, the subsequent unlawful use was not sufficient to constitute an offence under this sect.—Re TURNBULL, Ex p. JOHNSTONE (1935), 52 N. 232m. —— —— —— Driver not resting.]—Where a driver, by his own wish, & not at the orders of his employers, chose to spend part of the hours allowed for rest in returning home by train from the place where his period of driving ended :—Held : no offence was committed by the employers, their duty under Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 19, being to allow 10 hours "for" rest, not to insist on 10 hours "of" rest. If the driver chose to employ part of the time allowed for rest in some other way the employers were not concerned.—BEER v. FAIRCLOUGH (T. M.) & SONS, LTD. (1937), 156 L. T. 238 ; 101 J. 232o. —— —— —— Exemption—Business of agriculture.]—The holder of a licence to use an authorised vehicle under Road & Rail Traffic Act, 1933 (c. 53), was charged with having failed to cause to be kept a current record in respect of the period during which a driver in his employ was driving such vehicle, contrary to Goods Vehicles (Keeping of Records) Regulations, 1935. The driver was charged with having failed to keep such a record. The regulations specially exempt the driver & owner of a vehicle used in the business of agriculture from the duty of keeping or causing to be kept such records. The vehicle in question was loaded with agricultural implements & furniture in order that they might be moved from one farm to another :—Held : the vehicle was being used in the business of agriculture, & the offences charged had not been committed. A driver entered an item of information before the particular to be recorded was ascertained :—Held : his employers ought to be convicted of the offence of failing to cause current records to be kept under the Road & Rail Traffic Act, 1933 (c. 53), s. 16 (1).—NELSON v. COVENTRY SWAGING CO., LTD. 232q. Goods vehicle—What is—Sound-recording van.]—The driver of a sound-recording van drove it at more than 30 m.p.h. on a road where the speed of private motor cars was not restricted. The apparatus fitted in the van was an essentially permanent fixture within Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 2 (4) (b). The driver was convicted of an offence under sect. 10 (1), the ct. holding that the car was a goods vehicle within Sched. I., para. 2. The driver appealed, submitting that the car was a private car, as it was taxed as a private car & the apparatus was not a load within sect. 2 (4) (b) : —Held : the car was a goods vehicle, for the apparatus was a burden within Sched. I., para. 2.—BURMINGHAM v. LINDSELL, [1936] 2 All E. R. 159 ; 80 Sol. Jo. 367, D. C.

to be driven on the road without a person, in addition to the driver of the vehicle, for the purpose of attending the trailer, contrary to Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 17, & the regulations made thereunder. The Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) Regulations, 1931, reg. 77, provides that: "The requirements of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 17, with regard to the employment of drivers & attendants shall not apply . . . (c) where a motor tractor is drawing—(i) any closed trailer specially constructed & used for the conveyance of meat between docks & railway stations, or between wholesale markets & docks or railway stations." Although it was generally used for the conveyance of meat between docks & railway stations or between wholesale markets & docks or railway stations, for which purpose it had been specially constructed, on the date of the alleged offence the trailer was loaded with, & was being used for the conveyance of tiles. Applt. contended that, by reason of reg. 77, no offence had been committed, & that, alternatively, in so far as that regulation purported to refer to the user of a trailer, it was ultra vires:—Held: (1) Motor Vehicles (Construction & Use) Regulations, 1931, reg. 77, was within the powers conferred upon the Minister of Transport by Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43); (2) as the trailer was at the material time carrying tiles & not meat, it was not within the exemption in reg. 77 (c) (i), & an offence had been committed against Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 17.—UNION CARTAGE CO., LTD. v. HEAMON; EGGLETON v. HEAMON, [1937] 1 All E. 245a. Service of notice of prosecution—When excused.]—(1) In the proviso to Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 21, the expression "the ct." refers to the judge & not the jury, & "reasonable diligence" means "reasonable diligence on the part of the officer in charge of the case."

(2) Where the police have ascertained the name & address of the registered owner of the vehicle in time for a notice to be served on or sent to him within fourteen days of the commission of the offence, although they have not been able to ascertain the name of the driver, & they have not served such notice on the owner, the proviso cannot apply, &, if none of the alternative conditions precedent to conviction provided in sect. 21 has been complied with, the failure so to comply is a bar to the conviction of the driver.—R. v. BOLKIS (1932), 148 L. 245b. —— Sufficiency of notice.]—Within fourteen days after the commission of an alleged offence under the Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), a notice was sent to the offender, who had not been warned at the time of the alleged offence, stating that "you have been reported for the question of prosecution to be considered in respect of your having driven a motor car in a manner dangerous to the public." Then followed particulars of the day, hour, locality, & circumstances. The offender was summoned for driving without due care & attention at that time & place, & he contended that the notice was bad in that (a) it was not a notice of intended prosecution, but only a notice that the question of prosecution was being considered, & (b) he was prosecuted for a different offence from that specified:—Held: the notice was good. It sufficiently specified "the nature of the offence," & "driving to the danger of the public" was not a term of art referable only to Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 11. The accused had no right to complain that he was prosecuted for a less serious offence than was specified. 250a. —— Secondary evidence of policy—Notice to produce not given.]—On a charge of using a motor vehicle without there being in force a policy of insurance complying with Part II. of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), a police officer was about to give evidence of the contents of a certificate of insurance produced by deft. at the time when the vehicle was stopped, but objection was taken on behalf of the deft. that, as no notice to produce had been given, secondary evidence of the contents of the document was inadmissible. The justices upheld the objection:—Held: the evidence should have been admitted.

Applt. had been convicted on two previous occasions for driving without due care & attention. Applt. appealed against the sentence:—Held: (1) the offences of careless driving & of driving while under the influence of drink are of a similar character, & the ct. which convicted applt. was entitled to take into consideration the two previous offences when it imposed the sentence. There were no grounds for reducing the sentence of imprisonment; (2) the ct. had no power to disqualify for an indefinite period.—R. v. FOWLER, [1937] 2 All E. R. 380; 157 L. T. 558; 101 J. The enactment does not itself appear to aim at altering the substantive rules of common law touching the effect of contributory negligence; its purpose seems to be to change the law as to the burden of proof. The clause continued: "This refers to all obligations of the defts. either in respect of carriage, storage, or other operations in connection with the goods." The consignment note further stated that the defts. were not, & would not accept the obligations of, common carriers. In an action for damages for loss of the goods pltf. alleged that the seaplane had no compartment suitable for the carriage of bullion & reasonably fit to resist thieves, that the goods were placed in a compartment not fitted with any means of securing them, & that in consequence they were lost. He further alleged defts., as common carriers, had been guilty of breach of duty, & he relied upon non-delivery as evidence of negligence, & he set up an implied warranty that the goods would be carried only in a thief-resisting compartment. Defts. admitted non-delivery, but they denied that they were common carriers & that they had been guilty of negligence. On an order for the trial of preliminary issues:—Held: (1) on the terms of the consignment note defts. were not under the liabilities of common carriers but were only bailees & so could be liable only for negligence; (2) there was no implied undertaking to provide a bullion room; & (3) the only implied warranty was to use reasonable care & skill to make the seaplane safe for the carriage of pltf.'s goods so far as was consistent with the nature of a seaplane, & the consignment note protected defts. from liability for negligence (if any) in this respect, though it did not mention negligence specifically.—ASLAN v. IMPERIAL AIRWAYS, LTD. sd. — — Validity of Regulations.]—The convention for the Regulation of Aerial Navigation, 1919, provides that each contracting State is to register the aircraft of its own nationals & accord freedom of innocent passage to the aircraft of other contracting States, whilst denying passage to aircraft not possessing the nationality of a contracting State. It also provides that no aircraft is to be registered in any State unless it belongs wholly to such nationals. The Regs. made pursuant to sect. 4 of Air Navigation Act, 1920, departs from the terms of the Convention. They contain no prohibition of aircraft not possessing the nationality of a contracting State, & do not restrict registration to persons who have been defined as nationals by any Australian law. They purport to empower the Minister to exempt any aircraft or person from the requirements of the Regs., & differ from the terms of the Convention as to ascertaining the fitness of pilots. The Commonwealth of Australia being one of the contracting States, Art. 30 of the Convention defines State aircraft as military aircraft & aircraft exclusively employed in the State service, such as posts, customs & police aircraft, & declares every other aircraft to be private aircraft. This art. subjects to the terms of the Convention all State aircraft (other than military, customs & police aircraft), as well as private aircraft. so. Carriage by air—Extent of liability to passengers & owners of goods.]—Aviation Act, 1918, "an Act to control aviation in New Zealand," by sect. 3 conferred upon the Governor-General in Council the power to make regulations for a number of purposes (inter alia), by sect. 3 (1), para. (f), "for the issue & cancellation of licences authorising the use of aircraft, & prescribing the conditions subject to which such aircraft may be so used, including conditions as to the carriage of passengers & goods," & by sect. 3 (1), para. (i), "prescribing fines for offences against any such regulations, not exceeding one hundred pounds for any such offence."

Regulations (provisional) were made on Feb. 21, 1921, by clause 6, of which "passenger aircraft" & "goods aircraft" are defined as meaning respectively aircraft intended for carrying passengers or goods (including mails), for hire or reward, & including respectively aircraft on which passengers or goods are actually carried. Clause 1 prescribes a number of "General Conditions of Flying," including the licensing of the personnel of the aircraft in the prescribed manner. No. 4 of the Regns., under the title of "Penalties" provides in sub-clause 1 that where any aircraft flies in contravention of or fails to comply with regulations or any provision thereof, the owner of the aircraft & also the pilot or commander shall be deemed to have contravened or, as the case may be, failed to comply with the regulations; & in sub-clause 3 that any person contravening or failing to comply with the regulations or any provision thereof is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £100.

The Second Sched. provides for the certificates of pilots of flying-machines, which are denominated "A" & "B." "A" is described as "Flying-certificate for private pilots (not valid for flying passenger or goods aircraft"); & "B," "Pilot's flying-certificate for flying passenger or goods aircraft." The qualifications required to obtain these certificates are set out, & a higher degree of skill & of physical & mental health is required for a pilot desirous of obtaining a "B" certificate than for an "A." Included in the requirements for a "B" certificate is the passing of a medical examination carried out under the control of the Air Board, & among the requirements of mental & physical fitness are: (a Good family & personal history, with particular reference to nervous stability. Absence of mental, moral, or physical defect which will interfere with flying efficiency. (b) General medical examination. The appct. must not suffer from any disease or disability which renders him liable suddenly to become incompetent in the management of aircraft:—Held: Aviation Act, 1918, & the regulations made thereunder, so far as they dealt with conditions as to the carriage of passengers & goods by air, were intended for the protection of a particular class, that is to say, passengers & owners of goods carried in aircraft, as distinct from the general public—& imposed a duty for the benefit of that class, which conferred a right of action upon a passenger being injured by such breach.—DOMINION AIR LINES, LTD. v. STRAND, [1933] N. The consignment had the following on the back: "Carriage by air: The general conditions of carriage of goods are applicable to both internal & international carriage. These general conditions are based upon the Convention of Warsaw of Oct. 12, 1929, in so far as concerns international carriage within the special meaning of the said Convention." In an action to recover the value of the gold: —Held: the carriage by air of the bar gold had commenced; the statement on the back of the consignment note was not a sufficient statement that the carriage was subject to the rules relating to liability established by the convention; upon the facts pltfs. had not made a special declaration of value nor paid any supplementary rate within Carriage by Air Act, 1932 (c. 36), Sched. I, Art. 22 (2), & no question of the additional liability of the carrier under that article could arise.—WESTMINSTER BANK, LTD. v. IMPERIAL AIRWAYS, LTD., [1936] 2 All E. R. 890; 155 L. The conditions applied to both internal & international carriage. The contract in the present case was made in Mar. 1935, & by the conditions international carriage included all carriage by air between places within the territories of the high contracting parties to the Convention of Warsaw:—Held: the contract must be construed according to English law & high contracting parties meant the parties as defined in the English Carriage by Air Act, 1932 (c. 36), giving effect to the Convention of Warsaw. The term high contracting parties was therefore confined to those who, under sect. 1 (2) of that Act, had been declared to be such by order in council before the date of the contract. As Belgium had not been so declared, the carriage was not international.—PHILIPPSON v. IMPERIAL AIRWAYS, LTD., [1937] 3 All E. R. 318; 157 L. T. 112; 53 T. L. R. 850; 81 Sol. Jo. 590.

The ticket, which was available for fifteen days, was issued in three parts, one which G. was to give up at the place of departure, another at the place of destination, & the third he was to keep; & it stated the fare as £4 for the outward journey, & £2 8*s.* for the journey from Antwerp to London. If G. did not return within the fifteen days he would be entitled to a refund of the £2 8*s.* Great Britain is, & Belgium is not, a High Contracting Party to the Convention of Warsaw which is scheduled to the Carriage by Air Act, 1932 (c. 36), & which applies to "all international carriage . . . by aircraft for reward," & which defines "international carriage" as "any carriage in which, according to the contract made by the parties, the place of departure & the place of destination, whether or not there be a break in the carriage, . . . are situated either within the territories of two High Contracting Parties or within the territory of a single High Contracting Party, if there is an agreed stopping place within a territory subject to the sovereignty . . . of another Power, even though that Power is not a party to this Convention." The Convention further provides that "in the carriage of passengers the liability of the carrier for each passenger is limited to the sum of 125,000 francs." On the journey back from Antwerp to London the aeroplane in which G. was travelling was wrecked in was to be repaired to certificate of airworthiness standard, & a certificate of airworthiness was to be obtained from the proper authorities. After a meticulous inspection by the aviation authorities, the certificate of airworthiness was issued. The machine thereafter was restored by the co. to the club. Pltf. rested her case against the club on the failure to hold a ground inspection & breach of the statutory regulations in the non-holding of such inspection, but, on the evidence of pltf.'s witnesses, the ground inspection did not touch the defect causing the accident:—Held: so far as deft. club was concerned, that the necessary nexus between the injury to the passenger & the breach of the statutory duty had not been established. On the evidence, so far as deft. co. was concerned, the onus of establishing that the cotter pin was not properly fixed in position when it left the co.'s hands had not been discharged by pltf.—MAINDONALD v. MARLBOROUGH AERO CLUB & NEW ZEALAND AIRWAYS, LTD., [1935] N. sr. Pilot—Acting without certificate—Misstatement of Act.]—An information was laid against the accused charging him with acting as pilot of an aircraft "without holding a certificate of the Air Board of Canada authorising him to act, contrary to the provisions of the Aeronautics Act, 1919, & the regulations thereunder." The magistrate dismissed the case on the ground that there is no such Act & stated a case under sect. 761 of the Code:—Held: while the regulations made by the old Air Board under Air Board Act are still in force & still contain the original clause 33, which provides that no person shall act as pilot without a certificate issued "by the Air Board," & although this clause is still in force to the extent that it still imposes the obligation to procure a certificate before flying, yet by the effect of the change made by National Defence Act, 1922, in the personnel of the administration of the Act, the obligation is now to procure a certificate, not from the Air Board, which no longer exists, but from the Minister, which is not what the information alleges to have been contravened. Neither the substance of the charge nor the statement of the Act, both defective, supplied the information which the other lacks. Therefore the magistrate was right.—A.-G. sw. —— Liability of club for—Collision between car & aeroplane.]—Pltf. sought damages arising out of a collision between an aeroplane the property of deft. club & driven & piloted by defts., B., & a motor car the property of pltf. It was clear that the accident was due to the negligence of B. & the question to be determined was whether or not at the time of the collision the aeroplane concerned was under the control of B. as the servant or agent of deft. club:—Held: having regard to all the circumstances of the case as shown by the evidence the relationship between deft. club & B. with regard to the particular aeroplane was that of bailor & bailee & not that of master & servant or principal & agent & therefore pltf. could not succeed against deft. club.—EBBETT MOTORS, LTD. v. WESTERN FEDERATED FLYING CLUB (INCORPORATED) (1935), 30 M. sz. —— Negligence of.]—An aeroplane crashed as the result of a stall caused by loss of flying-speed when the machine was approaching a landing, & a passenger received injuries from which he died. Engine-failure was not a factor in the accident. It is not a test of diligence that the pilot may have been desirous of using all care; the test is whether he in fact exercised the care & attention which were customary & proper. On this objective test, deft. pilot failed at a critical stage to take the customary & proper precaution of maintaining air speed, & was guilty of negligence.—BAILEY v. TAYLOR, [1936] N. Z. L. ...n, & G. was killed. In an action by his widow claiming damages in respect of his death, LEWIS, J., found that the accident was due to the negligent management of the aeroplane; that the tickets issued to G. involved two distinct carriages, one from London to Antwerp & another from Antwerp to London; that the latter carriage, during which G. met his death, being a carriage from a place not within the territory of a High Contracting Party was not "international carriage" within the meaning of the Convention; & therefore that the liability of the defts. was not limited to the English equivalent of 125,000 francs. On appeal:—Held: there was one carriage only—namely, from London to Antwerp & back; it was "international carriage"; & therefore the damages recoverable were limited to the English equivalent of 125,000 francs.

260g. —— —— No liability to hirer's guests.]—Negotiations were entered into with the first defts. for the hire of an aeroplane for the carriage of the hirer & a party of guests. The aeroplane hired was in fact the property of the second defts. & the pilot was their servant. The negotiations, however, were conducted throughout by the first defts., & it was found that they held themselves out as principals. No mention was made of any special conditions. Just as the aeroplane was preparing to leave, an envelope containing a "ticket" was handed to the hirer by the pilot. The "ticket" was a document called a special charter which contained (inter alia) a number of conditions, one of which exempted the second defts. from liability for their own or their servants' negligence. The ticket contemplated signature by the "passenger" & its return when signed to one of the second defts.' officials. Before the hirer had an opportunity of seeing the contents of the envelope, the aeroplane started on its journey & almost immediately it crashed, two of the hirer's guests being killed. The disaster was found to be due to the negligence of the pilot. In an action by the widow of one of the guests on behalf of herself & her three infant daughters for damages under the Fatal Accidents Act:—Held: (1) as there was no contractual relationship between the first defts. & the hirer's guests, the first defts. were not liable to the widow; (2) a condition binding on the hirer would also be binding on his guests, as the burden was upon the hirer to pass on to his guests the information as to the existence of the conditions; (3) the condition exempting the second defts. from liability was not communicated to the hirer before the journey started, & the second defts. were not protected by it. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

Part I.—Definitions.

—— Broadcasting.]—Their Lordships think broadcasting falls within the description of "telegraphs." No doubt in everyday speech telegraph is almost exclusively used to denote the electrical instrument which by means of a wire connecting that instrument with another instrument makes it possible to communicate signals or words of any kind. But the original meaning of the word "telegraph" as given in the Oxford Dictionary is:

24a. Erection of posts on railway—Acquiescence—Implied licence—Revocability.]—Whether any & what restrictions exist on the power of a licensor to determine a revocable licence to occupy land depends upon the circumstances of each case. In 1926 the Crown proceeded against applts. alleging that poles, carrying telegraph wires, which they had erected on the roadway of a Canadian Govt. railway, were a trespass thereon, & claiming damages; alternatively the Crown claimed a declaration of the applts.' rights, if any. As to the main section of the telegraph line, the poles, as they stood in 1926, had been erected upon the roadway between 1905 & 1910 without leave or licence. As to two branch lines, the poles had been erected in 1893 & 1911 respectively, in each case while an agreement was in negotiation though no agreement was eventually concluded. The whole telegraph line, which was about 500 miles in length, was used by the public as well as by applts.:—Held: (1) on the facts, at the date of the proceedings all the poles were on the roadway with the licence of the Crown. Although the applts. had originally been trespassers in respect of the main line poles, many years' acquiescence & a claim to the payment of rent, had long since prevented them from being so regarded; in the case of the branch lines, it was to be inferred that the poles had been erected by licence. (2) The licence was revocable in the absence of any facts from which a contract that it should be irrevocable could be implied; having regard to the circumstances, the licence could be revoked only by a notice determining it upon a specified future date such as would give the applts. sufficient time, not only to remove the poles & wires, but also to arrange for erecting them elsewhere.—CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. In so doing they altered the telegraphic lines. Upon a case stated the question was raised whether the Postmaster-General or the Corpn. should pay the expenses of altering the telegraphic lines:—Held: the work had been carried out in conformity with a scheme under the Town Planning Acts, but that provision had been "otherwise made . . . with respect to such alteration," by Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112), s. 15, & the expenses were payable by the Postmaster-General under that sect. & not by the Corpn. under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 7.

The word "enactment" in sect. 7 of the Act of 1878 is not confined to the particular enactment which authorises the alteration, but includes general Acts of Parliament.—POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. BIRMINGHAM CORPN., [1936] 1 K. No easement for the extension of wires over deft.'s lands existed : & it did not appear that the telephone co. acquired any right to use the line. So far as was established in evidence, the pole was a nuisance to deft. & he acted in what he thought was the exercise of a right when he cut it down :—Held : he had good grounds for supposing that he had a right to abate what was to him a nuisance on his own land ; according to the evidence, the telephone co. was a mere trespasser there.—R. v. PIMMETT, [1931] O. sp. Telephone switchboard—Whether "immovable."]—A telephone switchboard with associated equipment belonging to applt. co. & connected with its telephone system by wires & cables was so placed in premises of which the co. was lessee as to rest on the floor without being attached thereto :—Held : the switchboard & its equipment, not being a structure incorporated with or adherent to the soil, or physically incorporated as part of a structure which was incorporated with or adherent to the soil, was not a structure "immoveable by its nature" within the meaning of "building" in art. 376 of the Quebec Civil Code. The test whether a structure is "immoveable by its nature" under that article is incorporation with, or adherence to, the soil, or physical incorporation as part of a structure so incorporated with, or adhering to, the soil. The question whether the structure of which it is claimed to be part—in the present case the poles, wires & cables of applt.'s telephone system—is commercially able to operate without its assistance is irrelevant, & it could not be said that the switchboard was physically incorporated in the structure composed of the poles, wires & cables of applt.'s undertaking.—BELL TELEPHONE CO. It may be, & I think it is, that very special considerations apply to an agreement with an artist who is to perform in public, because it is a matter of common knowledge that in a large majority of the cases the consideration to the artist when he accepts the engagement is just as much, if not more, the opportunity, certainly in the early stage of the artist's career, to appear before the public & make his reputation, which is of much greater value than the mere money wages fixed for the period of his employment. It seems to me it is for that reason that it is regarded as the essence of the matter that the artist should have the opportunity for which he has bargained, &, these

Pltf. sued the defts. claiming damages for breach of contract, including loss of publicity & reputation. At the trial counsel for pltf. suggested to the jury that pltf. had thereby suffered damage to his reputation. The judge in summing up the case told the jury that they must put some figure upon the loss of publicity because pltf. was not allowed to perform at the Palladium. He did not refer in his summing-up to the option in the contract. The jury returned a verdict for pltf. for the salary he had lost & £1,000 for loss of publicity. On appeal by defts.:—Held: (1) damage to a reputation already existing by not allowing an actor to appear in accordance with his contract was not a matter which could be taken into consideration by a jury in assessing damages for breach of contract. What had to be taken into consideration was whether if the actor had been allowed to appear that appearance would have given him an exhanced reputation. That distinction had not been explained to the jury by the judge, & therefore there would have to be a new trial on the question of damages; (2) pltf. had under the contract no absolute right to appear at the Palladium; defts. had an option as to the halls at which he should appear; in assessing damages for the breach of a contract which the defts. could at their option perform in alternative ways it must be assumed that defts. would perform it in the way most beneficial to themselves & not in the way that would be most beneficial to pltf.; & as there had been no direction by the judge with regard to this there must be a new trial on this ground also.—WITHERS v. GENERAL THEATRE CORPN., LTD., [1933] 2 K. A practice was stated to be in existence whereby, in cases where it was intended to erect premises for use as a cinema, justices were asked to approve the plans of the building to be erected, & thereby honourably to commit themselves or their successors to grant the licence after completion of the premises:—Held: (1) the Act gave no power to grant licences except in respect of premises actually in existence, & the practice was beyond the powers given by the Act, & unenforceable. Council, in granting licences to use premises for cinematograph exhibitions, to impose the condition that the premises should not be so used on Sundays, Christmas Day or Good Friday; but also to entertain applications for permission to open the premises for cinematograph entertainments on those days. The annual subscription for membership was £1 1s., which entitled a member & a friend to view each film screened by the society. Members of the general public were not admitted. On a charge of exhibiting a film which had not been approved by the censor, the question was whether such film had been exhibited "in any place for admission to which a charge is made in respect of any person or persons" within sect. 7 of Cinematograph Act, 1928:—Held: as the main, & substantially the only privilege, to which a member of the society was entitled, was the right to view the films, & as admission to the place where the films were shown could not be gained without payment of the subscription, that place was one "for admission to which a charge is made" & therefore the exhibition of the uncensored picture came within the Act & deft. must be convicted.—POLICE v. WELLINGTON FILM SOCIETY (INC.) It had not, however, been exempted as a non-proprietary club, under the provisions of sect. 709 (117) of Winnipeg Charter, 1918, as amended:—Held: the conviction must be affirmed. No doubt the city's decision could be made the subject of attack in special proceedings by the club, &, if the evidence warranted it, a mandatory order could be made directing the city to pass a bye-law for the club's relief. But the matter could not be so dealt with in these proceedings, & until such a bye-law had been passed there could be no answer to the charge. Also, the club had no existence apart from its members. The matters complained of in the information (treating the club by virtue of the admissions as being a non-proprietary club) were the acts of the members in carrying out the objects for which the club was formed. It followed that responsibility for them attached in criminal law to the members, with the right in the Crown to prosecute any one or all of them as it might determine.—R. v. THEIL, [1936] 3 W. W. 195e. Injury to performer by excessive lighting—Liability of camera man.]—A crowd artiste in a film production was injured by the intensity of the lighting in a ballroom scene. The lighting was not abnormal for a scene of this kind, but its effect was increased by the high polish of the floor. The film co. pleaded that they themselves were not responsible for the lighting & pltf. joined the second deft. who, pltf. alleged, was in charge of the lighting. Defts. then added a defence of common employment:—Held: lighting of the intensity used was not frequently used in the production of films & there was a duty upon the film co. to warn the artistes or to take precautions against injury to them; it was the system of lighting that was at fault & there was no question of common employment; the second deft. took no responsibility for the effect of the lighting upon the performers. He was there to provide the lighting the co. required, & the likelihood of damage to the performers was known to the film co., & was a risk which they took upon themselves. His employment afforded them no protection against their negligence in using such brilliant lights without proper precautions.—RUSSELL v. CRITERION FILM PRODUCTIONS, LTD., [1936] 3 All E. On an information charging defts. with keeping premises open in Sunday for the purpose of transacting business, to wit, the business of running a cabaret & with using a building as a dance hall, the same not having been licensed :—Held : the evidence disclosed that the dancing was an essential & not a subsidiary part of the contract which defts. made with each of his patrons on their admission, the building was used for the joint purpose of a dance hall & supper room & defts. must, therefore, be convicted on both charges.—POLICE v. NIXON (1934), 29 M. 28a. Action against stockbroker for breach of instructions.]—Pltf. sued defts., a firm of stockbrokers, claiming damages for breach of his instructions as to the purchase of certain shares whereby he sustained loss. At the trial judgment was given in his favour for £60 & costs :—Held : the action was founded on contract, & not on tort, & therefore, by County Cts. 72a. Apportionment of liability—When justified.]—Applt. & resp. were defts. in an action for damages for personal injuries caused by negligence. Applt. had suddenly & violently applied her brakes while driving her motor car in a stream of traffic. She gave no signal by hand of her intention to stop, but her car was fitted with a stop-light which was automatically operated when the brakes were applied. A car travelling immediately behind her was unable to pull up in time, & collided slightly with the applt.'s car. Resp.'s car, the last one in the stream of traffic, was also unable to pull up, & collided violently with the car in front. Pltf. was a passenger in resp.'s car, & suffered severe injury. At the trial, the judge found that

53 xiii. —— ——.]—In the case of a collision between two vehicles in consequence of independent acts of negligence committed by the respective drivers, both directly contributing to the accident & to the injury suffered by a third person riding in one of the vehicles, he having no control over the driver of the vehicle, both drivers are severally liable to him.—MACDONNELL & JORDAN v. PECH & LOVETTE, [1930] 3 W. applt. had been negligent, in that she stopped too suddenly & failed to give any warning by hand-signal. Resp. was also found to have been negligent, in that he failed to apply his brakes sufficiently to stop, but instead first pulled out to his off side in an endeavour to overtake. Immediately after judgment had been delivered, an application was made to the judge to apportion the blame between the two defts. in accordance with the provisions of Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30). The judge apportioned the blame, two-thirds to applt. & one-third to resp. :—Held : (1) such an application was within the terms of Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935, s. 6 (2), & the judge therefore had jurisdiction to make an apportionment ; (2) such an apportionment was a matter of discretion for the judge, & would not be disturbed by the Ct. of Appeal, unless it could be shown that the judge had acted upon a wrong principle in law ; (3) a stop-light automatically operated by the brakes of a motor car does not give sufficient warning of the intention of a driver to slow down or to stop. A hand-signal should also be given. It is no defence to an allegation of negligence for a driver to contend that he has done everything suggested in the Highway Code, which is merely a code of suggested behaviour on the road, & is not binding as a statutory regulation.—CROSTON v. VAUGHAN, [1937] 4 All E. 108a. Statutory liability to contribute—Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30).]—Pltf., who was upon the premises of deft. in circumstances which made him in law an invitee, fell down a hole. The hole had been left uncovered by the negligence of a contractor who was carrying out certain work upon the premises, & he was added as a third party, as deft. alleged that the contractor was liable to contribute towards the damages. The damages were agreed at £200 & the action proceeded solely in respect of the claim for indemnity or contribution by deft. against the third party :—Held : by virtue of Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30), s. 6, the third party could be ordered to contribute to the damages, & in the circumstances should contribute one-half of the damages ; Semble : it is not necessary in a claim under Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30), s. 6, that the statute be pleaded.—BURNHAM v. BOYER & BROWN, [1936] 2 All E. R. 1165.

108b. —— ——.]—A schoolgirl was carrying out a chemical experiment with chemicals supplied by the teacher of the chemistry class, when an explosion occurred whereby she was severely injured. The experiment was one for the making of oxgyen by heating a mixture of potassium chlorate & manganese dioxide, a perfectly harmless experiment. The teacher had purchased the chemicals from the second defts., receiving as manganese dioxide a black powder so labelled in a packet. In fact the black powder was a mixture of antimony sulphide & manganese dioxide, indistinguishable from manganese dioxide to the eye, but dangerous when heated with potassium chlorate. The second defts. had purchased this powder as manganese dioxide from the third party, whose invoice stated : "The above goods are accurate as described on leaving our works but they must be examined & tested by user before use. The above goods are not invoiced as suitable for any purpose but they are of the nature & quality described." The second defts. had carried out no test on the powder & had not advised the teacher that an examination or test would be advisable. The second defts. knew that the powder would be used for the purpose of school experiments, but they had not told the third party that the powder might be so used. The schoolgirl recovered damages, in an action for negligence, from the second defts., who sought an indemnity or contribution from the third party :—Held : (1) as the third party had no notice of the intended user of the powder, which might have been resold for a variety of purposes or in innocuous compounds or mixtures, & as the second defts. had not carried out a test, as the invoice prescribed, & which the second defts. had ample opportunity for doing, the third party was not liable to indemnify the second defts. ; (2) as the third party could not have been successfully sued by the schoolgirl, the third party was not liable to Pltf. accepted $3,000 from the Power Commission & S. & filed a notice of discontinuance of the action as against them, & the settlement was approved by an order which apportioned the $3,000 between pltf. & her infant son :—Held : defts. S. & the Power Commission were not joint tort-feasors with the other two defts. &, therefore, the settlement with the former did not preclude pltf. from proceeding with her action against the latter ; &, on the evidence, she was entitled to recover against them also.—NEGRICH (NEGRYCH) v. WERNER, [1937] 1 W. 167a. —— Necessity for breach before issue of writ.]—Pltf. was managing director & defts. were the chairman & other directors of a limited co. which was incurring heavy losses. Pltf. had urged that an investigation should be held to inquire into the reasons for these losses, but no investigation was then held. Pltf. was compelled through ill-health to leave England. Defts. at a board meeting, thinking that the co.'s poor financial position was due to pltf.'s mismanagement, suspended him from his duties & proposed the holding of an investigation. A report hostile to pltf. was duly made by the investigator. Pltf.'s salary had been paid after his suspension, but on one occasion no payment was made as the co. thought it had an account against him amounting to more than the sum due to him. Pltf. was not told why no payment had been made. He thereupon wrote to the co. demanding to know within two days whether he had been dismissed. On receiving no satisfactory reply, pltf. issued a writ against defts. for damages for wrongfully conspiring to procure a breach of his contract with the co. He also resigned his directorship :—Held : on the evidence pltf. had never been dismissed; a conspiracy to cause a breach of contract is not in itself good cause of action. The intended breach is an integral part of the cause of action & must take place before the writ is issued; directors in a board meeting cannot induce or conspire to induce that meeting to break a contract, though some may before such meeting so conspire; the action of those who induce others to break their contracts can only be justified where such action is taken as a duty.—DE JETLEY MARKS v. GREENWOOD (LORD), [1936] 1 All E. 168 ii. —— ——.]—Owing to trouble having arisen from time to time between pltf., the boatswain of a ship, & the crew a number of meetings were called to consider pltf.'s behaviour & his suitability to act as boatswain. Later the question arose as to whether pltf.'s name appeared on the records of the union as a "scab," & at a further meeting it was decided to write to the union making inquiries, it being agreed by pltf. that if the reply was against him he would leave the ship. The union replied stating that pltf. had sailed as a free labourer, & as he refused to leave the crew by ballot decided not to sail with him. This decision was conveyed to the master of the ship who advised pltf. to leave, which he subsequently did & was paid off. A few days later at a stop-work meeting, at which none of the crew were present, it was unanimously resolved that in view of pltf.'s conduct he be not allowed to sign on as a boatswain or leading hand. On a claim for damages :—Held : the substantial reason of the seamens' refusal to sail with pltf. was his behaviour to the crew whose action was neither wanton nor malicious & did not give rise to an action for damages; there was no evidence connecting deft. union or its President with the conduct of the seamen & the claim for damages must fail.—BROWN v. NEW ZEALAND FEDERATE SEAMAN'S UNION (1934), 29 M. In a further letter defts. stated that pltf. would receive full salary for three months. Pltf. accordingly received his full salary for three months, & thereafter he received from defts. a pension or remuneration at the rate of £200 per annum by monthly instalments of £16 13*s.* 4*d.* down to 1932, when it was discontinued. 146a. ——.]—The managing director of a co. entered into an agreement by which it was provided that he "shall not at any time while he shall hold the office of a managing director or afterwards solicit, interfere with or endeavour to entice away from the co. any person, firm or co. who at any time during or at the date of the determination of the employment of the managing director were customers of or in the habit of dealing with the co. & also will not at any time within five years from the determination of this agreement, either solely or jointly with or as agent for any other person, firm or co., be engaged, directly or indirectly, in any business similar to that of the co. within a radius of three miles from any premises wherein the business of the co. shall for the time being be carried on":—Held: the covenant, though prima facie in restraint of trade, was definite in date, contained no ambiguity, & was reasonably necessary for the protection of the co.'s trade. It was intended to deal with persons who, during the employment, were on the books of the co., & of whom the covenantor would have full knowledge; nor were the words "customers of or in the habit of dealing with the co." too vague to be capable of being defined. The covenantor was not in a subordinate position, but in one of responsibility, in which he would be likely to obtain full knowledge of the co.'s business. The covenant must therefore be enforced.—GILFORD MOTOR CO. v. HORNE, [1933] Ch. 935; 102 L. J. Ch. 212; 149 L. T. 241, C. A.

146b. ——.]—Prima facie every contract between an employer & an employee which is in restraint of trade is illegal & unenforceable as being against public policy, & the onus is on the employer to show that the terms of the contract are not more than are reasonably necessary for the proper protection of his business & are not injurious to the public. By a contract in writing made between pltf. co. & deft. in 1929, deft. undertook, during his employment by pltf. co., to "use his best efforts to keep himself continuously informed of & acquainted with all matters pertaining to safety glass . . . & at all times when required by the co. he shall give to the co. or their agent or agents all such available information as may be required." It was also provided that any "knowledge or information gleaned or discovered by" deft. "shall be the exclusive property of the co." & that deft. should do everything necessary to vest any patents granted to him in the co. In 1932 deft., in pursuance of the co.'s instructions & during working hours, conducted certain experiments & made a certain discovery. He communicated it to the co., but the co. did nothing at the time to patent or protect it. In 1934 deft. left the service of the pltf. co. Later in that year he found that the discovery would be valuable in the business he was then conducting, which had no connection with the manufacture of safety glass. In 1935 he obtained a patent to protect the discovery. In an action by pltf. co. for a declaration that the co. were entitled to have the patent assigned to them:—Held: the provisions of the contract between the parties was wider than was necessary to protect pltf. co. & were therefore illegal & unenforceable as being against public policy, but it was a term of all employment, apart from express covenants, that any invention or discovery made by the employee in the course of the employment was the property of the employer, so that the employee, having made the discovery, became a trustee of it for the benefit of the employer & as such trustee must give the benefit of the discovery to the employer when called on to do so & for that purpose assign to the employer any patent which had been granted to him (the employee) to protect the discovery.—TRIPLEX SAFETY GLASS CO., LTD. v. SCORAH, [1937] 4 All E. 498a. Clause against soliciting or canvassing customers—Contract with infant.]—Deft., while still an infant, entered into an agreement of service with C., a dairyman, as a milk roundsman. C. sold his business to pltfs., including the benefits of contracts of service with his employees. After a short time deft. left the service of pltfs. & served another dairyman, in the conduct of whose business he solicited & served the customers of pltfs. When deft. entered the service of C. he entered into an agreement of service with C. This agreement contained a restrictive clause with regard to serving soliciting or canvassing customers of the employer, & it was admitted that if the agreement with C. was binding on deft., it was also binding on him with pltfs. Pltfs. claimed an injunction & damages for acts committed by deft. which were alleged to be in breach of the agreement :—Held : the restrictive words were too wide & indefinite to be enforceable, especially in the case of a contract with an infant. The word "customers" alone was used in so expanded a sense that that by itself was sufficient to render the restrictive clause inoperative.—EXPRESS DAIRY CO. v. JACKSON (1929), 99 L. J. K. sp. How far contract severable.]—An agreement for service of eighteen months as a salesman contained the following clause in restraint of trade:

"8. Except in the event of the determination of this agreement of effluxion of time & the employer or Universal Business Directories, Ltd. being unwilling to continue or renew the employment upon the same terms & conditions, mutatis mutandis, as are herein contained the employee shall not within a period of ten years from the time of his ceasing to be employed by the employer or Universal Business Directories, Ltd. & at any place in New Zealand or Australia & either alone or conjointly with or as agent for or on behalf of any other co. firm or person & whether directly or indirectly be employed engaged concerned or interested in any business similar to the 'Universal Business Directory' or to any other business carried on or which may hereafter during the term of this agreement be carried on by the employer or Universal Business Directories, Ltd." :—Held : the only legitimate purpose of a restraint clause in such a case was the protection of a trade connection, but the attempted extension of the restriction to all New Zealand was neither necessary nor reasonable, & the clause, as its contents could not be reduced to limits that were reasonably necessary without rewriting it, was not severable but was in its entirety, although it would have been reasonable for the employer to have subjected the employee to some restraint.—BALDWIN v. MCIVER, [1937] N. n ii. ——— Whether extinguished by withdrawal from service.]—Under a contract covering a certain period between a travelling salesman & his employer, the pltf., the salesman, agreed to give his whole time to his employer's service, & that he would not sell or offer for sale any goods other than those of the employer. The contract placed no restriction on him after the date of the expiry of the contract, nor did it expressly restrict him from selling other goods if before that date he should be discharged for cause under a clause stipulating a cause for his discharge. The salesman, after working under the contract, left the service & entered that of a concern selling competing goods; & his withdrawal was accepted by the pltf. as a breach of contract :—Held : the restriction was not intended to govern the salesman after termination of the contract by breach, & that, if so intended, it was so wide, & general as to be unreasonable & unenforceable.—GERLACH-BARKLOW CO. v. MACPHERSON, [1928] 3 W. Deft. P. opened a combined cafe & candy shop & employed Z. to manage the latter. Pltf. sued Z. for damages for breach of the covenant & for an injunction to restrain further breaches & also claimed damages from Z.'s wife & P. for inducing Z. to commit such breach & from all the three defts. on the ground that they had wrongfully conspired to injure his business :—Held : the appeal should be allowed, the injunction prayed for granted & damages awarded against the three defts.—LERIK v. ZAFERIS (B. Held : the covenant was not too wide, & an interim injunction should be granted.

591a. —— Fifteen miles—Fifteen years.]—Deft. carried on business as an accountant in Leek, Staffordshire, having some 60 or 70 clients. He was not a qualified accountant &, desiring to be associated with a firm of accountants, the partners in which had professional qualifications, he sold his business to pltfs., a firm practising in the Potteries. Forty pounds was paid for the goodwill of deft.'s business. Deft. was to act as manager of pltfs.' branch in Leek, being deft.'s business which pltfs. had purchased. The agreement for sale contained a covenant by deft. that he would not carry on or be concerned in the business of an accountant within 15 miles from Leek town hall for a period of 15 years from the operation of the agreement. This area included Macclesfield & Buxton. In an action to restrain deft. from setting up in business as an accountant in Leek after he had ceased to be in pltfs.' employment :—Held : in the circumstances, the covenant was too wide for the adequate protection of pltfs. as purchasers of deft.'s business, & the covenant was, therefore, unenforceable.—BATES & Co. v. DALE, [1937] 3 All E. Under a similar licence resps. carried on a brewing business in Vancouver City, but brewed beer only. There were no other brewers operating in the City, but there were a few others elsewhere in the Province. By an agreement made in 1927 applts. purported to sell & assign to resps. for $15,000 all the goodwill of their brewer's licence or any renewal thereof (except so far as related to the manufacture of sake), & to covenant that for fifteen years they would not engage in the trade or business of manufacturing or selling beer, also that if they should sell their licence the sale should be made subject to the foregoing conditions :—Held : the agreement was an unenforceable agreement in restraint of trade, because in reality it was a bare covenant against competition, also because it was unreasonable between the parties, as the restriction was unlimited in area.—VANCOUVER MALT & SAKE BREWING CO., LTD. v. VANCOUVER BREWERIES, LTD., [1934] A. The vendor (deft.) & his son were employed by a rival butcher within the prohibited radius as servants at a weekly wage, neither having any financial or proprietary interest in the rival business. On application for injunction to restrain deft. from employment by the rival firm :—Held : (1) the vendor could not contract on behalf of his family, &, as the phrase "or any member of his family" was a separate & distinct covenant from his own undertaking, it could be severed from the rest of the clause ; (2) the vendor had committed a breach of the covenant ; (3) the restriction as to distance was reasonable.—BRIDGES v. CARSON, [1934] N. An action was begun against the vendor by the purchasers for an injunction restraining him from carrying on the business of a hairdresser & tobacconist within the borough of B., which they alleged that he had begun to carry on in 1932 in breach of the agreement entered into by him in 1913 :—Held : the agreement afforded to the purchasers more than adequate protection, & the action failed.—PELLOW v. IVEY (1933), 49 T. Applt. understood that his refusal to execute the covenant would lead to an early termination of his employment. About four years later resp. co. terminated the employment by giving applt. one month's notice, & soon after his dismissal, applt. entered service with another drug co. which had opened a drug store immediately adjoining resp.'s store :—Held : there was in this case legal consideration for the bond ; but, under the circumstances of this case, the bond was unreasonable & unenforceable.—MAGUIRE v. NORTHLAND DRUG CO., LTD., [1935] S. Deft. thereafter made daily sales of milk to one X., a retail milk vendor in W. The sales were made on the deft.'s premises in W., delivery of the milk to X. was taken there, & X. used it to augment the supplies distributed by him to his customers in the same town :—Held : said sales to X. constituted a breach of the covenant & pltf. was given damages & an injunction.—SNELL v. MIETTIENEN, [1931] 2 W. Pltf. applied for membership of deft. union but his application was refused. Pltf., thereupon, sued deft. union in an action at common law for damages resulting from its refusal to admit him to membership & recovered a verdict for £115. 1047. Add the following paragraph & citations:—

Prior to the passing of the 1927 Act, various committees of a local authority passed resolutions, which were confirmed by the council, to the effect that certain of their employees be required to become members of one of the trade unions in the resolutions referred to. By that Act it was provided that it should not be lawful for any local or other public authority to make it a condition of the employment, or continuance in employment, of any person that he should or should not be a member of a trade union, & that any such condition should be void. Shortly after the passing of the Act instructions were given by a committee that only men belonging to a specified trade union should be employed in respect of certain casual labour; & an employee, who was dismissed accordingly, obtained a declaration in the county court that his dismissal was illegal. A member of the council thereupon brought forward a motion having for its object that instructions should be given that the resolutions of the committees should cease to be operative; but the motion was defeated:—Held: in the circumstances the ct. should declare that it was not lawful for the local authority to require any person, as a condition of employment or continuance in employment, to become or to be a member of a trade union.—A.-G. v. BIRKENHEAD CORPN. 1063 i. Officers — Election — Construction of rules.]—Pltf., a member & a trustee of a trade union, was duly nominated for the presidency, his nomination paper being perfectly regular & in order. The committee of management resolved, without any warrant under the rules of the union, to reject his nomination on the ground of personal unfitness for the office, & subsequently the returning officer declared the other candidates, H., one of defts., duly elected unopposed, no ballot having been held, H. himself presided at the meeting in question, which so resolved, without having afforded pltf. an opportunity of being heard. The meeting consisted of seven members, of whom only two had paid their subscriptions, although the rules required a quorum of five financial members. The rules provided for an attendance fee of 2*s.* 6*d.* for each member of the committee, of whom the president was an ex officio member, in respect of each committee meeting:—Held: the decision of the committee of management was invalid on the following grounds: namely, the committee had no power to reject pltf.'s nomination; H. was present, presiding at the meeting; the committee did not afford pltf. an opportunity of being heard on the question of his eligibility for office; & there was no quorum of qualified members.—CRADDOCK v. DAVIDSON, [1929] S. sk. Honorary officer—Removal—Injunction.]—On an application for an injunction to restrain a trade union from removing pltf. from his office as honorary chairman of one of the union's branches:—Held: penal powers of the kind sought to be enforced must be expressly conferred & could not be implied, & as the rules of the union contained no express power to remove honorary officers from their positions, the proceedings of the committee & sub-committee were ultra vires, & pltf. was entitled to the relief sought.—O'NEILL v. TRANSPORT & GENERAL WORKERS' UNION, [1934] I. sn. Secretary—Misconduct—Attempt to influence ballot for officers.]—The rules of a trade union by rule 22 provided that the secretary should not be removed from office save for fraud, misconduct, or inefficiency. On an annual election of officers of the union the secretary had sent out to members with the ballot papers a leaflet bearing his signature & suggesting the candidates for whom they should vote. At a later date the members of the union, at a meeting at which the secretary was present, terminated his services:—Held: the secretary, in sending out to members the leaflet with the ballot papers for the annual election of officers of the union, was guilty of misconduct of such a nature as to warrant his dismissal.—ROPER v. COL-; [1935] Q. c i. —— Claim based on arbitration decree.]—The rules of a master plumbers' assocn. provided that members who tendered successfully for contracts should pay a percentage on these contracts to the funds of the assocn. A claim made by the assocn. against a member in terms of the rules was disputed by him, & a minute of reference was entered into by the parties referring the matter to arbitration & agreeing to abide by & implement the arbiter's decree, & consenting to registration & execution. The arbiter deemed in favour of the assocn. Thereafter the member was sequestrated, & the assocn., founding on the decree-arbitral, lodged a claim in the sequestration, which his trustee in bankruptcy rejected, in respect that, under Trade Union Act, 1871, s. 4, it was unenforceable:—Held: while the original claim could not have been entertained in a ct. of law in respect that it was based on an agreement excluded by sect. 4, no such restriction affected the claim here in question, which was a claim based upon a new & independent agreement by the parties to arbitrate & to implement the arbiter's decision—EDINBURGH MASTER PLUMBERS' ASSOCN. v. MUNRO, [1928] S. Pltf., having been employed for twenty-five years by a co. of wholesale stationers as foreman of their lithographic department, was promoted to the position of general manager of their entire business. In this capacity he supervised all their departments, including the lithographic department. The Society contended that he was still working at the trade of a lithographic printer:—Held: pltf. had ceased to follow any employment connected with the trade, & was not practically working at the trade, within the meaning of the rules of the Society, & he was accordingly entitled to superannuation benefit.—MCCORD v. SPROAT, [1931] N. There had been a dispute between deft. union & the Australian Workers' Union, & the members of deft. union had resolved that they would not work on the wheat stacks at Geraldton. Pltf., after being elected a member of the deft. union in Nov. 1926, accepted work on the wheat stacks : — Held : (1) there was a common understanding among the majority of the members of the union on the jetty that morning to carry out the policy of the union not to work with a man who had worked on the wheat stacks ; (2) such common understanding was brought about by defts., W. & M. ; (3) the members of the union combined to enforce compliance with their demand that their employer should terminate its contract with pltf. ; (4) such combination was unlawful in that the real intention was to deprive pltf. of his contract & thereby injure him ; & (5) pltf. was entitled to damages & an injunction.—COFFEY v. GERALDTON LUMPERS' UNION (1929), W. Two members of the union saw T. & told him that if he did not get rid of pltf. the bricklayers working for pltf. would be withdrawn, they being members of the union. Pltf., when T. told him this, said he would give up the contract, & did so ; subsequently he sued the union for damages. sb. Official control or guarantee signs or stamps.]—The amendment of the Trade Mark & Designs Act passed in 1928, adding paragraph (g) to sect. 11 of R. S., 1927, c. 201, was intended as a partial adoption of the terms of Article 6 (ter) of the Convention for the protection of Industrial Property, signed at The Hague in 1925, & to which Canada was a signatory. The effect of the addition of paragraph (g) was merely to add to the grounds upon which the Minister might refuse to register a mark. The fact that the Minister is now empowered, by said paragraph, to refuse to register trade marks which consist in whole or in part of "official control or guarantee signs or stamps" adopted by another country, is indicative of the fact that prior to 1928 it was not intended by the Trade Mark Act that a trade mark might be refused registration upon the ground that it consisted of "official control & guarantee signs or stamps."—BIRMINGHAM JEWELLERS & SILVERSMITHS' ASSOCN. v. STOCK, [1929] Ex. 27a. Addition of diminutive suffix.]—The word "Consolette," as applicable to a gramophone model intermediate in size between a table & a pedestal or "console" model is not an invented word capable of being registered as a trade mark under Trade Marks Act, 1905 (c. 15), s. 9 (3), as it is merely a diminutive form of the word "console," which is in common use in the gramophone trade. 64a. ——.]—On Mar. 10, 1930, an application was made to register in Part B of the Register of Trade Marks the word "Brick" as a trade mark in respect of a powder manufactured by appct. for use as a boiler-water purifier. The powder was supplied sometimes in the form of bricks & sometimes in powder form. The application was refused by the registrar, on the grounds (a) that the mark was not "capable of distinguishing" the goods of appct.; (b) that it might be calculated to deceive; (c) that it too nearly resembled a mark "Brico" already registered for similar goods. Appct. appealed to the ct.:—Held: the registrar had correctly decided that the word "Brick" was not "capable of distinguishing" appct.'s goods within Trade Marks Act, 1919 (c. 79), s. 2 (2), & there was too great a similarity between the word "Brick" & the mark "Brico." The application was opposed by persons or cos. whose names included the name "Grant" on the ground that the mark was not distinctive in the export market. The registrar refused to register the mark on the ground that appcts. had failed to prove the mark capable of distinguishing their whisky in the market for which registration was sought. Appcts. appealed to the ct. At the hearing of the appeals appcts. intimated to the ct. that they wished to limit their application to "blended Scotch whisky (in bottle only) for export." Thereupon the opponents offered to withdraw their oppositions & the appeal was ordered to stand over generally with liberty to appcts. or the registrar to apply to restore the appeal & appcts. were ordered to pay the costs of the opponents. The registrar having intimated to appcts. that, in view of the limitation offered, he did not intend further to oppose the application, appcts. applied to the ct. for further directions in the matter. Resps. who dealt in similar goods in the same town applied to rectify the register of trade marks by expunging this mark on the grounds that it was a geographical mark & not adapted to distinguish the goods of applts. & was calculated to lead to deception. At the trial it was held that the addition of the letter "s" to Glastonbury did not alter its geographical character, & that the evidence fell very far short of what was required to show that the mark was adapted to distinguish the goods of applts. & that the register should be rectified by expunging the mark. Applts. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: (1) the word "Glastonburys" had become distinctive of the goods of applts., & was rightly registered as a trade mark; (2) to exhibit to an affidavit a large number of letters received as answers to a circular is an improper method of bringing such evidence before the ct. The application was opposed by D., Son & H., Ltd., on the ground that the mark would conflict with the opponents' registered trade mark "Gaseous Fluid." The Assistant-Comptroller, acting for the Registrar, decided to register the mark, under sect. 21 of 1905 Act, subject to the limitation to the colours red, white & blue, as shown in the representation on the form of application. The opponents appealed. At the hearing of the appeal the opponents contended that the part of the mark consisting of the words "Gaseous Black Drink" had not been used for the purpose of indicating the proprietorship of the goods, within sect. 2 of 1919 Act, but merely as a description of the goods, & therefore the mark as a whole had not been used so as to fulfil the requirements of the sect.:—Held: the conclusion of the Assistant-Comptroller that the mark, with the limitation as to colour, was properly registrable under sect. 21 of the principal Act was correct, & the argument of the opponents was ill-founded, the mark as a whole having been used since 1897 for the purpose of indicating proprietorship. Neither the question nor the answer was communicated to appcts. The application was refused on the grounds that "sheen" was one of a class of words which never could become distinctive of the goods of appcts. but should be left free for the whole trade to use. On appeal to the judge it was found that the word "sheen" had in fact become distinctive of the goods of appcts. & the registrar was directed to proceed with the application. The registrar appealed:—Held: (1) there was sufficient evidence of the distinctiveness of the word "sheen" to justify the judge's finding that it was distinctive & therefore registrable; (2) it is irregular for the registrar to seek the opinion of the Trade &

Appct. co. had been incorporated about nine months before the application & had made some sales under the mark. The Assistant-Comptroller decided to register the mark. The registrar decided to register the mark. The opponents appealed. Leave was given to them to take the further objection, which by agreement had been treated as a ground of objection before the registrar, that appcts. had at the date when registration was applied for no bonâ fide intention to use the mark as a trade mark. At the hearing of the appeal, some of the declarants were cross-examined & further evidence was adduced:—Held: (1) in a case where the ct. has materials before it which were not before the registrar, the ct. has to exercise its discretion under sect. 8 (2) of Trade Marks Act, 1919, although generally speaking it ought to have considerable regard to the decision of the registrar, taking into account the fact of his special experience; the appcts. had failed to show affirmatively that the mark was not calculated to deceive, & therefore the application ought to be disallowed; (2) on the evidence there was within Trade Marks Acts no bonâ fide intention on the part of appcts. at the date of the application to use the mark applied for upon or in connection with the goods in question for the purpose of indicating that they were the goods manufactured by appcts. The Assistant-Comptroller held that appcts. had discharged the onus of proving that no reasonable probability of confusion would result from registration of the word "Erectiko" & he accordingly decided to register it unless an appeal was entered within one month. The opponents appealed to the ct. :—Held : the Assistant-Comptroller had proceeded on a wrong basis ; when comparing two words to see whether one would be confused with & mistaken for the other, the words should be compared as a whole & not merely compared syllable by syllable, & regard should be paid to the fact that the word sought to be registered was to be used upon goods similar to those upon which the opponents' mark was being used. the Register of a trade made in Class 45 in respect of "Cigarettes." The mark consisted of a label showing prominently the words "Hyde Park," together with other features. The application was opposed by a co. who were the registered proprietors of certain trade marks consisting of or embodying the works "Park" or "Park Drive." The opponents claimed that the names "Park Drive," "Park" & "Parks" had become distinctive of cigarettes of their manufacture; that appcts.' mark so resembled the opponents' registered trade mark as to be calculated to deceive, & that appcts.' user of their mark had been very small & had been confined to Turkish cigarettes sold retail by them at their stores in London. The opponents had offered to withdraw their opposition if appcts. would agree to limit their registration to Turkish cigarettes sold retail by themselves, but this offer, which was repeated at the hearing, was not accepted:—Held: contrary to submissions made on behalf of the opponents, the fact that appcts. had used their mark only upon Turkish cigarettes sold retail by them at their stores would not by itself prevent a registration in respect of cigarettes generally, & that the reference in the mark itself to "Turkish blend cigarettes" did not call for an express limitation of the application to Turkish cigarettes; although there was no likelihood of the full name "Hyde Park" being confused with the full name "Park Drive," there was a possibility that the name "Hyde Park," if used widely in the retail trade, would be contracted to or mistaken for the word "Park" or "Parks," to which the opponents' mark was in fact frequently contracted, & that in these circumstances confusion would probably occur; the proved user in the tobacco trade of certain other names embodying the word "Park" was relatively small & sporadic & did not affect the conclusion as to the possibility of confusion; the appcts.' restricted user of their mark in the past was sufficient to justify a registration which would cover a similar user in the future but, having regard to the very extensive user of the opponents' marks, was not sufficient to justify a concurrent registration which would cover an extension of appcts.' user to the opponents' market. The application was allowed, subject either to a limitation of the specification of goods to Turkish cigarettes sold retail by appcts. or to the giving of an undertaking by appcts. that they would use the mark only upon Turkish cigarettes sold retail by themselves.—Re HARRODS, LTD.'S APPLICATION TO REGISTER A TRADE MARK IN PART B. 277a. Triangle & word "Triangle"—Triangle & word "Nicholson."]—From 1865 onwards resps., Nicholson & Sons, brewers of Maidenhead, had stencilled an outline triangle with "N" inside on their "best pale ale" casks & had also branded "Nicholson" thereon. In 1927 they applied to register the combination as a trade mark for bitter beer. Their application was opposed by appts., Messrs. Bass, on account of the similarity of the outline triangle to the well-known Bass solid triangle mark registered in 1876, but the Assistant Comptroller allowed the registration, limiting the outline triangle & "N" to the colours white or black. About the same time resps. applied to remove the word "Triangle" registered by Messrs. Bass in 1926 from the register, & the Assistant Comptroller ordered the removal:—Held: (1) resps.' mark had been used both as a mark of quality & of origin before Aug. 13, 1875, & was therefore registrable as an old mark. In the case of a distinctive mark non-recognition by the public is immaterial on the question of "user as a trade mark"; (2) resps.' mark was not prohibited from registration by sect. 11 as being calculated to deceive, inasmuch as the general prohibition in that section must be read subject to the specific exception in sect. 19, which impliedly authorised the Registrar to place upon the register an old mark so nearly resembling a mark of another

sl. so. Deft. was the registered owner of a trade mark, part of which consisted of the words "Bound to rise" placed round the top of a balloon. There were many dissimilarities in the details of each mark. Deft.'s mark had been registered in 1882, & pltf. had used its mark for about fifty years & had registered it in 1912. Deft. placed part of its trade mark, namely, the words "Bound to rise," above a cake on a prominent part of its labels:—Held: deft. had not made an exact or substantial copy of pltf.'s trade mark, nor had deft., by putting part of its registered mark, namely, the words "Bound to rise," above a cake on a prominent part of its label, infringed the trade mark of pltf., as the words "Bound to rise" had not been so used by deft. as to be calculated to cause its goods to be taken by ordinary purchasers for the goods of pltf.—EDMONDS, LTD. v. SELF-HELP, LTD., [1932] N. (who had no intention of interfering in any way with appct.'s business) as the "Dorikin Studio":—Held: the words Dancing Studio were merely descriptive of the class of business carried on & could be ignored, & as there had been no confusion in fact the names "Doris Kinsman" & "Dorikin" were not so similar that it was likely they would be so confused. 277b. "Abermill"—"Hammermill."]—An application by applts., A. P. & Sons, was made for registration of a trade mark in respect of paper goods in class 39, & was opposed by the H. Paper Co., whose business was carried on in the United States of America, but which had business in this country. The H. Paper Co. had a trade mark in the United States "Hammermill Bond," which they made use of in this country after 1920, from that time exporting goods to this country, & each year sold about £2,000 in value of the goods in this country. In May, 1923, applts. adopted the mark "Abermill Bond," which they now sought to register, & their trade under that mark had been over £20,000 a year. Applts. chose the mark "Abermill" in reference to the locality where their paper for stationery was produced near Aberdeen, without any thought of the word "Hammermill" quite honestly, though they were aware of the mark "Hammermill Bond." On June 13, 1931, the Assistant-Comptroller decided that if the application had been under sect. 19 of the combined Trade Marks Act he would have refused the application, on the ground that there was a resemblance calculated to deceive, but though, therefore, he would not have registered it if it had been a new mark & the application had been under sect. 19, he exercised his discretion under sect. 21 of the Acts, & treated the case as within that section, because of there having been an honest concurrent user of the mark by the applts., & made the order for registration of "Abermill Bond":—Held: (1) the ct. ought to be very slow to upset the exercise of the discretion of the Comptroller or Registrar, who had to adjust various considerations; (2) accepting the view of the Comptroller & CLAUSON, J., that sect. 19 alone did not avail to secure the admission of the mark to the register, as to sect. 21 there having been an honest choice of the word "Abermill" & an honest user over a period of six years & no confusion having been proved, the ct. ought to permit the registration of the mark under sect. 21, even if it were deemed to be identical or nearly identical with the trade mark of the H. Paper Co., as that section was in no way controlled or limited by sect. 19.—Re HAMMERMILL PAPER CO.'S OPPOSITION, Re PIRIE (ALEX.) & SONS, LTD. (1932), 146 L. T. 493; *sub nom. Their application was refused, & the registrar in his decision dated Feb. 28, 1930, referred to certain trade marks already registered & owned by resps. Leave was given by the ct. to applts. to serve notice of appeal to resps. Applts. did not inquire as to the objections proposed to be relied upon by resps. At the hearing resps. disclosed for the first time that they had a certain other registered trade mark. The learned judge intimated that, if resps. wished to put that matter in evidence, they would only be allowed to do so subject to terms as to costs. Resps. did not seek to rely on the matter. Thereupon the learned judge directed that the matter ought to be relied on by the registrar, who was also a party to the proceedings. Counsel for the registrar was given leave to rely upon the said registered trade mark as a ground of further objection. Applts. then sought leave to withdraw their application without payment of any costs at all:—Held: on applts. by their counsel withdrawing their application there be no order on the motion.—Re COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPN.'S APPLICATION (1932), 49 R. France bore the word " Brut " & sufficiently distinguished in England, as the ct. found as a fact, that wine from the wine prepared for & sold in the English market. Pltfs., who were the registered owners of trade marks under which the wine prepared for English use was sold, took certain steps to prevent the Brut wine from being sold in England. b ii. ——.]—Pltf. was the owner of a registered trade-mark " Honey Dew " used in connection with the sale of a certain orange-flavoured drink. The shops where it was sold had a characteristic interior arrangement & equipment & the mark had become well known to distinguish the beverage sold by pltf. from that of others. Deft. subsequently registered the words " Flora Dew " as its trade-mark for a similar drink, displaying said trade mark in & about its shops much in the manner employed by pltf., & in a pronounced manner following the interior arrangement & equipment of pltf.'s shops:—Held: deft. could not be said to have adopted his mark with a view of giving a distinctive description to his beverage, but rather to take advantage of the business connection & efforts of a rival trader, & such trade mark being liable to mislead, should be expunged from the register. In considering whether one mark is an infringement of another resemblance between the two marks must be considered with reference to the ear as well as to the eye.—HONEY DEW, LTD. v. RUDD, [1929] 1 D. 511a. —— Use unknown at time of registration—Mark registered for " cinematograph films "—Whether " talkie films " included.]—Appcts., Columbia Pictures Corpn., an American Corpn. manufacturing & dealing in cinematograph films, applied on Apr. 9, 1930, to rectify the Register by excluding " cinematograph films & goods of a like description to cinematograph films," from the specification of goods for which resps.' three trade marks, all of which contained the word " Columbia " prominently, were registered in class 8. An application by the Corpn. for a mark which contained the figure of Liberty & the words " Columbia Pictures " had been refused registration under sect. 19. The following ground of objection was (inter alia) relied on by appcts. : (1) that there had been no bona fide user by resps. of any of their said trade marks in respect of cinematograph films or goods of a like description during the five years immediately preceding the application to rectify. Resps. did not make nor had they ever made cinematograph films for commercial purposes. At the end of 1927 cinematograph films with sound accompaniment began to be shown commercially. Later the sound accompaniment was provided by a photographic record of the sound made at the side of the film used to project a picture on the screen. Resps. had no objection, if the words " Cinematograph films " were held only to describe films for the production of visual pictures, to the exclusion of this class of goods from their specification of goods in class 8. But, if the words were held to include films used to record & reproduce a sound accompaniment, then resps. objected to the exclusion of such goods. At the trial it was held that " cinematograph films " included films which record & reproduce acoustic matter whether alone or jointly with visual matter ; that films for acoustic reproduction, sought to be excluded, were not known at the date of resps.' registration ; that in these circumstances non-user during the five years immediately preceding the application to rectify could not be attributed to a definite intention not to use nor to a deliberate intention to abandon such trade marks in respect of such goods ; that the question of exclusion was a matter of discretion & that special circumstances must be considered ; & that the special circumstances explained the non-user. An Order was made to exclude from the specification of goods for which the resps.' three trade marks were registered in class 8, " cinematograph films for visual exhibition to the public without the addition as an integral part of such films, of any means for the reproduction of sound." Appcts. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal :—Held : non-user of the trade mark in respect of talking films during the whole of the five years immediately preceding the application for rectification having been proved, resps. in order to escape from the provisions of sect. 37 of Trade Marks Act, 1905, must show that their failure to use their mark at some time during the five years was due to special circumstances in the trade ; resps. had at all events about fifteen months during which they could have produced talking films, but they refrained for reasons connected with their own business, & their non-user was not due to special circumstances in the trade. The appeal was allowed. An order was made to exclude from the specification of goods for which resps.' three trade marks were registered in class 8 " goods of the following description videlicet : cinematograph films being transparencies adapted for the purpose of producing the illusion of moving pictures with or without a sound track incorporated thereon."—Re COLUMBIA GRAPHOPHONE CO., LTD. Resps. had registered a specific trade mark consisting of the representation of a sheep arranged in front of the representation of radiating rays of light arranged under a rectangular figure, together with the name Dominion cutting through the rectangular figure & the words Woollens & Worsteds, Ltd. flanked on either side, as applied to woollens, worsteds, knitted goods & wearing apparel. The ct. found that petitioner adopted its trade mark some time previous to the adoption by resps. of their mark & the registration thereof, & :—Held : inasmuch as the most conspicuous part of the two trade marks & that which caught the eye was the ram which was similar in general shape & appearance, resps.' trade mark was calculated to deceive & was registered without sufficient cause & should be expunged.—TURNBULL (C.) The ct. found not only that there was a likelihood of confusion but that there had been actual confusion in the minds of the public to the prejudice & detriment of petitioner :—Held : a trade mark may be acquired by user & that the prior user of an unregistered trade mark, the use of which by another is calculated to deceive, is entitled to protection, whether such use by another be made fraudulently & with deliberate intent to deceive or not. all the six trade marks in question. In 1925 he promoted a French co., Parfumerie J. Lesquendieu Société Anonyme, to acquire this business. He purported to reserve for himself the right to exploit the marks in foreign countries. In 1926 an English co. was formed, called J. Lesquendieu, Ltd., which had the exclusive right to sell the products of the French co. in England, Scotland, Ireland & Wales. In 1931 & 1932 J. Lesquendieu registered the same six trade marks in England; in Aug. 1933, the Parfumerie Lesquendieu Société Anonyme moved to expunge the marks from the register. The appcts. contended that the marks were known in this country as being applied to their goods; that resp. had no bonâ fide intention to use the marks, & had not in fact used them. Resp. alleged that appcts. had not been aggrieved by the registrations; & that he had in fact manufactured goods bearing the marks:—Held: resp. when he registered the marks was under contractual arrangements with appcts., under which he undertook not to take any interest directly or indirectly for his own account, or for account of a third party, in any perfumery business for a period of twenty-five years from Mar. 1, 1929 (with a saving as to the interest in the English co.), & he had at the times when he registered the marks no bonâ fide intention to use the marks; the marks had become distinctive of goods manufactured by appcts. & any user of them for goods not so manufactured would be calculated to deceive; appcts. were parties aggrieved & resp. had no bonâ fide claim to be the owner of the marks; & the registration must be expunged from the register. Resp. was ordered to pay the costs of the motion, including the requisite fee for obtaining rectification.—Re LESQUENDIEU TRADE MARKS (1934), 51 R. P. C. 273.

516a. Trade mark of gas company—Application to limit as to area.]—The South Metropolitan Gas Co. were the registered proprietors of a trade mark consisting of the word "Metro," originally registered in 1910, in respect of "appliances or apparatus to be used in connection with the manufacture, testing, regulating, measuring & consumption of gas, & appliances or apparatus to be used in connection with the treatment of any products obtained from the manufacture of gas, all the said appliances or apparatus being included in Class 8." On Apr. 1, 1933, Metropolitan Gas Meters, Ltd., gave notice of motion for rectification of the register by removal of the mark or limitation of the territory for which the mark was registered, on the grounds that at the date of registration resps. did not use or intend to use the mark except in the area to which by statute they were entitled to supply gas, & alternatively that the application for registration was ultra vires the powers of resps. & that it was ultra vires the powers of resps. to be proprietors of the mark. At the hearing appcts. contended that on a proper construction of the Acts governing resps. they had no power to supply meters or other apparatus outside a limited area, that there was an irrebuttable presumption that they would not exceed their statutory powers, that the ct. ought accordingly to assume that they had no bonâ fide intention to use, & had not in fact used the mark outside that area, & that the registration ought therefore to be limited, either under the provisions of sect. 35 or sect. 37 of the Trade Marks Acts, 1905–1919, to the area to which by statute resps. were entitled to supply gas. Resps. denied that their statutory power to sell meters was limited as to area, & further contended that, even if it were so limited, this afforded no ground for limitation of the registration:—Held: (1) resps. had by statute a general power to deal in meters & other appliances, there was no evidence that they had not exercised that power outside the area to which they were entitled to supply gas, & accordingly there was no ground upon which the registration could be limited to a particular area; (2) on the supposition that resps.' power to deal in meters was, upon the true construction of the Acts, limited to a definite area, sect. 37 of the Trade Marks Acts was limited to the use of a trade mark on goods & had nothing to do with area or territory, & the section had no application; it would not have been right for the registrar to have refused registration of the mark merely because the use or intended use of the mark was within a limited area; at the date when the registration was made there was no power to impose a limitation as to area, the original registration was in any case protected by the provisions of sect. 41, & it would not be right now to limit the registration under sect. 35 merely because the ct. now had a power in certain cases to make conditions as to area which it had not got at the time when the mark was registered. The motion was dismissed with costs.—Re SOUTH METROPOLITAN GAS CO. TRADE MARK (No. 321,951) (1933), 50 R. P. C. 321.

539a. Costs of affidavits—Discretion of taxing master.]—Appcts., Columbia Pictures Corpn., applied by motion to rectify the register of trade marks & in support of their application they filed six affidavits. Resps. to that motion, the Columbia Graphophone Co., Ltd., filed in answer one hundred & seventy-four affidavits & alleged that it was essential to their case to have a large body of trade evidence & they challenged appcts. to produce a like volume of evidence. Appcts. thereupon filed two hundred & eighty-one affidavits in reply. The motion was allowed with costs, but a direction was given to the taxing master to have special regard to the nature of the evidence filed when he taxed appcts.' costs. The taxing master allowed the appcts. their costs in respect of two hundred affidavits. Appcts. alleged that he had acted arbitrarily in that the affidavits were all of a similar nature & directed to similar matters & that there was no principle on which he could decide to allow the costs in respect of two hundred of them & to disallow the costs of the remaining eighty-one:—Held: the matter was solely in the taxing master's discretion; in the absence of any mistake in principle the ct. should not interfere. The summons was dismissed with costs.—Re COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPN., APPLICATION (1933), 50 R. P. C. 377.

In 1927, H., by deed, assigned to pltf. the said trade mark with the goodwill of H., relating to the sale of cereal foods under the said mark. Notwithstanding this assignment, H. continued to carry on his business as before, using the trade mark along with his trade name on the cartons of the product milled & sold by him ; & the goodwill aforesaid was never, in fact, transferred. Pltf. did not manufacture but merely sold the product of H., marked as aforesaid, with nothing on the product associating it with them. Pltf. later registered the same trade mark to be used in the sale of all food products, including cattle, hog & hen foods, thereby attempting to extend the scope of the first trade mark. The present action is to restrain defts. from using said mark in the sale of bread :—Held : an assignment in gross of the right to a name is invalid, & as the goodwill of H. was never in fact transferred to pltf., & as the trade mark "Mello-Creme" was assigned by itself, notwithstanding what was alleged in the deed of transfer nothing passed to pltf. by the said transfer, & pltf. had no locus standi to take the present action.—MELLO-CREME PRODUCTS v. EWAN'S BREAD, LTD., [1930] Ex. W. who was carrying on business in Sydney in 1930 obtained consignments of the polish from areas outside pltf.'s control. In a suit by L. to restrain W. from passing off the polish so obtained by him as & for the goods of L., the ct. found as a fact that the word "Ezywurk" & the get up of the polish had become associated in the New South Wales market, other than the Broken Hill District, solely with goods of L.'s manufacture, & granted the injunction asked for.—LEACH v. WYATT (1931), 48 N. obtained from defts. by means of a " trap " order a board of another make, under circumstances which pltfs. alleged amounted to infringement of trade mark & passing off. The only connection of the board supplied with pltfs.' mark was that the mark was mentioned in a letter giving a firm order after the board which was supplied had been inspected at an interview. Subsequently, after issue of the writ, pltfs. did not proceed with the action, which was only revived after a considerable delay, because defts. inquired as to the position, & issued a summons :—Held : the supply of the board under these circumstances was not an infringement ; as regards passing off, the trap order was of an objectionable nature, & a single trap order without evidence of system or of dishonesty was insufficient, & the action must be dismissed [illegible] against them, & the action must be dismissed with costs.—ABBEY SPORTS CO., LTD. v. PRIEST BROS. 613a. Selection—What amounts to.]—In 1910 R. commenced selling oil in & around Cambridge as " Somerlite " oil & registered in respect thereof a device mark incorporating the word Somerlite. In 1914 R. started a branch at Fordham & sold oil under the name Somerlite in an area round Fordham. In 1915, deft. took over the business at Fordham & sold oil supplied to her by R. under the name Somerlite, & used in connection therewith tins bearing the device mark & R.'s name. In 1925 deft. entered into a contract for the supply of oil from C. & Co., with R.'s knowledge, &, as pltfs. alleged, under his direction ; & it was alleged that prior to the date of the contract, R. had tested the oil supplied by C. & Co. This oil deft., with R.'s knowledge, continued to sell as Somerlite. In 1931 R. registered Somerlite as a word mark & assigned the two marks to pltfs. In 1932 pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the two marks & for passing off, alleging that deft. had infringed by selling oil not supplied by pltfs. as Somerlite. Deft. admitted the sale, but denied that she had infringed or passed off, & moved for rectification of the register by expunging the name mark, on the ground that it was not adapted to distinguish the goods of pltfs. & was calculated to deceive by reason of the continuous user of the mark on oil by deft. on her own account over an extensive territory for many years. She further alleged that pltfs. & their predecessor had known for many years of her use of the mark & were debarred from relief by laches or acquiescence. Pltfs. alleged that the oil supplied by C. & Co. was R.'s oil by virtue of his selection within Trade Marks Acts, 1905–1919, s. 3 :—Held : there had been no selection of deft.'s oil by R. within sect. 3 of the Trade Marks Acts ; when rectification is sought in respect of a mark which is per se registrable under sect. 9 (1) to (4), the circumstances under which such mark was used prior to registration must be considered ; the word mark was not distinctive of R. at the date of registration & was calculated to deceive & must be expunged. 739a. ——.]—In an action to restrain infringement of registered trade mark pltfs. by their statement of claim pleaded their registration but did not plead user of the mark prior to the date of registration. Defts. pleaded user by them of the same mark prior to the date of the registration of pltfs.' mark, but did not plead that they had used the mark prior to the user (if any) of pltfs. At the trial, pltfs. tendered evidence of user by them of their trade mark prior to the date of the registration pleaded. Defts. contended that such evidence was inadmissible in that user had not been pleaded by pltfs. They further contended that in setting up a defence under sect. 41 of the Trade Marks Acts where user prior to registration had been pleaded by pltfs. it was sufficient for defts. to plead user by them prior to the date of pltfs.' registration, & unnecessary & superfluous to plead user prior to the date of pltfs.' user when no such user by pltfs. was alleged in the statement of claim, & that, if pltfs. wished to rely upon such user, it must be pleaded by way of reply:—Held: the statement of claim was correct in that it was not necessary for a pltf. who relied upon a registered trade mark to plead user either before or after the date of registration, & accordingly the evidence of user prior to registration was admissible; in order to set up a defence under sect. 41 of the Trade Marks Acts, deft. must plead user by him at a date anterior to the user or registration of pltfs., & it was not sufficient to plead user prior to registration simpliciter. An injunction to restrain defts. from infringing the registered trade mark was granted.—SMITH, BARTLET & Co. v. BRITISH PURE OIL GREASE & CARBIDE Co., LTD. (1933), 51 R. P. C. 157.

740a. Mark not calculated to deceive—Trade Marks Act, 1919 (c. 79), s. 4.]—Pltfs., who were the registered owners of the word "Kleenoff" in Part B. of the register, brought an action against defts. in respect of their use of the word "Kleenup." Both words were used in respect of cleaners for cooking stoves, but the submission that they were too descriptive to be distinctive was rejected. The judge held that defts. had failed to establish the special defence (not calulated to deceive) under sect. 4 of the 1919 Act, & that they had infringed. An injunction was granted against infringement but not against passing off, the issues being similar, pltfs. were given their whole costs. In the absence of a motion to expunge the trade mark, & in view of the peculiar nature of a Part B. mark, a certificate of validity was refused. Defts. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: the mere absence of evidence of actual deception did not enable defts. to rely on the special defence in sect. 4, for the ct. could consider probabilities, for example, in telephoned or written orders, & that deft. had not established any special defence under the proviso in sect. 4, & that a difference of get-up did not assist defts. on the question of infringement, & that defts. had infringed.

Per ROMER, L.J.: the words "upon or in connection with the goods" should be implied in sect. 4. Mis-spelling, when imitated, is relevant in deciding infringement.

Per MAUGHAM, L.J.: the words "the user of which pltf. complains" in sect. 4 extend to a consideration of the probable consequences arising from the use of a mark colourably resembling the registered mark. The test of infringement is the same where a trade mark has a descriptive element as where it has not, except so far as that element may be common to the trade. The appeal was dismissed with costs.—BALE & CHURCH, LTD. v. SUTTON, PARSONS & SUTTON & ASTRAH PRODUCTS (1934), 51 R. P. C. 129, C. A.

740b. Use as description—Use calculated to deceive.]—Pltfs. were the registered owners of a trade mark "Izal" No. 171,812 registered in 1893 in Class 3 in respect of chemical substances prepared for use in medicine & pharmacy, & they also claimed user of the mark Izal on their disinfectant fluids & on their toilet rolls which were medicated with Izal. Defts. sold toilet rolls in wrappers with the words "Medicated with Izal" on them, the words "medicated with" being in small letters compared with those of the word "Izal." Pltfs. commenced an action against defts. to restrain infringement of trade mark & passing off. Defts. claimed the right to use the words "Izal" & "medicated with" in a diamond shape as being a bonâ fide description of their goods which they had in fact medicated with Izal disinfectant fluid:—Held: defts.' use of the mark Izal on their toilet roll wrappers was an infringement of pltfs.' trade mark "Izal," defts.' wrapper not constituting a fair description of the character or quality of the goods within sect. 44; also, there was evidence sufficient to support an action to restrain passing off of defts.' toilet rolls as & for pltfs. toilet rolls, but an injunction to restrain infringement of the trade mark afforded ample protection to pltfs. Judgment was given for pltfs. with costs & an injunction to restrain infringement was granted; also, an unlimited registration for a particular Class of goods conferred a right to that trade mark for all the goods in that class whenever they may be included. Semble: costs of & occasioned by amendment do not include costs thrown away by amendment.—NEWTON CHAMBERS & Co., LTD. v. NEPTUNE WATERPROOF PAPER Co., LTD. Appcts. had taken steps to revoke the patent, whereupon resps. had surrendered it. Appcts. moved to rectify the register by expunging the design. 908a. ——.]—Registration was obtained in class 12 for a design in respect of its application to a slipper-bag. Pltf. commenced an action to restrain defts. from selling or offering for sale an alleged infringement of the design. Defts. denied that they had infringed the design, & alleged that the design was neither new or original. Defts. had not moved to rectify the register, but at the trial, at the request of both parties, validity was treated as put in issue:—Held: pltf.'s design possessed novelty & originality & it was valid; the alleged infringement was not identical with the registered design, but that it differed materially therefrom & that it was not an infringement. The action was dismissed with costs & the design was ordered to be expunged from the register with costs against pltfs. including the cost of giving notice to the Comptroller & the costs of the Comptroller. Defts. moved to rectify the register by expunging the design. Pltf. had seen the design in the showrooms of a certain firm in Berlin & had ordered dresses according to the design which were delivered to her in this country, whereupon she applied to register the design; there was no evidence that the design was new when pltf. first saw it or as to the date of its origin. The evidence for defts. was that samples of the design were shown to certain people in this country before the date of application for the design & that a dress incorporating it was in the premises of defts. open to travellers & others before that date:—Held: the design was not new or original; there having been a prior user of it in public & the action was dismissed with costs, & it was ordered that the register be rectified by expunging the design, & pltf. was ordered to pay the costs including costs to be incurred by defts. in obtaining rectification of the register.—BARKER v. ASSOCIATED MANUFACTURERS (GOWNS & MANTLES), LTD. 908e. ——.]—An application was made for the registration in Class 5 of a design to be applied to a calendar pad. A statement of novelty in the following terms was indorsed on the papers of the application: "The novelty consists in the combination of the arrangement, pattern, colouring, & shape of the calendar pad as shown in the representations." Objection was raised to the application on two grounds, viz.: (1) that what was submitted for registration was not a design within the meaning of the Acts so far as concerned arrangement & colouring, & (2) did not possess any substantial novelty of shape or pattern. The application was refused by the Assistant Comptroller after a hearing. Appcts. appealed to the Patents Appeal Tribunal:—Held: that colour must be disregarded; "arrangement" was not proper subject-matter of a design; the letters indicating the names of the months & days, or the numerals, could not be considered as constituting an integral part of the pattern claimed; the only relevant features of the pattern were its framework, its division into blank spaces, & the sub-division of these spaces into compartments for the reception of the numerals; there was no novelty in shape, configuration, pattern or ornament applied to any of the pages of the pad; & in refusing registration, the Assistant Comptroller had exercised on a proper basis the discretion given by sect. 49 of the Acts. The appeal was dismissed.—Re ASSOCIATED COLOUR PRINTERS, LTD.'S APPLICATION (No. 814,271) (1937), 54 R. P. C. 203.

908f. ——.]—The registered proprietors of two designs commenced an action for infringement of them. The designs were registered in Class 15 in respect of their application to cotton piece goods. The designs consisted of stripes in various colours. Defts. denied the validity of the designs, alleging anticipation & want of novelty & that in the cotton trade & in particular in the export trade to West Africa such arrangements of stripes as in the registered designs had been commonplace for many years prior to the registration of the designs. They contended that a pattern of plain stripes in any arrangement could not be proper subject-matter for registration—the word "plain" referring to the weave. Defts.' designs complained of were identical with the registered designs:—Held: the registered designs were designs for stripes or checks applied to textile goods, either woven or printed, & the question of plain stripes was outside the question in the action; the defences of anticipation & want of novelty failed & pltfs. were entitled to judgment. Injunctions against infringement & an inquiry as to damages were ordered. A certificate that the validity of the designs came in question was refused.

Defts. pleaded in the action that there was prior publication & filed particulars of objections in which publication of pictures & representations in two dimensions of the same or a similar toy was alleged & they submitted that the design was not in the circumstances a proper subject for registration:—Held: (1) the registration was valid, & (2) there had been no infringement.—DEAN'S RAG BOOK CO., LTD. v. POMERANTZ & SONS & Re DEAN'S RAG BOOK CO., LTD. & THE PATENTS & DESIGNS ACTS, 1907 TO 1928 (1930), 47 R. The design was a woven textile design depending upon the weave for its appearance ; other very similar, if not identical, designs were cited as anticipations ; as to one alleged anticipation, publication in a private trade library of designs was alleged. The design was prepared by the alleged author submitting a sketch & some instructions to a weaver :—Held : incorporation in such a library, to which numerous persons had access, constituted sufficient publication ; also, that preparation of the design in the manner above mentioned did not constitute authorship ; & the design was invalid for want of novelty, & also because pltfs. were wrongly registered as proprietors. 948a. Article manufactured in accordance with design.]—Pltfs., who were the registered proprietors of a design registered in respect of its application to a bust bodice or bust support for women's wear, brought an action for infringement of their copyright in the design against deft. co. & K. its Managing Director. Defts. denied infringement & moved to rectify the register by expunging the design, alleging that the registration was invalid by reason of want of novelty or originality, on the ground that the design was a mode or principle of construction or a mere mechanical device, & on other grounds. Defts. issued a summons asking that the question of infringement by deft. co., should be tried before the question of the liability of K., & an order was made for the trial of such preliminary issue, together with the motion for rectification :—Held : on the trial of the preliminary issue & motion, the design was valid, but had not been infringed by deft. co. The motion was dismissed with costs, no order being made as to the costs of the trial of the preliminary question.

Defts. then moved for judgment under R. S. C., Ord. 40, r. 7, & the action was dismissed with costs, other than the costs of the trial of the preliminary question.—KESTOS, LTD. v. KEMPAT, LTD. & VIVIAN FITCH KEMP, Re KESTOS, LTD. REGISTERED DESIGN (NO. 725,716) (1935), 53 R. P. C. 139.

949a. —— Director of company—Registration by company.]—Pltfs., who were the registered proprietors of a design registered in 1928 in class 1 in respect of its application to fruit peelers, brought an action for infringement of their copyright in the design against defts. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the author of the design was G., a director of the deft. co., & that the application for registration was made in fraud of defts., who first became aware of the existence of copyright on Apr. 12, 1929. Defts. further alleged want of novelty & subject-matter, & that pltfs. had not complied with the provisions as to marking contained in sect. 54 (1) (b) of Patents & Designs Act, 1907 to 1928. Defts. moved to rectify the register by expunging the design :—Held : the author of the design was H., a director of the pltf. co., & that therefore the application was not made in fraud of defts., & the design had not been published in any of the alleged anticipations, none of the features of the design were solely dictated by the functions which the article was called upon to perform, & the design was valid & subsisting & had been infringed. Pltfs. were granted an injunction & an order for delivery up, but inasmuch as they had failed to comply with the provisions as to marking contained in sect. 54 (1) (b) of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 to 1928, & it was proved that defts. had no notice of the existence of copyright in the design prior to Apr. 12, 1929, an inquiry as to damages was ordered limited to infringements after that date. Defts. were ordered to pay the costs

Two persons producing similar designs—Authorship communicated to each other.]—If there are two persons each of whom has produced a similar design & each has communicated the fact of such authorship to the other, neither of them alone is the proprietor of a new or original design, & neither of them can validly register it.

On Dec. 6, 1933, resp. obtained registration of a design No. 788,451 in Class 3 in respect of a frame for a tennis or other racquet. On June 15, 1934, appct. moved to rectify the register of designs by striking out resp.'s name as the proprietor of the design & by substituting therefor the name of appct., or by expunging the design from the register. Appct. alleged either that resp. had obtained the registration in fraud of appct.'s rights or that the design was improperly registered since it was not a new or original design not previously published in the United Kingdom: —Held: appct. had failed to establish a charge of fraud, but the design had in fact been published prior to the date of application for registration & that the register must be rectified by expunging the registration. The representation of the design on the register consisted of a freehand drawing comprising two views of the design from different aspects. Golf balls made & sold by pltf. co. were not in fact made in strict accordance with the design, although sold in wrappings marked with the registration number thereof. The managing director of deft. co. was in fact the author of pltf.'s registered design, which he had assigned to them while in their employ. The alleged infringing balls were substantially identical with the Maxfli balls made & sold by pltfs. Defts. alleged (inter alia) that pltf.'s design was only new or original in certain features having regard to certain prior users & prior publications:—Held: obvious or fraudulent imitation of the design had not been established. 1033a. —— ——.]—Pltfs., the corpn. of the Hall of Arts & Sciences, a body incorporated by Royal Charter, owned a hall, the Royal Albert Hall, commonly known as the Albert Hall, which they let for entertainments including orchestral performances. There was no orchestra employed by pltfs. Defts., Albert Edward Hall, carried on a business under the name the " Albert Hall Orchestra," which name he had registered under the provisions of the Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58). Pltfs. alleged that the acts of deft. were calculated to induce the public to believe that his orchestra was connected with the Albert Hall & that thereby pltfs.' reputation would be injured & they would suffer damage. Deft. denied the various allegations made by pltfs. & alleged that he was known by the name Albert Hall & that he was entitled to use that name in connection with his business. Pltfs. sought an injunction to restrain deft. from using for the purposes of his business the name of the " Albert Hall Orchestra " or any other similar name in such manner as to be calculated to lead the public to believe that deft.'s orchestra was in any way connected with the Albert Hall :—Held : pltfs.' & deft.'s businesses were distinct & deft.'s business would not conflict with that of pltfs. ; there was no evidence of actual or immediate future risk of damage to pltfs.' reputation ; deft. had not acted fraudulently ; & in any event, in order to comply with the provisions of the Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), s. 18 (1) (a), deft. was bound to put his real name on literature relating to business carried on under his registered business name & on an undertaking being given by deft. to comply with the said provisions the action be dismissed with costs.—HALLS OF ARTS AND SCIENCES CORPN. v. HALL (1934), 50 T. 1033b.————.] Pltfs., who were bacon-curers carrying on business solely in English bacon, were proprietors of a registered trade mark consisting of the word " Harris," limited to bacon, hams, lard, & brawn, & each of their sides of bacon was stamped " Harris." Deft. Harris had a number of retail shops dealing (inter alia) in bacon, which was solely Danish bacon & was always described as " Harris's pressure-cured Danish bacon," the sides being stamped with the words " Harris " & " Danish." In an action for passing-off & for infringement of the registered trade mark the trial judge held that as there was no evidence of any confusion between pltfs.' & deft.'s goods, & as deft. was using his own name bonâ fide & there was no real risk of confusion, & as deft. was therefore protected by Trade Marks Act, 1905 (c. 15), s. 44, both claims of pltfs. failed. Deft. J., who had adopted & been known for some years while managing a ladies' costumiers business in Brighton as " Miss Jay," commenced a partnership business in the same trade under the name " Jays " in Hove. Pltfs., Jay's, Ltd., an old-established firm of costumiers in Regent Street, London, sought to restrain defts. from using the name " Jays," or any other name calculated to suggest that the business was that of pltfs. or a branch thereof, or that the goods sold by defts. were supplied by pltfs. : —Held : on the evidence there was no passing-off proved, as the first deft. had acquired the name " Jay " by reputation & was entitled to trade under it, the names were not the same, pltfs. being a limited co. with an apostrophe before the letter " s " in their name, & the businesses being of a different class there was no risk of any confusion between them. opened meat stores in E., one of which was near pltf.'s, & conducted them under deft.'s corporate name, " Sterling Food Markets, Ltd." :—Held : although the similarity of the names was such as to cause some confusion, for a time at least, in the public mind, pltf. had not made out a case entitling him to an injunction restraining deft. from carrying on its business under its own name in E. ; & pltf. had not been guilty of such fraud in the appropriation of a trade name as would justify an injunction against him at the suit of deft.—SHUTT v. ——— FOOD MARKETS, LTD., [1933] 3 W. was the sole owner of certain patents which were protected in both America & England. The American co. desired to introduce their patented machinery into England, & for that purpose entered into an agreement with pltf. co. whereby the latter was granted full licences to have the sole use of the American co.'s inventions in Europe. Under this agreement pltf. co. for 22 years manufactured & dealt with machinery which would otherwise have been protected in favour of the American co. When the agreement was determined in 1933, the patents had expired & pltf. co. continued to manufacture the machinery. Pltf. co. had acquired a considerable goodwill in England, & in England the name of Sturtevant as used in the trade was always applied to pltf. co. In 1935 a co. was incorporated in England with the name Sturtevant Mill Co. of U.S.A., Ltd., which had wide powers to deal in machinery of all kinds. The American co. held virtually all the shares in this new co. Pltf. co. brought an action against this new co. asking for an injunction restraining the new co. from using its registered name or any other name in which the word Sturtevant formed part. It was found as a fact that the use of the word Sturtevant by deft. co. would lead to confusion which would result in damage to pltf. co. Deft. co. contended (inter alia) (i) that in the circumstances of the case there was an equity which disentitled the English co. to the relief it was seeking, (ii) that as deft. co. was controlled by the American co. which had acquired a goodwill in America in the name of Sturtevant, pltf. co. was not entitled to protection, & (iii) that on the principle that any person is entitled to trade under his own name, deft. co., being controlled by the American co., was entitled to use the name Sturtevant:—Held: (1) as any benefit which pltf. co. had obtained from its connection with the American co. was the result of a voluntary agreement between the two cos., there was no equity which disentitled pltf. co. to relief; (2) the goodwill of the American co. was for the purposes of this action restricted to America & could not be treated as part of the goodwill of deft. co. & pltf. co. was entitled to protection for its goodwill; (3) the principle that any person may trade in his own real name did not, i circumstances of this case, entitle deft. co. to use the name Sturtevant.—STURTEVANT ENGINEERING CO., LTD. v. STURTEVANT MILL CO. 1100a. " Lechat Camel Hair Belting "—For " Camel Hair Belting."]— F. R. & Co., Ltd., the proprietors of a trade mark, consisting of the words " Camel Hair " registered in July, 1908, in class 35 in respect of Belting, commenced an action to restrain deft. from passing off goods not pltfs.' manufacture as being pltfs.' goods. Pltfs. alleged that deft. had fraudulently passed off & was threatening & intending to pass off belts & belting not of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise as & for pltfs.' belts or belting by using upon, or in connection therewith, the words " Camel " or " Camel Hair " ; they claimed a further injunction to restrain deft. from advertising or offering for sale beltings under the description " Lechat's Camel Hair Belting " or under any other name in infringement of their trade name or trade mark in breach of an undertaking given by deft. in 1926. Deft. admitted that the designation ' Camel Hair " used alone & without other distinguishing matter denoted both to the trade & to users of belting that such belts or belting were the product of pltfs. Deft. alleged that he had not used upon or in connection with belts or belting not being of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise the words " Camel " or " Camel Hair " alone, but only with additional matter sufficient clearly to distinguish such belting from the belting of pltfs. Deft. admitted giving the undertaking on which the claim to the second injunction was founded, but denied that he was bound thereby, alleging that he was induced to give the same by certain untrue representations of pltfs. Deft. sold their goods as Lechat's Camel Hair Belting, the goods being manufactured by a Belgian firm of manufacturers of beltings known as " Etablissements J. Laroche Lechat Société Anonyme " : —Held : pltfs. had failed to prove their allegation that deft. had passed off or attempted to pass off belts or belting not made by the pltfs. as & for pltfs.' goods ; deft. had so used prefix " Lechat " & " J. Lechat's " as sufficiently to distinguish their belting from that of pltfs. ; & pltfs. had not made out their alleged breach of the undertaking of Dec. 3, 1926. Deft. sold condenser dials, not manufactured or licensed by pltfs., bearing upon them the words " manufactured under Ormond Patent No. 273,392." Pltfs. commenced an action to restrain deft. from using these words upon any goods not manufactured or licensed by pltfs. & from passing off as goods manufactured or licensed by pltfs. any goods not so manufactured or licensed by pltfs. A claim to restrain deft. from infringing the patent was abandoned before the trial :—Held : assuming that the words complained of meant that deft. had been licensed by pltfs. & were untrue, there was no evidence that pltfs. were either making or selling goods of the kind in question, & pltfs. had not proved any damage & had not established any cause of action. On the expiration of the term in a lease of certain works to pltfs., where they had carried on their business, defts., fifteen months afterwards, had procured a lease of the same works, with the exception of certain mines of clay. Defts. issued a circular & card tending to lead the public to suppose that defts. had succeeded to the business of pltfs., & were working the same material as pltfs. had formerly used :—Held : although the words of the circular & card might be literally true, yet, if they tended to mislead the public, the ct. would restrain them from further circulating or issuing such or any similar circular or card.—HARPER v. PEARSON (1860), 3 L. 1120b. —— Representation as to edition prescribed for examination.]—Pltfs. were the publishers of, & owners of the copyright in, a book entitled " Hazlitt's Selected Essays," edited by George Sampson, which included thirteen essays & notes on the essays. In 1927 & 1928 the book was prescribed by the London University as one on which candidates for matriculation would be examined. One of defts. published & sold & the other defts. sold a book entitled " Hazlitt's Selected Essays, Edition Hollingworth," containing twenty of such essays, including the thirteen selected by Sampson. Pltfs. commenced an action against defts., alleging that defts. had passed off the Hollingworth edition as & for the Sampson edition of pltfs. by representing that the Hollingworth edition was that prescribed for the London Matriculation Examination, & also alleging infringement of copyright in their selection of essays :—Held : if the fact were that a purchaser had been misled into thinking that defts.' book had been prescribed for a certain examination, that was simply a representation as to quality & would give pltfs. no right of action, there had been no passing off of defts.' book as pltfs.' & there was no infringement of copyright.—CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS v. UNIVERSITY TUTORIAL PRESS (1928), 45 R. 1120c. —— Goods sent in reply to order by plaintiff.]—Pltfs., who had for some time used the device of a swan with the word " white " on labels on porcelain enamelled baths of their manufacture, applied on two occasions to register the device, first in class 1 in relation to enamel, secondly in class 13 in relation to baths & the like. Both applications were refused. On Jan. 25, 1926, the B. W. Assocn. registered under sect. 62, in respect of a standardised brass tap approved by the Ministry of Health, the device of a swan with the letter B. W. A. The attention of pltfs. was drawn to the sale by defts. of one of these standardised taps in Feb.; & later, upon ordering " ½-in. brass globe cocks Ministry of Health pattern swan," pltfs. received a like tap from defts. Pltfs. thereupon brought this action to restrain defts. from passing off, & at the same time moved to rectify the register by removing therefrom the B. W. Assocn.'s standardisation mark :—Held : pltf.'s device of a swan was known to the trade as indicating, not taps, but porcelain baths of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise enamelled with a particular characteristic enamel ; the presence on the register of resps.' standardisation make, & the use of it upon brass taps made to the Ministry of Health specification was not calculated to deceive the trade into believing that such taps were merchandise or manufacture of pltfs. ; the sending of one of such taps by defts. in response to pltfs.' order was a reasonable response to that order : pltfs. had proved neither that the device of a swan indicated their taps to the trade, nor passing off by defts. ; & both the action & the motion failed.—WILSON'S & MATHIESON'S, LTD. v. MEYNELL & SONS, LTD., Re WILSON'S & MATHIESON'S LTD.'S APPLICATION (1929), 46 R. 1137a. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. co. was incorporated in Great Britain in 1909, for the purpose of carrying on a business, by means of manifold shops, for the sale of a large variety of articles at a price not over 6*d.* each. Deft. co. was incorporated on June 17, 1929, & was the buying agency of another co. which was incorporated in Australia under the name of Woolworths, Ltd., for the sale of a large variety of articles of a similar class to pltf. co.'s goods, but mainly at a higher price. There was no one with the name of Woolworth connected with deft. co. or its parent co. in Australia. The memorandum of deft. co. was framed so as to include the power to carry on retail business. Pltf. co. brought an action against deft. co. claiming an injunction restraining deft. co. from trading under its present title & from using the term " Woolworth " as part of its title or from using any other title calculated to deceive the public or to lead the public to believe that deft. co. was in any way connected with the pltf. co. :—Held : the evidence had not shown that there had been up to the time of the action any real confusion ; but by the name " Woolworths " pltf. co. was understood to be meant, not only among the general public, but also among traders & manufacturers ; the name Woolworths (Australasia), Ltd., must suggest some connection with pltf. co. ; deft. co.'s name so nearly resembled the name of pltf. co. as to be calculated to deceive ; the area of the trading operations of the two cos. was so much the same in many ways that there was serious risk of confusion.—WOOLWORTH (F. largely advertised & attended by a very large number of people. Deft. had a shop in London for animals & birds & in the past winter had had a sideshow of animals during the circus which pltf. was holding at Olympia. In 1928 he started a travelling Zoo, & shortly before the action he added a circus & advertised it as "Chapman's London Olympia Zoo & Circus." Pltf. commenced an action against deft. for an injunction to restrain him from using the words "London Olympia" as descriptive of or in connection with Zoo-Circus or other circus or entertainment & gave notice of motion for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: the words "London Olympia Circus" had come to mean pltf.'s circus. An interlocutory injunction was granted restraining deft. from using the words "London Olympia" in conjunction with one another as descriptive of or in connection with a Circus or Zoo-Circus.—MILLS v. CHAPMAN (1930), 47 R. 1145a. —— After revocation of licence.]—In 1910 pltf. co., which was carrying on in New York the business of manufacturers of numbering machines, entered into an agreement with deft. that deft. should act as agent for pltfs. in this country for the sale of such machines, but the relationship was not of agency in the strict sense, for deft. purchased the machines from pltf. co., & paid for them on terms arranged. From the commencement of the agreement deft. carried on business in such machines under the same name as pltfs. & the machines bore the name of pltf. co. In 1933 pltf. co. terminated the agreement, but deft. continued to carry on business under that name & claimed the right to do so. Pltf. co. brought an action to restrain deft. from using that name & for breach of contract, alleging that it was a term of the agreement that deft. should not deal in such printing apparatus or be interested in the business of any competitor of pltf. co. Deft. contended that the name meant his business & that pltf. co. carried on no business in this country & he relied on the fact that from 1917 onwards he had been & still was registered under Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), under the said name:—Held: pltf. co. had acquired a sufficient reputation in this country for its machines to entitle it to protect the use of its name here; deft. merely held a revocable licence to use the name which was revoked on the termination of the agency agreement; also it was a term of the agreement that deft. would not during its existence deal with the numbering machines of any rival manufacturers, & that he had so done.

An injunction was granted restraining deft. from using the name of The Roberts Numbering Machine Co. or any name so similar to it as to be calculated to cause the belief that deft.'s business was a branch of or in any way connected with the business of pltf. co., & an inquiry was ordered as to damages in respect of the breach of agreement.—ROBERTS NUMBERING MACHINE CO. v. DAVIS (1935), 53 R. 1168a. —— ——.]—Pltfs. brought an action to restrain deft. from passing off goods not of pltfs.' manufacture as & for pltfs.' goods. Deft. was originally registered under the name of Sidney Lyons, but his name was later changed to Joseph Lyons. Pltf. co. was well known & had two hundred & fifty shops in Great Britain, four of which were situated in the neighbourhood of Brighton. Pltfs. also had two hundred thousand retail agents, & spent one hundred thousand pounds per annum on the advertisement of their tea. Deft. who was the keeper of a boarding establishment at Brighton had notepaper headed "J. Lyons food specialists." He advertised for canvassers & his advertisement read "J. Lyons require. . . ." He provided his canvassers with sets of packets: (i) a cardboard box labelled "J. Lyons, pure domestic cocoa," (ii) a packet of J. Lyons' cake flour, & (iii) a silver foil packet containing tea & bearing a label worded "J. Lyons' superior tea Brighton depot 8*d.* net wt. ¼ lb." Pltfs. sold tea in quarter-pound packets with a label also printed in blue on a white ground, & worded "Lyons tea, J. Lyons & Co., Ltd., Cadby Hall, Kensington." Pltfs. alleged that by reason of the similarity between deft.'s goods sold by the canvassers on behalf of deft., deft. had intended to deceive & had deceived the public into buying his goods as & for those of pltfs. Deft. denied that the acts complained of were calculated to deceive or that they had led to deception. He further claimed to be entitled to trade under his own name provided that his trade was lawful & not calculated to deceive —Held: the phrases "Lyons Tea" & "Lyons Cocoa" had come to mean the goods of pltfs., the quarter-pound packets of tea, sold by pltfs. & deft. respectively, were exceedingly alike, the phrase "Brighton depot" was misleading, deft. had intended to deceive & had deceived the public into buying his goods as & for pltfs.' goods. An injunction was granted, together with five pounds damages & costs.—LYONS (J.) & CO., LTD. v. LYONS (J.) (1931), 49 R. P. C. 188.

1168a. —— —— Custom of mining company.]—Held: (1) the valley containing the bed of minerals a part of which was owned by the Spanish Co. had become known as the Tigon Basin, & therefore the word "Tigon" had acquired a geographical significance; (2) having regard to such geographical significance & the custom of mining companies operating in the same area to adopt a name by reference to the geographical name of that area, coupled with the name of a point of the compass, the use by deft. co. of the word "Tigon" was not calculated to deceive or cause confusion in the minds of the public; (3) as pltf. co. themselves had marketed neither sulphur nor any other product under the name "Tigon," there was nothing which, by the use of the word "Tigon," deft. co. could sell or pass off as or for the product or goods of pltf. co. The action was dismissed with costs, & pltf. co. having been granted an interlocutory injunction on motion with the usual undertaking, an inquiry as to damages was ordered on the application of deft. co., the costs of that inquiry being reserved.—TIGON MINING & FINANCE CORPN., LTD. v. SOUTH TIGON MINING CO., LTD. 1168b. —— ——.]—Pltfs. had a very large paper manufacturing & printing works carried on ——— Mills, at Apsley. They were incorporated in 1886, & in 1887 became the owners of a registered mark consisting of the head of the Duke of Wellington, with the words "The Apsley." It appeared that the word "Apsley" had become associated in the trade with pltf. co. Deft. co. were incorporated in 1936 under the name of the "Apsley Press, Ltd." with the object of carrying on the business of printers & publishers. Pltf. co. brought this action for an injunction to restrain deft. co. from carrying on any business similar to the business carried on by pltfs. under their present name or any name incorporating the name "Apsley":—Held: the use by deft. co. of the word "Apsley" was calculated to cause confusion between the business of pltfs. & defts. Such confusion was likely to lead to loss of reputation to pltfs. with loss of customers. Injunction granted.—JOHN DICKINSON & Co. v. APSLEY PRESS, LTD. (1937), 157 L. T. 135; 54 R. P. C. 219.

A prominent feature of that establishment was a clock on the top of a gabled building. That establishment was not licensed to sell intoxicating liquor nor did it provide patrons with lodging, but it provided them with meals & offered them facilities for bathing, tennis & golf. The establishment acquired a reputation & was known to many people as The Clock, & the name The Clock had always appeared in conspicuous letters on pltfs.' premises. Deft. co., The Clock House Hotel, Ltd., was incorporated on Oct. 6, 1934, & in Nov. 1934, opened an hotel on land adjoining the Barnet By-Pass Road at a point five miles south of the point occupied by pltfs.' road-house, at New Hatfield, in the county of Hertford. A prominent feature of that hotel was a tower carrying a clock above which was written the word "Hotel," & below which were written in large letters the words "Clock House." That hotel was licensed to sell intoxicating liquors & did provide patrons with lodging. It did not offer facilities for bathing, tennis or golf, but provided meals. Pltfs. commenced an action to restrain defts. from carrying on business under the name Hotel Clock House, or any other name calculated to cause confusion with & damage to their business:—Held: pltfs. had acquired a reputation in the name Clock in connection with their road-house, & in the locality the words "The Clock" had come to mean pltfs.' premises; the use of the words "Hotel Clock House" by defts. constituted a real possibility of confusion which might result in actual damage to pltfs. An injunction was granted but was limited to restraining defts. from using the words complained of on their present premises. The operation of the injunction was stayed for one month to enable defts. to alter their name as it appeared on their clock, notepaper & elsewhere. Defts. were ordered to pay the costs of the action. 1196 ii. —— ——.]—Pltf. co., incorporated in the United States of America in 1852, & one of the largest manufacturers of wrought-steel hardware & tools in the world, has registered trade-marks of "Stanley" & "S. W.," & its goods are & have been long known both in the wholesale & retail trade in New Zealand as "Stanley" goods. Deft. co. incorporated in 1931 with a capital of £600 under the name of "Stanley Ironworks, Ltd." took over the business of engineers, etc., carried on at Stanley Street, Auckland, by S., & known as the Stanley Ironworks. The business originally established by W. about forty-one years ago as that of a shoeing & general smith & carried on later by his nephew from whom S. acquired it in 1929, when it was a general jobbing engineering business, specialising in the production of bolts & hinges & all classes of builders' ironwork, was moved about thirty-six years ago to Stanley Street, Parnell, & the premises called "Stanley Ironworks," but up to about 1930 the goodwill of the business was attached to the name W. in respect of a jobbing & engineering business & not of a manufacturing & trading business which made articles for stock & sent out travellers to sell quantities of that stock. Deft. co., when incorporated, became definitely a manufacturing & trading co. making for stock, & employed a New Zealand representative & distributor of its products, & is manufacturing & selling articles of hardware which are also made by pltf. co. & sold in New Zealand. On a motion for a perpetual injunction restraining deft. co. from carrying on business under the name of "Stanley Ironworks, Ltd.":—Held: (1) deft. co. had taken the whole name of pltf. & inserted the word "iron," a common ingredient, because both cos. manufactured with it & dealt in the products; (2) the use of deft.'s name was calculated to deceive, & so either to divert business from pltf. to deft. or to lead to the belief that deft. was a branch of or otherwise connected with pltf. to the latter's prejudice; (3) deft. had not succeeded to the goodwill of an existing business carried on in Auckland in the name of "Stanley Ironworks, Ltd." in a manufacture & trade of the kind which it is now doing, so as to entitle it to the use of that name.—STANLEY WORKS v. STANLEY IRONWORKS, LTD., [1935] N. & compounds & the manner of preparing them. This book was to be known as the British Pharmacopœia. The book was a valuable property & had a great reputation. When any one in the medical or the pharmaceutical professions saw the letters B.P. placed after a drug he understood such drug to conform to the specification for such drug to be found in the British Pharmacopœia. Before action brought pltfs. had published three editions of their book & since the issue of the writ they had published a further edition. Defts., Barrett Proprietaries, Ltd., were a limited co. which made & sold medical & pharmaceutical preparations contained in cartons, packages & bottles. Defts. made prominent use of the letters B.P. upon or in connection with their goods, advertisements therefor & price lists thereof. With the exception of one drug, namely acetylsalicylic acid, commonly known as aspirin, none of the preparations made & sold by defts. was to be found in the British Pharmacopœia. Pltfs. alleged that the acts of defts. were calculated to hinder & defeat the successful performance by pltfs. of their statutory duty & that the use of the letters B.P. by defts. was calculated to lead to confusion & that such confusion would result in the failure of the British Pharmacopœia to be maintained as a standard & that this failure would involve pltfs. in financial loss. Pltfs. further alleged that the use by defts. of the letters B.P. was improper & fraudulent & was done with the intention of deceiving the medical, dental & pharmaceutical professions, the trade & the public & inducing them to believe that defts.' preparations were in some manner connected with, or prepared & guaranteed to be in accordance with, the information contained in the British Pharmacopœia. Defts. denied the various allegations made by pltfs. The A.-G. was joined as a pltf. at the relation of the Council, it being contended that the public had rights in respect of the British Pharmacopœia. Pltfs. sought an injunction to restrain defts. from (inter alia) selling or offering for sale preparations represented to be guaranteed by pltfs. or made in accordance with the information contained in the British Pharmacopœia :—Held : it had not been proved that the conduct of defts. was calculated to hinder the successful performance by pltf. Council of their statutory duty to publish & keep up to date the British Pharmacopœia ; there was no evidence what the public would understand by the letters B.P., & in the absence of such evidence it was not possible to hold that the use by defts. of the letters B.P. in the manner complained of was calculated to lead to confusion ; the allegation that confusion due to the use by defts. of the letters B.P. would result in the failure of the British Pharmacopœia to maintain a standard & would result in financial loss to pltf. Council due to the diminution in sales of the book resulting from loss of reputation had not been proved ; since there was no evidence that any member of the public had bought defts.' goods in the belief that such goods had been made in accordance with the prescriptions to be found in the British Pharmacopœia, the claim put forward on behalf of the A.-G. must fail ; & the ct. could not infer from the evidence that defts. had acted fraudulently. 1233a. ——.]—In 1909 pltfs. commenced the sale in England of storage batteries made by them in America in accordance with certain letters patent granted between the years 1900 & 1908. The storage batteries were imported & sold as Edison storage batteries by deft. Monnot & later by defts. Edison Accumulators, Ltd., who did so in accordance with the terms of various agreements made between them & pltfs. In 1929, Edison Accumulators, Ltd., changed its name to Britannia Batteries, Ltd., a new co. was formed by Monnot under the name Edison Accumulators, Ltd., & the two cos. commenced to manufacture & sell in England storage batteries made by them under the name Edison. Pltfs. commenced an action to restrain defts. from passing off their batteries as those of pltfs. & from using the expression "Edison Accumulators" as part of their name. Defts. admitted that they had sold storage batteries not of pltfs.' manufacture as Edison batteries, but alleged that the name Edison was not distinctive of pltfs.' goods, but was descriptive of all types of nickel alkaline batteries, & particularly those made in accordance with certain letters patent, & that they were entitled to continue to describe the goods sold by them as Edison storage batteries:—Held: the words "Edison accumulators" & "Edison storage batteries" were at the date of the writ distinctive of pltf.'s goods, & that defts. intended to pass off goods made by them as those of pltfs. Injunctions were granted restraining defts. from passing off & from using the expression "Edison Accumulators" as part of their name, with costs. An inquiry as to damages was refused.—EDISON STORAGE BATTERY CO. v. BRITANNIA BATTERIES, LTD. (1931), 48 R. P. C. 350.

1233b. —— ——.]—Pltf. sold greyhound race programmes outside dog racing tracks known as outside cards. His cards were a light green in colour with the names of the dogs running printed & a selection of dogs to win made under the pseudonym "Stirling." These cards became well known to the public as Stirling green cards. Deft. Freeman also sold outside racing cards which were first a buff colour but subsequently were coloured light green. He then registered under Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), the business name of Stirling as being the proprietor & publisher of Stirling race cards. Shortly afterwards he incorporated deft. co. which he called Stirling Press, Ltd., & his race cards had printed on them "published by Stirling Press, Ltd." On the evidence the ct. was satisfied that some of the sellers of deft.'s cards sold them as Stirling cards:—Held: there had been a deliberate attempt to sell defts.' cards as pltf.'s cards. An injunction was granted to restrain defts. & each of them from printing, publishing, selling or distributing greyhound racing programmes not being the programmes of pltf. as Stirling cards.—SHALLIS v. FREEMAN & STIRLING PRESS, LTD. 1238a. —— Goods sold as exclusive original models of dressmaker—Goods previously sold & copied.]—In May, 1933, defts. issued a circular to their customers in which appeared the following passages: "Our buyers have just returned from Paris with a collection of more than usual loveliness which we are able to offer at a mere fraction of the original cost. . . . Coats for restaurant, race & travel as well as one or two sumptuous evening wraps come from the salons of Paquin. . . ." The next day defts. sold a coat which had been made by pltfs. & sold by them in Feb. 1933, to an American firm who had copied it & reshipped it to England, the coat being subsequently purchased by defts. Pltfs. commenced an action to restrain defts. from offering for sale or selling as Paquin models any garments not being new garments sold by pltfs. Defts. denied that they had represented that they had purchased the garments direct from pltfs. & claimed the right to sell as "Paquin models" garments which had been sold by pltfs. to dealers for the purpose of copying. Defts. also alleged that the term "Paquin" did not indicate pltfs. exclusively:—Held: the circular did not represent that the garments had been purchased direct or that they had not been copied or had only been produced a short time before the issue of the circular; & the action must be dismissed. In view of the fact that defts. had put in issue the distinctiveness of the word "Paquin" but had not relied upon it, an order was made that pltfs. should pay two-thirds of defts.' costs.—PAQUIN, LTD. v. JOHN BARKER & CO., LTD. In 1931 pltfs., who were the registered proprietors of the mark, brought an action against Letrik, Ltd., for infringement of the mark & passing off by the use upon or in connection with electrical hair combs of the word "Letrik." Pltfs. manufactured & sold electrical goods & accessories, & they alleged that they had manufactured & sold under their trade mark "Lektrik" large quantities of electrical apparatus & accessories for use in connection with electrical hair wavers, hair dryers, & other hairdressing appliances. Defts. denied that the goods in respect of which pltfs.' mark was registered included electrical hair combs, & they further denied that pltfs. had manufactured & sold electrical apparatus for use in connection with hairdressing appliances as alleged, save in so far as pltfs. might have sold the usual switches, plugs, & sockets necessary in any electrical installation, & defts. denied that the mark "Lektrik" was distinctive of pltfs. in connection with hairdressing appliances. Defts. moved to rectify the register by excluding from the specifications of goods, in respect of which the marks in class 50 & another class were registered, electrical hair combs & goods of a like description, on the ground of non-user of the marks in connection with such goods :—Held : pltfs. had never manufactured combs, & the user of their mark had been on & in connection with goods of a wholly different character; the trade in electric light & heat accessories was distinct from the trade in combs & toilet articles, & the use of defts.' mark could not legitimately be said to constitute an infringement of pltfs.' registered mark, or to be calculated to induce the belief that defts.' combs were of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise. 1245a. Name descriptive of formula.]—Macleans, Ltd. (the predecessors of the same name as pltfs.) in 1931 marketed a preparation known as "Maclean brand stomach powder"; it was made in accordance with a formula of a Doctor Maclean, & as a prescription had been known moderately well in medical circles & to some extent by the public as "Maclean's Powder." Pltfs.' preparation, by advertisement & sales, became very well known to the public at large. In 1935 pltfs. marketed medicated sweets, or throat lozenges, under the name "Macs." After this defts. brought out a medicated sweet containing a small quantity of powder made up to Dr. Maclean's prescription. The name used for these sweets by defts. was "Vitamacs" & later "Merrimacs." The labels & advertisements referred to "Dr. Maclean's stomach powder" & in some cases to "the famous Maclean Sweets." The labels, etc., also referred, but in small type, to defts.' name or trade mark. Actual confusion between pltfs.' & defts.' goods was proved. There was also evidence that the name "Mac" had been used by other firms in the sweetstuff trade, though not in the pharmaceutical trade :—Held : (1) although the words "Maclean's Powder" were originally descriptive of a formula, they had become so identified with pltfs. that pltfs. were entitled to have it made clear that the powder . . . made up from a prescription of Professor Maclean was not pltfs.' powder; that, although the name or Trade Mark "Mac" had been used for ordinary sweets, it had not been applied to medicated sweets, properly sold by chemists; & this was an attempt by defts. to "filch" pltfs.' reputation. On the other hand defts. were entitled to state that their sweets contained Dr. Maclean's powder. An injunction was therefore granted in the following form ". . . from selling, supplying, offering or advertising for sale medicated sweets not being the pltfs.' goods under or in connection with the name 'Merrimacs' (or any name of which 'Macs' forms part) or the description 'The famous Maclean sweets' or 'Maclean Sweets' or any other name or description which by reason of its consisting of or comprising the name 'Maclean' or 'Maclean's' is calculated to deceive, without clearly distinguishing the said goods from the goods of pltfs."; (2) that allegations as to collusion or fraud (of pltfs.' witness) were most improper unless strict inquiry had been made; (3) in their writ pltfs. had also sought relief in respect of infringement of a Trade Mark "Mac," No. 458,654, registered in Class 111. but had not included this cause of action in their Statement of Claim. Defts., however, sought (by motion) to expunge this Trade Mark, on the ground that it had been assigned to pltfs. without any goodwill :—Held : that, even if there had been no goodwill to assign, but the mark was not yet expungeable under sect. 37 (22) was unqualified & a trade mark could not be assigned in gross. In the absence of the previous proprietors the Trade Mark should not be altogether expunged, but the assignment to pltfs. & previous assignments should be so dealt with.—MACLEANS, LTD. v. LIGHTBOWN & SONS, LTD., Re TRADE MARK "MAC," No. 458,654 (1937), 54 R. "Navy-Spot"—For "Blue-Spot." co., who were manufacturers of wireless apparatus, & had sold large quantities of loudspeaker units under the mark "Blue-Spot" & in cartons with a distinctive get-up, claimed an injunction to restrain defts. from passing off loudspeaker units by the use upon or in connection therewith of the word "Navy-Spot" or by using a similar get-up. The form & appearance of the two loudspeaker units were almost identical. Defts. admitted that the word "Blue-Spot" was distinctive of pltfs., but they alleged that their units were always sold in their cartons, which were different from pltfs.' The trial of the action was not defended :—Held : defts.' loudspeaker units as sold were calculated to deceive & to be passed off as pltfs.' An injunction was granted & an inquiry as to damages was ordered, & an order as to delivery up of defts.' cartons & all parts of the units bearing the word "Navy-Spot" was made.—IDEAL WERKE A. "Pine-ette," & in May, 1932, registered the word "Pine-ette" as a trade mark in Class 47, claiming user from June 16, 1924. Defts.' business, which was carried on at works in the City of Salford, was commenced in 1929 by one J. T. Jones who had formerly been an agent of pltf.: he began to sell liquid soap under the name of "Pine-exx." In Jan. 1932, this business was sold to defts., the sum of £85 being fixed as the price of the goodwill, which included, so far as Mr. Jones & his son (who was associated with him in the business) were able to assign the same but no further or otherwise, the right to use the word "Pine-exx." Pltf. commenced this action against defts. claiming an injunction & other relief:—Held: though pltf. had failed to prove actual deception, the similarity between the two words "Pine-ette" & "Pine-exx" was so close, especially when spoken, that the use of the word "Pine-exx" created a great probability of deception; & defts. had not discharged the onus which was upon them of proving acquiescence (which they alleged) on the part of pltf. in the user of the word "Pine-exx" by J. T. Jones. An injunction was granted & delivery up of infringing labels ordered, an inquiry as to damages not being asked for.—DIXON (J. 1350b. ——.]—Pltf. co. claimed an injunction to restrain deft. co. passing off emollient tablets as & for pltf. co.'s goods. In 1916 the trade mark "Snowfire" was registered in class 48 of which pltf. co. was the registered owner. The trade mark had been exclusively advertised & used in connection with an emollient preparation to be used for chapped hands & cracked lips. On one side of the carton containing the preparation was the word "Snowfire" in black on a red sky with snow mountains against a black background representing a dark sky & a brazier with a bright red flame & the words "Chapped Hands." On the other side were snow mountains against a black sky, the words "Snowfire," "Cracked Lips," & "Chapped Hands." Deft. co.'s carton showed on one side snow mountains with "Sunshine Snow" written below in red & a red sun with yellow rays, & on the other side the words "Sunshine Snow" were put into the sky instead of being placed down below & the sun was setting in a lower position. Deft. co. alleged that the features of which pltf. co. claimed a monopoly & the manner of the packing were common to the trade, & that the get-up was not calculated to deceive:—Held: the manner in which the product was packed & the shape & colour of the cartons was common to the trade, & pltf. co. had established no monopoly in regard to them; the distinctive feature of pltf. co.'s carton was the combination of snow mountains with the bright flame from the brazier forming a representation of the trade mark "Snowfire," but deft. co.'s get-up showed snow & the sun having reference to the name "Sunshine Snow" & there was nothing in the package or the get-up of deft. co.'s goods which so nearly represented pltf. co.'s goods in any distinctive feature as to be calculated to deceive; & three had been no infringement of pltf.'s trade mark. tion of their trade mark. Pltfs. claimed to have used their mark, substantially in the form in which it was registered, as a label for match boxes for upwards of sixty years, & they alleged that defts.' label had been designed & adopted with the object of enabling it to be mistaken for pltfs.' label. Defts.' matches were sold under the brand name "Alpha" & this name appeared prominently on their label. Defts. denied the allegations of infringement & passing off & that their label was an imitation, deceptive or otherwise, of pltfs.' label, & they further denied that it had been designed or adopted with the object of enabling it to be mistaken for pltfs.' label. It was admitted that labels printed in black upon a yellow ground, as were both pltfs.' & defts.' labels, were common to the trade:—Held: confusion between the two labels was probable &, while no lack of bona fides was to be attributed to two directors of defts.' co. personally, the design & adoption of defts.' label was deliberate, with the object of occasioning confusion with pltfs.' label. 1350d. ——.]—Pltfs., shippers & merchants & exporters of knitting wool yarns to the China market, were the registered proprietors of certain trade marks registered in Class 33 in respect of yarns of wool or worsted, all of which were registered on Jan. 30, 1931. They had in the year 1928 devised a new combination marking or lay-out of marks which were printed on the wrappers of the bundles of knitting wool yarn exported by them to China surrounding a coloured ticket comprising in the top part the representation of a Mosque or Three Candlesticks or other objects, & in the bottom part of the ticket Chinese characters. Early in 1928 they began to ship such goods to China under such new lay-out, & had since continued to ship considerable quantities of knitting wool yarns so marked. In the year 1931 pltfs. discovered that defts., who were also shippers of knitting wool yarns to the China markets, were using a combination marking which pltfs. alleged to be a colourable imitation of their combination marking or lay-out of marks. As the result of correspondence between the parties defts. agreed to alter the general lay-out of their bundle paper "in such a way as to prevent the possibility of any confusion arising in the minds of the Chinese buyers." In Apr. 1932, pltfs. having discovered that defts. were using a combination marking or lay-out, which they alleged to be a close imitation of pltfs.' said lay-out, & an infringement of pltfs.' registered trade marks, commenced an action against defts. claiming injunctions, damages & other usual relief.—DIXON (H. 1419a. Discovery—In inquiry as to damages.]—Pltf. in this action had acquired the goodwill of the first deft. in a business carried on under the name "Trist." Pltf. complained that defts. continued to solicit old customers & to trade under & use the name "Tristbestos" (which had been used by pltf. & the first deft. while in partnership) in a manner calculated to pass off their goods for pltf.'s goods. At the trial defts. ultimately consented to judgment, including an inquiry as to damages. Pltf. now sought discovery from defts. of customers solicited & of all sales made under the name "Tristbestos." The application was dismissed in the ct. of first instance on the ground that an inquiry as to damages & an account of profits should be distinguished in reference to discovery, & that, in a passing off action every act complained of did not necessarily result in deception & damage, & pltf. must under both inquiries prove damage before discovery. Pltf. appealed:—Held: when once some damage had been proved (& the judgment by consent was equivalent to admission of wrongful acts & of damage suffered by pltf. by reason of them) every act of the kind specified done by defts. was material & the documents relating to it were documents relating to the matter in question within R. The beverage was sold by the bottlers within their respective areas to their customers. Applt. sued resp. for passing off under the name of "Orange Crush" a beverage not manufactured or sold by the applt. as a beverage manufactured or sold by it:—Held: applt. had no legal interest in the business said to be injured by resp.'s representations; there was no connection between the commodity sold to the public as "Orange Crush," & applt.'s business except that applt. supplied one of the ingredients contained in the finished article, & this of itself was not sufficient to identify the beverage sold to the public with the business of applt. so as to justify the assertion that the commodity sold to the public was the goods of applt.—ORANGE CRUSH (AUSTRALIA), LTD. v. GARTRELL (1928), 41 C. 1427a. —— ——.]—Pltfs. were manufacturers of a sweetmeat in the form of a transparent peppermint cube. They were the owners of a trade mark consisting of the word Glacier registered in class 42. Their sweetmeat had the word Fox stamped upon its base. Pltfs. had a substantial trade & their goods were very well known to the public. Deft. owned a number of retail shops in Leicester. He sold various kinds of sweetmeats, including one in the form of a transparent peppermint cube. Pltfs. alleged that sweetmeats of this last kind had been sold by deft.'s shop assistants in response to requests by customers for Glacier mints. Five instances of passing off were alleged. In each case the sale complained of was alleged to have been in response to an oral trap order given by a person on behalf of pltfs. Pltfs. commenced an action to restrain passing off sweetmeats not of pltfs.' manufacture as & for pltfs.' Glacier Mints. Deft. denied the alleged passing off. The action subsequently came on for trial:—Held: in each of the alleged cases of passing off it was conceivable that deft.'s shop assistant did not hear, or did not properly hear, the word Glacier; the word might have been mistaken for a request for "glassy" sweets—for in Leicester sweetmeats of this character were often spoken of as "glassy" mints; & pltfs.' evidence was not sufficient to discharge the heavy onus placed upon them in an allegation of passing off. The action was dismissed with costs.—FOX'S GLACIER MINTS, LTD. v. JOBLINGS (1932), 49 R. P. C. 352.

1431a. —— Strict proof required.]—Pltfs. were the registered proprietors of the trade mark "Castrol" in class 47. Deft., who owned a garage, sold there petrol & lubricating oil, but, if asked for Wakefield Castrol XL oil, said he did not stock it. His house was a mile & a half away & he got his wife to sell the very small amount of petrol & oil which might be asked for there. He took to the house two empty tins marked Wakefield Castrol XL oil, from one of which he had blacked out the words "Wakefield Castrol." Pltfs., to protect their trade, sent out employees to discover any dishonesty by the selling as their Wakefield Castrol XL oil of other XL oil. Two of their employees called at deft.'s house, & after asking for & buying some petrol alleged that they asked for two pints of Castrol XL oil. Defts.' daughter, 14 years old, attended to customers & poured out of the tin on which the words "Wakefield Castrol" were blacked out a pint. The supply then gave out & she asked in the house whether there was any more XL oil & was told there was not. The oil the daughter poured out was not Castrol XL oil, but XL oil of another name. The employees asked her to give a receipt & she made out one for one pint of oil 9*d.* The the price 9*d.* was substantially less than the price at which Wakefield Castrol XL oil was sold. She was then told she had not given a receipt for Castrol & was asked to put the word Castrol on the receipt. She added the words "Castrol XL." Pltfs. claimed an injunction against deft., his servants, & agents:—Held: it was necessary in trap order cases for a pltf. to prove beyond peradventure his case, but that had not here been done, as there was no suggestion that deft. had ever traded dishonestly at his garage & no proof that the daughter acted dishonestly: further, there was no evidence that a train was laid by deft. so as to enable an innocent agent to commit something which would amount to dishonest trading. Therefore no injunction could be granted against deft., & the action was dismissed with costs.—WAKEFIELD (C. C.) & Co., LTD. v. RUSSELL (1930), 47 R. P. C. 473.

1431b. —— ——.]—Pltfs., who were manufacturers of lubricating oil known as "Castrol" & were the proprietors of a trade mark consisting of that word registered in Class 47 in respect of lubricating oil, placed two separate trap orders with deft. Pltfs. then issued a writ for infringement & passing off. Pltfs. by their statement of claim alleged that on each occasion the oil supplied by deft.'s employees in response to orders for Castrol XL, was not Castrol XL, & that on the second occasion the oil supplied was drawn from a cabinet labelled Castrol XL, the said cabinet being exposed to the public view. Deft. denied the allegations:—Held: in an action for passing off the offence must be proved in the fullest possible way, & notice as soon as practicable of the incident relied upon should be given to deft.; although an offence had been committed no relief by way of injunction or damages could be granted, as a course of dealing could not be inferred from an isolated instance until it had been proved beyond doubt that the offence had been committed wittingly & knowingly. Inasmuch as an offence had been committed, although deft. himself was innocent, pltfs. were justified in bringing an action. No order was made in the action for any relief asked & no order as to costs.—WAKEFIELD (C. C.) & Co., LTD. v. PURSER (1934), 51 R. P. C. 167.

1436a. Sale of second-hand goods by trade name—No deception.]—Pltfs. were manufacturers of electric lamps under the marks "Osram" & "Mazda" respectively, & such marks were well known to the public. Deft., who kept a small shop in a poor quarter of London in which he sold various goods, offered for sale second-hand lamps of pltfs.' make at reduced prices in cartons bearing the respective marks:—Held: the question whether a customer in such a case expects to receive new or second-hand goods depends upon the circumstances, including the nature of the locality, of the shop, & of the goods: in the present cases there was no fraud or intent to deceive, & the inference might be drawn that deft.'s customers expected to receive second-hand lamps, & passing-off was not established. 1442a. ——.]—Pltfs., a German co., had for many years manufactured & sold magnetos under the name "Bosch" & certain other marks such as "Z.R.4." Before the war pltfs. formed a co. in America to make & sell magnetos, which co. was sequestrated in 1917 & formed into the American Bosch Corpn. Since 1917 magnetos had been imported into this country, manufactured by the American Corpn. & bearing the word "Bosch" as a part of the identifying marks. Pltfs. commenced an action against defts. to restrain them from passing off magnetos by using in connection with them the name "Bosch" & such marks as "Z.R.4.":—Held: there was no sufficient evidence that an American Bosch magneto could not properly be described as a Bosch magneto without other distinguishing words, & accordingly the word "Bosch" when applied to magnetos was not distinctive of pltfs.; & deft. was not intending to pass off magnetos not manufactured by pltfs. as manufactured by them.—ROBERT BOSCH AKTIENGESELLSCHAFT v. COOK (R. Pltfs. were the registered proprietors of a Trade Mark No. 321,009 registered in 1910 consisting of the words Trinity Street, Street being in small letters, above a triangle within which was a monogram, & the word "Brand" below the triangle. On their hosiery, however, they had used a mark consisting of the words "Trinity Street Brand," above "All Pure Wool made in England," the word "Trinity" being in large letters & the word "Street" in small letters, & against those words was "Registered 321,009." Defts.' hosiery was dyed by a firm, whose works were in Trinity Lane, Hinckley, & they put on a mark consisting of the words "Trinity Dye & Finish," above a shield containing a representation of the arms of the Borough of Hinckley:—Held: pltfs., having made a misrepresentation in the mark which they had used that it was a registered trade mark, had disentitled themselves to relief & that the motion must be refused. 1495a. —— Due to mistake—As to rights of defendant.]—In 1930, Radio Rentals commenced business in the hiring of wireless receiving sets. In the early part of 1933, Radio Rentals entered into negotiations for an increase of capital with C. & W. In July, 1933, during the continuance of these negotiations, C. & W. incorporated deft. co. In Aug. 1933, pltf. co. was incorporated & had transferred to it the business carried on by Radio Rentals. In Jan. 1934, the negotiations were abandoned & defts. commenced trading in a business similar to that of pltfs. In May, 1934, pltfs. commenced an action to restrain defts. from trading in the hire of wireless receiving sets under the name "Rentals, Ltd." or any name so closely resembling pltfs.' name as to be calculated to deceive. Defts. alleged that their name was descriptive & not calculated to deceive, & that by reason of delay pltfs. were estopped from bringing an action:—Held: the delay was due to the mistaken belief by pltfs. that deft. co. had acquired some rights by reason of their prior registration, & the name of defts. so closely resembled that of pltfs. as to be calculated to deceive or cause confusion between the two businesses. An injunction was granted but was suspended for four weeks & an order was made for the payment by defts. of thirty guineas damages. Relief other than in respect of the trade names having been claimed in the pleadings but not at the trial, defts. were ordered to pay two-thirds of pltfs.' costs.—RADIO RENTALS, LTD. v. RENTALS, LTD. 1516a. —— —— ——.]—Pltfs. had for some years sold motor car windscreen wipers marked with the words "Vokes-Folberth," "C. G. Vokes & Co." & with pltfs.' address. Such wipers were manufactured for pltfs. by the C. Co. under an agreement which prohibited the C. Co. from manufacturing such wipers otherwise than to pltfs.' order & from selling such wipers to persons other than pltfs. The C. Co. wrongfully sold a number of such wipers marked as above to deft. E., who resold a number of such wipers to defts. The Marble Arch Motor Supplies, Ltd., who resold to the public. Pltfs. instituted an action against defts., claiming an injunction to restrain passing off, an inquiry as to damages, & an order for delivery up:—Held: the wipers complained of had been manufactured & sold to deft. E. by the C. Co. wrongfully & in breach of duty to pltfs.: such wipers, not having been selected or marketed by pltfs., were spurious, & the sale thereof by defts. constituted actionable passing off: both defts. had purchased innocently, & there being no evidence of sales by defts. of spurious wipers subsequently to complaint being made by pltfs., an inquiry as to damages must be refused: both defts. had, subsequently to complaint being made by pltfs., maintained their right to sell the spurious wipers, & the action was maintain-1527a. Action for passing off settled—Breach of terms—Injunction.]—Pltfs. commenced an action against defts. to restrain passing off. That action was settled on terms agreed by the parties & an order was made staying all further proceedings except for the purpose of enforcing the terms scheduled to the order. On ascertaining that breaches had been committed pltfs. moved for an injunction & an inquiry as to damages resulting from such breaches:—Held: the procedure was proper for obtaining relief in such cases. Motion for injunction in default of defence.]—Pltfs., who manufactured rectifiers for wireless purposes under the name "Westinghouse Rectifiers," commenced an action against defts. to restrain passing off their goods as those of pltfs. & moved for an interlocutory injunction. Defts. had obtained genuine goods of pltfs. & had taken them to pieces & reassembled them in an altered or mutilated form. Defts. did not appear & an interlocutory injunction was granted, of which the form was settled. 1557a. —— ——.]—Resps. had used for many years in India a ticket containing a picture of a lotus flower & also a combinaton of three marks, one of which also contained a picture of a lotus flower. Applts. had adopted a ticket with a different picture, but also including a lotus flower, & a combination of three marks similar in general appearance to resps.' three marks, but with a rose instead of a lotus flower. The ct. at Allahabad found that applts. had adopted these marks fraudulently, & that they were calculated to lead to passing off, & granted an injunction & damages. No case of actual deception was proved. The estimate of damages in particulars to the plaint which was verified by affidavit was Rs.25,000. The ct. awarded damages on the following basis: applts. were proved to have sold cloth bearing the marks complained of to the value of Rs.3,200,000; the ct. assumed that, if offered without these marks, only 40 per cent. of this quantity would have been sold, & gave as damages 9 per cent. as profit on the remaining 60 per cent., i.e. Rs.172,800. Applts. appealed:—Held: the injunction was rightly granted, but the damages must be calculated by estimating the trade lost to resps. by reason of the use of applts.' marks, & the damages should be reduced to Rs.67,000.—JUGGI LAL-KAMLA, PAT & JUGGILAL-KAMLAPAT MILLS OF CAWNPORE v. SWADESHI CO., LTD. sg. Licence to use trade name—Revocation—Continued use by licensee—Injunction.]—Applts. carried on business at shops in & near Melbourne under trade names which had become associated with their business, & they had the exclusive right to use the names by Business Names Act, 1928, s. 25 (1), as they were registered under Partnership Act, 1915, as using the names. Applts. verbally agreed with resp. that he should, at his own expense, open a shop fitted up like applts.' shops & there sell goods to be bought from them; resp., with applts.' assent, painted up over the shop their trade names, his own name not appearing. In the following year applts. complained that resp. was buying part of his stock elsewhere & required him to discontinue the use of the names, but an agreement was made that, as a temporary measure, he should purchase elsewhere goods which they could not supply. After some months resp. was buying from applts. only 10 per cent. of his stock & was finally required to discontinue the use of the names. Upon resp. refusing applts. claimed an injunction against him:—Held: resp. had only a revocable licence to use the names, & as it had been revoked by applts. they were entitled to an injunction; the evidence did not show that the names had ceased to be distinctive of applts.' business by reason of their user under the agreement, & if there had been any deception of the public by applts., it was not fraudulent so as to disentitle them to the relief claimed.—COLES (J. ee (p. 365) i. ——.]—By an agreement made in 1891, & confirmed by a statute of the Ontario legislature, applt. co. was given the exclusive right to construct & operate an electric railway for a period of 40 years, with a right of renewal for a further period of 20 years, on the lands of resp. commission. The agreement provided that, on its determination, the co., if unwilling to renew, was to be duly compensated by the grantors " for their railways, equipment, machinery & other works . . . but not in respect of any franchises for holding or operating the same," the compensation to be fixed by mutual agreement, or, in case of difference, by arbn., the property of the co. passing to the grantors of the franchise. The railway was operated by the co. for 40 years in accordance with the terms of the agreement, but it was not a commercial success. The franchise having terminated, an arbn. was proceeded with to determine the amount of compensation payable to applt. co., & the majority of the arbitrators were of the opinion that the railway, at the time it was handed over to resp. commission, " was of no value for operation as a railway to the railway co. or the parks commission or to anyone else," & that the compensation payable was the " scrap value," an amount which they fixed at $179,104. In case this should be held to be the wrong basis of assessment, they fixed the value of the undertaking calculated on the basis of cost of reconstructions, less depreciation, as at Sept. 1, 1932, at $967,592 :—Held : there was no justification under the agreement or the confirming statute for assessing the compensation at scrap value. It was fundamental that it was a railway complete with equipment, machinery, & works, which applt. co. was bound to hand over to resp. comrs. & for which it was to be duly compensated, & the proper basis of the compensation was the cost of reconstruction, less depreciation. It is well established that the reconstruction cost, less depreciation, is a correct method of valuing a public utility where the value of the franchise is excluded from consideration.—INTERNATIONAL RY. The municipalities replaced the bridges by new & stronger ones, the change involving construction on alignments different from those of the old bridges & the substitution of two lines of track for the former single track. aaa (p. 366) i. ——— ———.]—Where a railway co. runs its cars along part of a highway, its statutory right not being exclusive of the right of the public though preferential in the sense that upon the approach of a car other users of the highway have to give it right of way, the co. is under a legal duty by its servants to be on the watch for the safety of persons on the railway track, & to equip its car with lights adequate at night to enable the driver to stop in time to avoid them. It is not sufficient to equip the car with a light of a recognised & proper pattern, reasonable care must be taken that a car does not proceed when the light is out of order. There is a reciprocal duty upon persons using the highway to take reasonable care to avoid the car.

The language used by a jury in explaining their reasons for their verdict should not be construed too narrowly.—PRONEK v. WINNIPEG, SELKIRK & LAKE WINNIPEG RY. CO., [1933] A. C. 61; 102 L. J. P. C. 12; 148 L. T. 193, P. C.—CAN.

aaa (p. 366) ii. ——— ———.]—The duty of a railway co. towards its passengers for hire is to take reasonable care, including in that the use of skill & foresight, to see that its carriages are reasonably safe for persons using them in the ordinary & customary manner & with reasonable care; but this does not mean that the co. should be held to have absolutely warranted their safety. With respect to the constructional type of the steps of street railway cars, the duty of the co. under the above rule is fulfilled when it purchases from the best manufacturers equipment of the type customarily used for that traffic or itself manufactures such equipment in accordance with the design customarily employed by street railway companies; provided, of course, there is no special defect in the individual car in question.—GEBBIE v. SASKATOON, CITY OF, [1930] 2 W. 448a. Bottles marked with name of plaintiff—Refilled by defendant.]—Applts., who were manufacturers of aerated water, marked their name on the bottles & claimed an exclusive right of property in them. Resp. was a grocer who had no contractual relationship with applts., & he had in his shop a soda fountain by means of which he supplied customers with aerated beverages for consumption off the premises. The customers had to bring a bottle or other receptacle, & in practice resp. filled it without examination & without inquiring into the customer's right to use it. Occasionally applts.' bottles were used in this way. In an action by applts. against resp. to restrain him from receiving from customers bottles marked with applts.' name for the purpose of filling them with beverages :—Held : there was no duty on resp. to ascertain which bottles were applts.' property, & the action failed.

Retaking goods held under "display agreement"—No notice of removal.]—By a written "display agreement" made between X. co. & dealers, X. co. delivered a motor chassis to the dealers on the terms that it should remain the property of X. co., & should not be taken out on the road. The dealers made a deposit of £10 & were entitled by prepayment to purchase the chassis. X. co. were to be at liberty to remove the chassis at any time, but "if the dealer shall have constructed a body on the vehicle he shall be at liberty to dismantle the said body before removal of the vehicle under the provisions of this clause." X. co., without notice to the dealers, entered their garage &, seizing a chassis in the possession of the dealers, took it into the street, where they dismantled a body that had been fixed thereto by the dealers. The dismantling was observed by a creditor of the dealers & others :—Held : a term must be imported into the agreement that X. co. must give such notice of the removal to the dealers that they could remove their body from the chassis in the garage. Accordingly the co. had committed a trespass to goods for which substantial damages could be awarded.

At the conclusion of the trials the documents under (a) & (b) were not returned ; those under (c) were returned soon after seizure :—Held : (1) although the original seizure of the documents was unlawful, it was excused as regards documents under (a) & (b), it being to the interest of the State that material evidence should be preserved ; (2) the police had a right to search H. on his arrest, & also to seize any documents in his possession which would form material evidence against him or anybody else on a criminal charge. When they reached the barracks they were questioned by deft., the chief superintendent of the civic guards for the county, & were then detained in the barracks while the guards were endeavouring to procure evidence. They were not charged with any crime, nor were they formally arrested. They were detained in the barracks from an early hour of the morning of one day until the evening of the following day, when, in consequence of a letter of complaint from their solr., they were formally arrested & charged with the crime & brought before a peace comr., who remanded them on bail to the next district ct. At that ct. the charge was dismissed. It was admitted that pltfs. could have been brought before a peace comr. on either of the two days during which they were detained. Each of pltfs. then brought a civil bill against deft. for damages for false imprisonment :—Held : the detention of pltfs. amounted in law to imprisonment, as it was a total restraint of their liberty imposed on them by the action of the Guards. It was the duty of deft., as the officer responsible for such detention, to have brought pltfs. before a peace comr. as soon as he reasonably could. Accordingly, as he did not do so, he was liable to pltfs. in damages in respect of the period that elapsed between the time when deft. could reasonably have brought pltfs. before a peace comr. & the time when he in fact did so.—DUNNE v. CLINTON, [1930] I. r (p. 456) i. ——.]—Pltf. while trying to get a cash refund from deft. co. for a dress was ordered by a peace officer employed by deft. to accompany him to the office of the deft.'s superintendent. She did so, but while waiting in an outer office to speak to the superintendent, & after the officer had pointed out to her that the information she had given did not correspond with entries in the city directory, she left hurriedly & attempted to reach an elevator. The officer pursued & caught her by the arm, & after some resistance, she accompanied him to the superintendent's office, when on her refusing to give any explanation of the dress, she was permitted to leave. In an action for damages, it was found, on such of the evidence as the ct. accepted as true, that there was no assault & that there was no actual detention except for the period between the time when the officer seized her arm when she was near the elevator & the time when she was told she might go :—Held : the officer had reasonable ground for his suspicion that pltf. was committing an offence, & his conduct towards her was reasonable & justifiable under the circumstances.—COCHRANE v. T. While there they seized & carried away documents found on the premises, being (a) documents which were afterwards used on the trial of E., (b) a document found on H. & used on his trial, & (c) documents which did not constitute evidence on these trials. At the conclusion of the trials the documents under (a) & (b) were not returned; those under (c) were returned soon after seizure :—Held : although the original seizure of the documents was unlawful, it was excused as regards documents under (a) & (b), it being to the interest of the State that material evidence should be preserved; (2) the police had a right to search H. on his arrest, & also to seize any documents in his possession which would form material evidence against him or anybody else on a criminal charge. Any property so taken might be retained by the police until the conclusion of proceedings under any such charge. P. who had retained possession of the S. car, sold it on behalf of pltf. co. to C. on hire purchase. C. made default under his hire purchase agreement, & P., without authority from pltf. co., seized the car, & sold it to deft. co. who in turn sold it to W. Deft. co. never had actual possession of the car. Before the sale to W. was completed pltf. co. demanded the car, but the deft. co. refused to deliver it up & completed its purchase from P. & its sale to W. P. delivered the car to W. Pltf. co. then sued for conversion of the car & the jury found a verdict in its favour :—Held : there was sufficient evidence of ownership in pltf. co. & of possession of the car by deft. co. to justify the finding of the jury: but even if deft. co. had not been in physical possession of the car, its denial of pltf. co.'s right amounted to a conversion in the circumstances.—MOTOR DEALERS CREDIT CORPN., LTD. v. OVERLAND (SYDNEY), LTD. stolen from a firm of carriers. Pltf. was committed for trial at the London sessions on indictments charging him with having received certain of the goods other than the cloth knowing them to have been stolen, & on an indictment charging him with a similar offence in respect of the cloth, & in Feb. 1925, he was convicted on the first-mentioned indictments & sentenced to five years' penal servitude. He was never tried on the indictment relating to the cloth, but it was allowed to remain upon the record. On Apr. 2, 1925, pltf. not having as yet made any credible claim to the cloth, the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District handed handed it over to the firm of carriers, who claimed it, taking from them a written indemnity. On Jan. 16, 1931, pltf., having less than six months before made an unsuccessful demand for the cloth as his property, brought an action against the Receiver & the firm of carriers claiming damages for detinue & conversion of the cloth. The first-named deft. relied, among other defences, upon the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61). The jury, having heard the evidence, found that it did not establish the identity of the cloth with that stolen from the carriers, & they returned a verdict for pltf. against both defts. :—Held : the first deft. in handing over the cloth to the second defts. in Apr. 1925, had acted in "intended execution" of a "public duty" within Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1, & as the action in respect of the act of conversion so effected had not been commenced within six months after that act, it was not maintainable in respect thereof. Pltf. could not elect to rely only on his claim in detinue, so as to make the time run from his demand & to bring the date of the action within six months after the cause of action. Therefore, judgment should be entered for the first deft. against pltf., & for pltf. against the second defts.—BETTS v. METROPOLITAN POLICE DISTRICT RECEIVER & CARTER PATERSON & CO., LTD., [1932] 2 K. The davits & testing apparatus were then dismantled & kept by resp. co. for several years. A dispute arose over the non-payment of part of applt.'s account for work done, & a writ was issued. Applt. counterclaimed for damages for detinue or conversion of his davits & testing apparatus, which it transpired that resp. co. had sold as scrap. The judge awarded applt. the scrap value of these articles as damages. At the same time, he deposited 3,500 shares of the same stock as collateral security, & duly received a contract note purporting to show that the transaction had been carried out. The shares declined steadily in value, &, at the request of the co. for further margin on cash, he deposited with them a further 10,500 shares of the same stock, & paid $8,000 cash. He received monthly statements, showing the shares as being carried for him. In Jan. 1930, he decided to close the account, & paid to the co. what appeared to be the balance against him on that date, a sum of $42,334,92. The co. delivered to him 21,000 shares, i.e., 7,000 originally bought, 3,500 originally deposited, & 10,500 subsequently deposited. The co. in fact sold both the

The question on appeal was the amount of damages pltf. was entitled to receive:—Held: pltf. was entitled to treat the sale of the shares as a conversion of them, & was therefore entitled to receive the value of the shares upon the day on which they were converted, subject only to bringing into account the value of the shares he received, this value being taken as at the time he received the shares.—SOLLOWAY v. MCLAUGHLIN, MCLAUGHLIN v. SOLLOWAY [1937] 4 All E. 664a. —— ——.]—In 1925, a certain piece of land, known as B. Lodge, was sold to J. & M. In the conveyance a quantity of timber trees, saplings, etc., was excepted out of the sale by the vendors, who reserved to themselves the right to cut & remove them before Oct. 11, 1927. In 1926, pltf. purchased the timber trees, etc., & proceeded to cut & remove them. A large amount of the cut timber was, however, left on the land after Oct. 11, 1927, & in these circumstances J. & M. stated that pltf. had lost his title thereto & forfeited his right to remove it, & they claimed it as their property. As the result of an action in 1930 against J. & M. it was held that the property in the timber remained in pltf. after Oct. 11, 1927, & a certain sum by way of damages for conversion against J. & M. was at the instance of the judge agreed between all parties to the proceedings & awarded pltf. In the meanwhile J. & M. purported to sell the cut timber to the present defts. Pltf., who had taken no steps to enforce the order which he had obtained against J. & M., gave notice on June 10, 1930, to defts. that the sale by J. & M. to them was ineffective, as J. & M. had no title to the timber, & requesting the return of the timber to him. Defts. having refused & repudiated liability, pltf. commenced an action, & by his statement of claim asked for a sum by way of damages for conversion; the conversion relied on being the refusal by deft. co. to return the timber in compliance with the notice of June 10, 1930:—Held: whether a judgment in trover was in the alternative form or was merely one for the value of the goods or for damages for their conversion, it did not by itself & apart from special circumstances divest the owner of the property of his title thereto unless & until the judgment was fully satisfied.—ELLIS v. STENNING (JOHN) & SON, [1932] 2 Ch. 81, 101 L. On the same day, soon after the execution of the codicil, C. wrote out & signed a memorandum of the instructions given to him to the effect (inter alia) that the interest of the £12,000 was to be paid to a lady, whose name & full address were given, for the benefit of her & her son, whose full name followed. In an action by the widow of the testator & her son against the trustees & beneficiaries to test the validity of the trust legacy of £12,000:—Held: parol evidence was admissible to establish the trust; a complete valid & consistent trust had been established by the codicil & the memorandum of even date.—BLACKWELL v. BLACKWELL, [1929] A. PART I. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 5.—B. (b).

429 i. Discretion to select among class.]—Testator bequeathed property to a certain relative, or among certain relatives, who should within five years after his death settle in Australia. If after five years no one was qualified to receive the property, his trustees were empowered to "extend the time limit for a further three years, & after the lapse of this time were directed to hand over the property to one or more then named beneficiaries, stipulating if they think fit the terms on which" the property was to be handed over. The trustees were directed to consult two persons "about the disposal of the property." The trustees extended the time for the three additional years, but no one of the beneficiaries fulfilled the necessary qualification. During the period from the death of the testator to the disposal of his property the trustees were directed "to hand over the income to any approved object or person" in Adelaide, Australia, or to an Imperial object:—Held: the trustees had power to select any one or more of the named beneficiaries, & to apportion the subject-matter between them & to propose to any or all of these beneficiaries a reasonable scheme for the application of the property to some special purpose ancillary to the general objects of the recipient in question, & to be guided in the exercise of their discretionary power by the answer or answers received, & to prefer the beneficiary who was able & willing to devote the property to any approved object.—Re JOHNSON, [1928] S. 470a. —— Will referring to future notification to trustees.]—A testator by his will gave to his trustees £10,000 to be held upon trust & disposed of among such person, persons or charities as he might notify to them during his lifetime, & in default of such notification to fall into the residue. Testator had on the execution of an earlier will containing a similar clause which was revoked by the later one told one of his trustees that he desired to provide for a person whose name was to be kept secret, & that he had written the name & address of the proposed beneficiary on a sheet of paper enclosed in a sealed envelope which he then handed to the trustee to be kept with his will & not to be opened until after his death. The envelope remained in the trustee's possession & no further communication relating to it was ever made by the testator. After his death it was opened & found to contain a paper bearing the words "£10,000 to G.," giving a person's name & address. The other trustee until then was ignorant of the existence of the secret trust. A summons having been taken out to determine whether a valid secret trust was created in favour of G., FARWELL, J., decided that there had been no notification of any person within the meaning of the will to the trustees by the testator during his lifetime:—Held: on the true construction of the will it reserved power to testator to dispose of property by a future unattested disposition, contrary to Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26). The trust sought to be established by parol evidence was one inconsistent with the terms of the will, the notification of it to the trustee being anterior to the will. The trust therefore failed & the legacy fell into residue.—Re KEEN, EVERSHED v. GRIFFITHS, [1937] Ch. 236; [1937] 1 All E. R. 452; 106 L. J. Ch. 177; 156 L. T. 207; 53 T. L. R. 320; 81 Sol. 487a. ——.]—A testatrix having made a will in 1922 by which she purported to exercise certain general & special powers of appointment vested in her under certain settlements, subsequently in 1927 made a second will by which she appointed three named persons to be her executors & residuary legatees "to carry out instruction that I may leave in writing or verbally which I have not yet fully completed." This will contained a reference to a "cancelled will" which it was admitted referred to the 1922 will: testatrix having written on a copy of it the word "cancelled." The 1927 will was described as "Last will & testament," etc.:—Held: on the words used in the 1927 will—namely, "to carry out instructions that I may leave in writing or verbally which I have not yet completed," the residuary legatees took what was given them by the will as trustees, & it being impossible for the ct. to ascertain what the trusts intended by testatrix were, whatever passed to the residuary legatees had to be held by them on trust for testatrix's next of kin.—Re HAWKSLEY'S SETTLEMENTS, BLACK v. TIDY, [1934] Ch. 384; 103 L. 493a. —— After variation of original settlement.]—Testator bequeathed his residuary estate upon trust for his children in equal shares & declared that as to the share of his son E. a moiety thereof should be held upon trust to pay & make over the same to the trustees of a settlement dated Sept. 23, 1916, to be held by them upon the trusts of such settlement, so far as the same should be then applicable & capable of taking effect. By the settlement so referred to, which was made after the marriage of E. with his wife G., a certain fund was vested in the trustees thereof under which E. took the first life interest & upon his death G. took an interest during her widowhood with remainders over upon trusts for E.'s children by his wife G. or any future wife. Testator died in 1917, & in 1928 the marriage was upon G.'s petition dissolved, & an order was made under which the trusts of the settlement were varied; the effect of this variation being to deprive E. of any interest under the original trusts thereof, to give G. an immediate life interest, & to vest the settlement fund after her death in P., the only child of her marriage with E.:—Held: upon the proper construction of testator's will, the share of E. in his father's residuary estate ought to be held upon the trusts of the settlement as originally framed without regard to the order varying those trusts.—Re GOOCH, GOOCH v. GOOCH, [1929] 1 Ch. 740; 98 L. 2015a. —— Right of beneficiaries.]—In the events which had happened, a testator's residuary estate was held as to one-half in trust for pltfs. absolutely & as to the other half in trust for testator's daughter for life & subject thereto for her children absolutely. The trust fund comprised (inter alia) certain shares in a private limited co., which shares carried a voting power in the co. sufficient to enable the holder of them to control an ordinary resolution. By his will testator had directed the trustees not to sell these shares "unless they in their discretion shall consider it absolutely necessary," & he authorised them "to retain the same so long as they in their absolute & uncontrolled discretion shall think fit." Pltfs. required the trustees to divide the estate & to transfer to them the half to which they were entitled. The trustees contended that they were entitled to refuse to divide the shares if in their discretion they were of opinion that it was to the interest of the trust fund as a whole that they should be retained:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to have their half of the estate, including half of the shares in question, transferred to them.—Re SANDEMAN'S WILL TRUSTS, SANDEMAN v. HAYNE, [1937] 1 All E. Two of these trustees died prior to 1907, & the third, E., being desirous of retiring from the trust, C. & W. were in that year appointed new trustees. This appointment was subsequently discovered to be invalid. The legal estate was never divested from E., who died intestate in the U.S. in 1915, & no representation had been raised to his estate. The ct. gave liberty to a person, who represented some of the beneficiaries, to apply for a grant limited to conveying the legal estate & without citing the next of kin.—Re ECCLES, [1929] N. 1981 iii. —— ——.]—In determining whether or not it is proper to remove a trustee, the ct. will regard the welfare of the beneficiaries as the dominant consideration. A trustee of a settlement assigned his estate for the benefit of his creditors, &, subsequently, on the death of his co-trustee, became sole trustee of the settlement. His functions as trustee involved the exercise of important discretionary powers in respect of the settled property, which was of considerable value. He was requested both by the settlor & the beneficiaries to resign his office as trustee, but he refused to do so. In an action in the Supreme Ct. of Tasmania it was ordered that he be removed from his position as trustee:—Held: the making of the order for his removal was a proper exercise of the Ct.'s discretion.—MILLER v. CAMERON (1936), 54 C. 2033a. —— Misapplication of trust funds—Payment to wrong person.]—The indemnity conferred on trustees by Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 30 (1), does not apply where a trustee, even though as the result of an honest mistake, has misapplied trust funds by paying them to the wrong person.

The selling agents of a colliery co., which had sold its undertaking & was being voluntarily wound up, claimed £19,088 damages for alleged breach by the co. of the agency agreements. There had in fact, as the ct. held, been no breach of the agreements. The liquidator consulted the solrs. of a large shareholder, who was opposed to the claim, & they said they had advised their client that there was a valid claim but that the amount of damages was uncertain. Without taking further advice or obtaining the opinion of the ct., a course the liquidator had recognised to be open to him, the liquidator settled the claim for £15,000. A summons was taken out by a contributory to obtain repayment of this sum to the co., on the ground that the liquidator had been guilty of misfeasance, & the liquidator, whose bona fides was not in question, claimed the benefit of the indemnity given to trustees by Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 30 :—Held : without deciding whether the liquidator was a trustee within the meaning of the Act, even if he were : (1) he was not entitled to indemnity under sect. 30 (1), because that sub-sect. does not extend to a case where a trustee had misapplied trust funds coming to his hands ; (2) he was not, on the facts, entitled to relief under sect. 61.

Even if a liquidator is a trustee within Trustee Act, 1925, he is, as a paid trustee, disentitled to relief under sect. 61 (per CUR.). —Re WINDSOR STEAM COAL CO. (1901), LTD., [1929] 1 Ch. 151 ; 98 L. J. Ch. 147 ; 140 L. T. 80, C. A.

2147a. Income fee on sums collected or distributed —Whether payable out of residue.]—A testator by his will directed that out of the yearly income of his residuary estate his trustees should pay to his wife during her life " such an amount as will give her a clear yearly sum of £12,000 after paying or deducting income tax & super tax " & that " subject thereto " his trustees should stand possessed of his trust estate upon certain trusts for his son & daughter, & directed that all devises bequests legacies & annuities given by his will should be free of all death duties payable on his death which should be paid out of his residuary estate. He directed that a trust co. whom he appointed one of his exors. & trustees should be entitled to remuneration free of duties in accordance with the scale of fees in force at the date of his will. The fee to the co. under the scale in respect of the income dealt with by the co. was fifteen shillings per cent., & the whole of such income fee had been paid out of the income of the residuary estate. Questions arose whether any part of the income fee ought to be borne by the annuity, & this summons was issued to decide the point :—Held : whether the income fee was to be treated as an administration expense or as a legacy it ought to be borne out of the income of the residuary estate after providing for the annuity.—Re HULTON, MIDLAND BANK EXECUTOR & TRUSTEE CO., LTD. v. THOMPSON, [1936] Ch. 536 ; [1936] 2 All E. The co. made an authorised assignment in bkpcy. ; said land was included in the assets specifically mentioned, the assignment was registered against the title, & the trustee requested a transfer of the title from pltf. & otherwise so acted as to indicate an intention to take over the property as part of the estate assets. The son, who was married, was not in a position to make provision for his wife & child in the future, & he sought to have a sum raised out of the settled fund to be settled upon himself for life & after his death for his wife for life & after her death for his children :—Held : the trustees had power under the terms of the settlement to raise a sum not exceeding one-half of the settled fund for the purposes of a settlement upon the son & his family, but such a settlement ought to include the wife & children only, with an ultimate trust in favour of testator's residuary trust.—Re HALSTED'S WILL TRUSTS, HALSTED v. HALSTED, [1937] 2 All E. There was no transfer of the bank's security. 3191a. —— Public Trustee.]—By his will a testator, who died in 1887, appointed four named persons as the exors. & trustees of his will & gave his real & personal estate to them upon trust that they & the survivors & survivor of them & the heirs, exors. or administrators of such survivor their or his assigns, each & all of whom were intended to be included in the term " my trustees " thereinafter used, should distribute the net residue of his estate to & among such of the descendants of his brothers & sisters in such shares, proportions or amounts & at such proper times as the trustees, in whom he " placed full confidence," in their absolute & uncontrolled discretion should determine. Two of the trustees died in 1902, one retired in 1907, when another was appointed who retired in 1923 in favour of yet another. In 1934 the two remaining trustees retired & the Public Trustee was appointed in their place. In a summons to determine the effect of the will, it was argued by testator's next of kin that : (i) the gift of the residuary estate was void, because there was no longer anybody who, in accordance with the terms of the will, was entitled to exercise the power of selecting the descendants of testator's brothers & sisters who were to take, & (ii) the gift was void as infringing the rule against perpetuities, because the descendants of the testator's brothers & sisters might be selected by persons ascertained outside the limit fixed by the rule against perpetuities, &

3475b. Persons beneficially interested in possession—Annuitants.]—The trustees of a will, which came into operation after the commencement of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), were directed to stand possessed of the testator's residuary real & personal estate upon trust to pay out of the income thereof four life annuities, & while any annuity remained payable to divide the surplus income amongst such of testator's grandchildren as should be living for the period during which any annuity remained payable; &, on cesser of all the annuities to stand possessed of the residuary estate in trust for his grandchildren & the issue then living of any then dead, as tenants in common according to the stocks. By a codicil power was conferred upon the trustees after the expiration of five years from testator's death to sell his residuary estate or any part thereof by public auction but not by private contract. Upon a summons raising questions, whether the trustees or the persons entitled to the surplus income until cesser of the annuities were the proper persons in whom the land ought to be vested by the exor.; &, if the trustees were the proper persons, whether the annuitants were persons whose wishes ought to be given effect to by the trustees for sale:—Held: the annuitants were persons beneficially interested in possession within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 26 (3), whose wishes should be consulted by the trustees for sale.—Re HOUSE, WESTMINSTER BANK v. EVERETT, [1929] 2 Ch. 166; 98 L. Testator directed his trustees to reinvest the money when realised in trustees' securities & to hold the investments, whether original or substituted, upon trust to pay unto or permit his wife, F., who was one of the trustees, to receive the income of his residuary estate during widowhood, to be reduced to a moiety of the income on her re-marriage, & subject to her life interest the testator gave his residuary estate to his son C. to be paid to him as to a moiety at twenty-one & the residue on his attaining thirty, but should his son die under twenty-five the whole residue was given to F.:—Held: the words of the will created a trust for sale.—Re CRIPS, CRIPS v. TODD (1906), 95 L. The settlement contained various powers to the trustees appropriate to the management of real estate, but no power to postpone conversion. 3592a. ——— ———.]—A testator by his will gave the residue of his property upon trust for his wife for life or so long as she should continue his widow. In the event of her remarriage, testator directed that his trustees should set apart from the trust funds a sum sufficient to secure to the wife an annual income of £300. The principal of that sum was to be paid after the wife's death to testator's step-daughter absolutely. Testator died in 1892, & was survived by his wife. Upon a summons to determine questions arising upon the will, it was held (inter alia) that in the event of the widow's death without marrying again a fund sufficient when invested to produce on the date of the widow's death £300 a year would devolve upon the step-daughter absolutely. Testator's widow died in 1934 without having remarried, & the step-daughter claimed that the sum due to her, subject to adjustment in respect of advances made during the widow's lifetime, should be provided by the trustees raising & paying to her such capital sum as, if invested in 2½ per cent. consols at the date of the widow's death, would have produced an income of £300:—Held: the trustees had a discretion under the will to appropriate for the purpose of the widow's annual income of £300 such of the investments authorised by the will as they should think fit, & as that discretion had not been surrendered, they should be at liberty, subject to adjustment in respect of advances, to appropriate, for the purpose of constituting the fund payable to the step-daughter, investments forming part of the funds subject to the trusts of the will.—Re NICHOLSON'S WILL TRUSTS, ORTMANS v. BURKE, [1936] 3 All E. 3639a. Power to partition—Under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (3)—When exerciseable.]—(1) Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (3), which enables trustees for sale to partition unsold land in cases where the net proceeds of sale have become "absolutely vested" in adult persons in undivided shares, does not apply where those proceeds are only vested in life tenants. A power of partition in a will-settlement is pro tanto inconsistent with the statutory trusts for sale, & cannot therefore be treated as an "additional or larger" power preserved by sect. 28 (1) as amended by Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1926 (c. 11), Sched. It is therefore overridden by the statutory trusts.

(2) Where partition, though expedient, cannot be effected under any power vested in the trustees by the trust instrument or by law, the ct. can confer the necessary power for that purpose under Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 57.—Re THOMAS, THOMAS v. THOMPSON, [1930] 1 Ch. 194; 99 L. The houses never were finished similarly to those adjoining, nor was the deft. ever called upon to make any final or other inspection, & at a subsequent sale the property, which had been taken possession of by the mtgees. & allowed to become greatly out of repair, realised only $1,800 :—Held : under these circumstances, there being no mala fides imputable to the appraiser, that he was not answerable for the loss sustained by the lender.—SCOTTISH AMERICAN INVESTMENT CO. v. HOPE (1879), 26 Gr. 430.—CAN.

WATER SUPPLY.

Part I.—Supply by Local Authorities.

13a. Interference with existing supply.]—Pltfs. were the owners in fee simple & the tenant of a farm which had been sold to their predecessors in title in 1923. The 1923 conveyance contained the words " . . . together with the right as now enjoyed in common with others having the same right to the water supply to the hereditaments hereinbefore described through pipes from a spring. . . ." In 1933 whatever rights had been conveyed to the then purchasers in 1923 passed to pltfs. In 1934 defts., a local authority, acquired the pipes & water rights which constituted the water supply to the farm. As a result of certain alterations made by defts., the supply of water to the farm was decreased. Pltfs. sought an injunction to restrain defts. from making these alterations. It was contended that this action would not lie, the proper remedy being a claim for compensation under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 308 :—Held : (1) the action lay. Pltfs. would only be confined to their remedy by way of compensation if it were shown that the invasion of private rights was necessary for the proper carrying out of the statutory duties. The onus was on the local authority to justify its acts by showing that necessity ; (2) upon the construction of the deed of 1923 the only right conveyed was one to use such water as might be obtained through the pipe in question. There was no right to prevent the pipes being tapped or the supply of water being otherwise diminished.—BEAUCHAMP v. FROME RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1937] 4 All E. R. 348 ; 54 T. L. R. 81 ; 81 Sol. The justices had made an order that defts. were to admit pltf. authority to enter upon the lands for such purposes. Defts., however, appealed to the County Ct. Judge, who held that sect. 271 of Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878, under which the application was brought, did not apply to lands outside the district of the authority. He allowed the appeals, but stated a special case for the opinion of the King's Bench Division as to whether he was right in holding as he did :—Held : the County Ct. sx. Losses—How calculated.]—A county council & a water board, in pursuance of their powers under local Acts & Orders, levied public water rates within limited areas in two counties. Prior to the operation of Local Govt. (Scotland) Act, 1929, these rates had been levied on gross annual value, whereas rates leviable under public general Acts had been levied on a value arrived at after giving effect to deductions specified in Sched. I. to Rating (Scotland) Act, 1926. Under sect. 59 (1) of 1929 Act the loss on account of the public water rate levied by the county council fell to be calculated in accordance with the rules already mentioned. Under sect. 70 (2) & relative Regulations the water board's loss also fell to be calculated in accordance with these Rules. The county council & the water board contended that, for the purpose of ascertaining their losses on account of the public water rates referred to, "unreduced rateable value" meant gross annual value :—Held : "unreduced rateable value" was the value arrived at after giving effect to the deductions specified in Sched. I. to 1926 Act.—LANARKSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. LORD ADVOCATE, [1937] S. C. 155.—SCOT.

The local authority was also the water authority & in this capacity in Sept. 1934, it laid in the pavement of the road certain stopcocks & levelled them with the pavement by ramming in earth. Owing to the action of rain & weather upon the earth one of the stopcocks protruded. In Sept. 1916, pltf. fell over the protruding stopcock & injured herself. In an action for damages the local authority relied upon Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 32 :—Held : it was not sufficient for the local authority, when it reinstated the road in accordance with its obligations under Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 32, to level up the pavement with earth or otherwise, in such a manner that the action of the weather would revive the inequality ; but the road ought to have been so reinstated that no inequalities would be produced except by the natural consequence of wear & tear. At the place of the accident a pool of water had formed owing to a leakage from a service pipe through which deft. corpn., who were the statutory water authority, supplied water. Three days later frost supervened & the water froze. & the motor car skidded on the ice thus formed. Pltf. brought an action against the owner of the motor car & against the corpn. The trial judge freed the owner of the motor car from liability, but found that there was negligence on the part of the corpn. in that, though they did not know, they should have known that the pipe was leaking & took no steps to render the roadway safe, & he gave judgment for pltf. against the corpn. The corpn., in districts outside the city, had certain periodical examinations & tests made at the various stopcocks & hydrants involving a visit to any given spot about once in nine days, & they also relied on the probability of information from other local authorities or persons concerned with a district :—Held : on the material before him the trial judge was fully entitled to reach the conclusion which he did & his decision must be upheld.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. MARKLAND, [1936] A. It was admitted in cross-examination by an engineer employed by the water board that it was well known that children were apt to tamper with the valve-box lids :—Held : as the act of the child in lifting the cover & leaving it standing upright was an act which might be expected from a child, & as it was known to the water board's servants that children were apt to & did tamper with valve-box lids, the water board were liable to pltf. & were not protected by their statutory powers.—WELLS v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD, [1937] 4 All E. d i. ——.]—With respect to the right of a proprietor of land to prevent water flowing from higher land of his neighbour from coming on to his land, the weight of authority in the provinces of Canada where the English common law prevails is that the principles which apply to water flowing in a watercourse, i.e. in a defined channel, do not apply to water of a temporary & casual character which does not flow in any regular channel & has no certain course but which merely squanders itself over the surface of the ground. A right to have mere surface water drain from higher land on to lower land does not exist jure naturæ, & the proprietor of the lower land is entitled to erect an obstruction on his own land to prevent such water from overrunning his land, even if such obstruction has the effect of forcing the water back over the land of the upper proprietor. If on July 15, 1870, it was the common law of England that such was the right of the lower proprietor, that law, in the absence of legislation to the contrary, is the law of Saskatchewan. The fact that those owners, or their predecessors in title, were compensated at the time of the erection of the works to the extent of the full value of the lands affected does not imply that the fee simple of the lands was purchased by the Comrs., nor can such an inference be drawn from the terms of the Canvey Island Acts, 1792 & 1883. The ownership acquired by the Comrs. under those Acts is similar to that acquired by a local authority laying sewers in a street, namely, an ownership in the works themselves & just so much of the soil upon which the works are constructed as will enable them to be erected & maintained.—RICHMOND TOWNSHIP, [1932] 3 W.W.R. 318; 4 D. 626a. No right to drain through sea wall on to land.]—No one can acquire a right to interfere with a sea wall so as to prevent it operating as intended by the Crown when it was built, & no grant from the Crown can be inferred from the existence of a drain letting sea water through the sea wall on to land behind the sea wall. If therefore a person makes a gap in or a hole under the sea wall for this purpose he commits an illegal act. The mere fact that by the action of the sea the land on the seaward side of a sea wall has become higher than the land on its landward side gives the owner of property on the seaward side no right to drain through the sea wall.

Per SCOTT, L.J. : In passing Land Drainage Act, 1930 (c. 44), Parliament must be presumed to have intended to deal with any residual prerogative rights & duties, to entrust them to the various authorities mentioned in the Act, & to maintain the general constitutional position originally built up at common law & then taken over & developed by various statutes. It is an express or implied principle of the Act of 1930 that it is the duty of the relevant Board constituted under the Act to look to the attainment of its two main objects : (a) to control the flow of inland waters, & (b) to keep out sea water from farm lands. Where these lands lie below the level of high water, the sea defences can ensure no effective legal protection unless the Act contains this implication.—SYMES & JAYWICK ASSOCIATED PROPERTIES, LTD. v. ESSEX RIVERS CATCHMENT BOARD, [1937] 1 K. 652. Bank erected & maintained under statute—Wall substituted by private owner—Liability for maintenance.]—A river bank made by comrs. appointed under a private statute was given into the care of elected surveyors whose duty it was to keep & repair the bank. A private landowner built a wall through the bank in such a way as to make the wall replace part of the bank as a protection against floods. On the occasion of a particularly high tide, though not the highest on record, the waters broke through the wall, but not the bank alongside, & flooded neighbouring land :—Held : (1) as the surveyors had no right to prevent the private landowner cutting through the bank, they were under no duty to maintain the substituted defence, & the action failed against them; (2) the owner of the wall owed a duty to the neighbouring landowners to keep the wall in good repair; (3) as the bank had withstood the tide which broke through the wall, & in any event the tide was not the highest on record, the owner of the wall could not rely upon the defence of act of God.—GREENWOOD TILERIES, LTD. v. CLAPSON, [1937] 1 All E. 821a. —— Removal of goods purchased—Licence.]—Pltf. railway co. were the owners of two docks & the quays thereof at Kingston-upon-Hull. These docks were used extensively by fishing vessels. The catches were landed on the quays & there sold by "Dutch auction." The purchasers carted away their purchases to various points on the quay where they had offices rented from the railway co. Here the fish was sorted & packed for transport. The railway co. provided facilities for the transport of fish by rail, but the practice had grown up for the merchants to provide mechanical road transport. While the railway co. had no objection to road transport for reasonably short distances, they had serious objection to that form of transport for long distances; not only on account of the loss of revenue, but also on account of the serious congestion of the vehicles at the docks, which interfered also with the control of the railway-wagons on the quay sidings. They therefore sought to exclude the long-distance road transport by a system of licensing. Some merchants accepted the conditions; defts., among others, did not. Pltf. railway co. brought the present action against defts. to establish their position, & asked for a declaration that they were entitled to refuse admission of road transport to the docks except under licence & subject to conditions, & also asked for an injunction against the merchants, giving effect to the declaration. Defts. contested this right & claimed that they were entitled to bring their own vehicles & remove their fish irrespective of the destination; they based their contention mainly on their rights at common law & the provisions of the Hull Docks Act, 1861 :—Held : (1) the common law right of access to the docks & quays had gone except so far as preserved by the North-Eastern Railway (Hull Docks) Act, 1883, or subsequent statutes. The rights of the parties were, therefore, governed by the Act of 1883. Under the Act the railway co. were not bound to allow fish sales to take place on the quays in question, & had power to exclude defts. in the first instance. By Harbours, Docks, & Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 33: "Upon payment of the rates made payable by this & the special Act . . . the harbour, dock, & pier shall be open to all persons for the shipping & unshipping of goods." . . . By sect. 83 of the Act "The undertakers may from time to time make such bye-laws as they shall think fit . . . for regulating the shipping & unshipping . . . & removing of all goods within the limits of the . . . premises of the undertakers."

Formerly the co.'s railways answered all the requirements of fish merchants & owners of trawlers, but latterly the merchants brought to the market motor vehicles which carried fish to far distant places, formerly served by the railway, to the serious loss of the co.'s undertaking; to repair which the co. refused to admit to their dock premises any vehicle for the conveyance of fish without a licence which provided (among other things): (a) the vehicle should not be used for the transport of fish beyond the boundaries of the co.'s fish docks except for fish consigned for transit by railway or for sale & consumption within a radius of twelve miles from the docks; (b) no fish transported by the vehicle should be transferred directly or indirectly to or from any other road vehicle for conveyance to any other place beyond a radius of twelve miles from the fish docks:—Held: the co. were not entitled to impose those conditions upon the removal of fish from their premises without a valid bye-law enabling them in that behalf, supposing such a bye-law could be validly made; for that the marketing of fish when landed must be regarded as part of the process of shipping & unshipping within sect. 33 of the above-named Act, & access to the docks must include access with such a vehicle as the party seeking access deems necessary, subject to the power of the co. under sect. 83 to regulate such access by means of a valid & operative bye-law.—LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. 831a. ——.]—This was a claim by the owners of the steamship A. against the Ford Motor Co., Ltd. & the Port of London Authority for damage sustained by the A. whilst lying moored at Ford's Jetty, Dagenham, on May 3, 1935. At low water she took the ground & sustained damage by sitting on an anchor which was out from a P. L. A. dredger dredging in the river abreast of the jetty & about 250 feet away from it. The A. was part laden when she arrived at the jetty at about 2 a.m. The berth was assigned to her by the first defts., & she moored head down river under the directions of their servants. Pltfs. claimed that the first defts. should have known & warned them that the berth was unsafe. They alleged that the second defts. placed the anchor upon which the A. sat without buoying it, without giving warning, & without removing it after the A. arrived & before the water ebbed. The first defts. did not admit that the ship was properly moored or moored in accordance with the orders of their servants, nor did they admit the damage. They denied that they ought to have known that the berth was unfit & said that, if it was, the second defts. were to blame for placing the anchor upon the berth. The second defts. denied that they had been negligent, contending that the moorings of the A. were not properly secured, & they further denied that the A. was damaged by an anchor of theirs. They further alleged that both pltfs. & the first defts. had had circular notification that the dredger would be working opposite Ford's Jetty & that the first defts. had also been notified to that effect by a letter sent to them after the circular:—Held: the presence of the dredger did not put the first defts. on inquiry as to where the dredger's anchors were; pltfs. had failed to establish that the first defts. ought to have ascertained that the berth was safe, & that accordingly the first defts. were not liable; the second defts. were negligent in putting the anchor where they did without giving proper notice to the first defts. or pltfs., as to where the anchor actually was; those in charge of the dredging operations had not taken reasonable care to see the exact position where the anchor was dropped; if they had taken such reasonable care they would have realised that it was unsafe for the A. to berth where she did, & they ought to have warned pltfs. & the first defts. before the A. took the ground of the danger of her doing so. Judgment entered for the pltfs. with costs & for the first defts. with costs, pltfs. to recover from the second defts. the costs which they (pltfs.) would have to pay to the first defts.—ALBATROSS S.S. 831b. Liability of consignee.]—A motor-barge belonging to pltfs. was chartered to take a cargo to C. as ordered or so near thereunto as she might safely get, & there deliver the cargo alongside any wharf as ordered where she could safely deliver. A bill of lading was issued by the master to defts. as consignees of the cargo; it incorporated the terms of the charterparty, & by it the cargo was to be delivered at C. to defts.' order. The barge arrived at C. & went to a wharf called P.'s wharf, & there delivered a small part of the cargo to defts. & she was then moved to a more suitable wharf, where discharge was continued. It was then found that the bottom of the barge had sustained serious damage, owing, apparently, to her having laid in a foul berth. Pltfs. brought this action to recover damages from defts. on the ground that the injury must have been sustained at P.'s wharf; defts. denied liability & brought in the corpn. of C. as third parties, contending that if they should be held liable to pltfs. they ought to be indemnified by the corpn. as the harbour authority:—Held: (1) even if the injury to the barge had occurred at P.'s wharf, which had not been proved, there was no evidence that defts. were either lessees or occupiers of that wharf, & they could not therefore be held liable under the principles laid down in The Moorcock, 14 P. D. 64; (2) even if defts. had ordered the barge to a particular berth which was in fact an unsafe berth for that particular vessel, which had not been proved, they would still not have been liable, for it was the duty of the master to make sure that the berth to which he was ordered was a safe berth for his vessel, & if he found that he could not safely deliver at the berth to which he was ordered he need not obey the order to go to it. Judgment was therefore given for defts. & the question of their right to be indemnified by the third parties did not arise.—WEST (SAMUEL), LTD. v. WRIGHT'S (COLCHESTER), LTD. (1935), 40 Com. It was admitted, for the purposes of the case, that Loch Lomond was to be assumed to be an extension of the navigable non-tidal River Leven which flowed out of it:—Held: a right of navigation on the part of the public did not include a right to beach or moor boats on private ground for the purpose of carrying on the business of a boat-hirer; & a right on the part of the public to embark & disembark on private ground could not be acquired by prescription.—LEITH-BUCHANAN v. HOGG, [1931] S. The cause of the accident was the failure of the defts. to maintain the footway in good condition. In an action for damages :—Held : the swing-bridge was not a highway & defts. were not in the position of a surveyor of highways, & therefore defts. could not avoid liability on the ground of nonfeasance or on the ground that a surveyor of highways is not liable to pay damages to persons injured by his neglect of duty, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—GUILFOYLE v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1932] 1 K. 110a. Application of Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), s. 12 (6)—Conditions precedent to prosecution.]—Applt. was convicted by justices of delivering a quantity of coal which was less than that expressed in the weight ticket, contrary to Weights & Measures Act, 1889 (c. 21), s. 21 (2). No notice in writing of the date & nature of the alleged offence had been served on or sent by registered post to applt. in accordance with Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), s. 12 (6). The coal was delivered under an antecedent contract covering a number of deliveries & was purchased for consumption in or by a steam roller belonging to the purchasers :—Held : (1) as sect. 15 (1) of 1926 Act provided that that Act was to be construed as one with the Weights & Measures Acts, 1878–1926 (which included the Weights & Measures Act, 1889 (c. 21)), & as there was no manifest discrepancy between the provisions of sect. 12 (6) of 1926 Act, & sect. 21 (2) of 1889 Act, the conviction was bad for failure to fulfil one of the conditions precedent to a prosecution laid down by sect. 12 (6) ; (2) as the coal was sold for consumption by the purchaser, applt. was a " retailer " within sect. 12 (6) of 1926 Act, his position in that respect not being affected by the fact that the coal was delivered under an antecedent contract.—PHILLIPS v. PARNABY, [1934] 2 K. Food—Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63)—Validity of Regulations.]—By Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act. 1926 (c. 63), s. 3, a person in offering for sale an article of food is forbidden to make any misrepresentation as to its weight. Sect. 4 (1) provides that in the case of certain specified articles [which includes lentils] the weight of the wrapper may be included in the weight purported to be sold if its weight is not proportionally heavier than specified. By sect. 4 (2) (b), the wrapper, where the article is prepacked & the weight of the wrapper is permitted to be included in the weight sold, must bear a true statement of the " minimum weight " of the article with its wrapper. By Reg. 2, cl. 8, of the Sale of Food (Weights & Measures : Prepacked Articles) Regs., 1927, in this latter case the wrapper must bear the words " gross " or " gross weight " in addition to the indication of weight. Resps. offered for sale three packets of lentils bearing on the wrappers the words " 1 lb. net." the packets in fact containing less than one pound of lentils alone :—Held : (1) " minimum weight " in sect. 4 (2) (b) meant minimum gross weight, & consequently resps. had made a misrepresentation as to the weights of the packets under sect. 3 of the Act, & had also infringed the provisions of Reg. 2, cl. 8, of the regulations in omitting to add the words " gross " or " gross weight " ; (2) Reg. 2, cl. 8, was not ultra vires.—HUGGETT v. HELP YOURSELF STORES, LTD., [1934] 2 K. The letters containing the offer could not be produced. Pltf. accepted the offer & kept house for & attended to S. for 14 months. Then, on Sept. 26, 1934, S. made a will making said provision for her. The will also provided that the devises & bequests to her should be null & void if she "shall leave me & cease to care for me." On Feb. 5, 1935, pltf. & S. had a quarrel & she left his house. On that day he made a new will which made no mention of her. On the second day after she had left him S. asked pltf. to return. The alleged contract was oral, & at the trial of the action pltf. was non-suited on the ground that the contract related to land & there was no note or memorandum in writing of the contract as required by Statute of Frauds. E. died, & subsequently W. made a will, but omitted therein to perform his promise. In a suit praying in effect for specific performance of the contract as against the exors. of the will of W., an amended statement of claim alleged that from the date of making of the contract up to the date of his death W. was under a moral obligation to make a will in performance of his contract, & save as next hereinafter mentioned, W. recognised that he was under such moral obligation ; that shortly prior to the date of his will W. believed he was not under any such moral obligation as aforesaid & while holding such belief & on account of the same made his will ; but that subsequently thereto, W. again recognised his said moral obligation, & formed an intention to discharge the same, & continued to have such intention up to his death, which, however, occurred before he could carry out such intention & discharge such obligation. On demurrer to the statement of claim :—Held : the ct. was not justified in extending to the case of a notional gift or will the doctrine stated in Stevens v. King, [1904] 2 Ch. 30, at p. 33, as to the exception to the general rule that a gift by will lapses on the death of the donee in the lifetime of testator. Further, the principles stated in Synge v. Synge, [1894] 1 Q. B. 466, at pp. 470, 471, could not be extended or applied so as to entitle pltf. to a decree. As it was not contended that W. was bound by his contract, or was under any moral obligation, to provide against lapse in his will, the case was governed by the decision in In re Brookman's Trust, L. Therefore, where testator, who died in 1912, by his will settled certain chattels including three family portraits to be held upon trusts which should as nearly as the rules of law & equity permitted correspond with the limitations of real estate in tail, & set out such limitations at length, but settled no real estate upon the same limitations :—Held : testator had attempted to create an entailed interest in the chattels but had not succeeded, & therefore the trustees of his will had no power to sell them under sect. 130 (5). But the ct., deeming it in the circumstances expedient, would make an order authorising the sale of the portraits by the trustees under Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 57.—Re HOPE'S WILL TRUST, HOPE v. THORP, [1929] 2 Ch. 136 ; 98 L. 239b. —— Necessity for use of statutory form.]—A testator, whose will was executed before 1926, devised his residuary estate after the death of his wife upon trust to pay the income to the beneficiary in possession of the P. Estate under the will of his uncle. The wife died in 1933. The residuary estate was entirely personalty. By the will of the uncle the P. Estate was devised to the use of his son R. for life with remainder to his sons successively in tail with remainder to his son H. for life with remainder to his sons in tail with remainder over to testator's right heirs. R. had no issue & was in possession of the P. Estate as tenant for life. H. had one son, B., who was living & had an infant son. The question arose whether the law in force before 1926 applied, under which B. as the first tenant in tail would take the personalty absolutely subject to the prior life interests, or whether under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 130 (3), an estate tail had been created in the personalty, so that the infant son of B. was entitled in tail until his father executed a disentailing assurance :—Held : the sub-sect. does not operate unless there is in the will to be construed a direction that the personalty shall be held upon trusts described in the exact words of the sub-sect. ; such words not being used in this will, the sub-sect. did not apply ; & after the death of the wife the property was to be held under the law in force before 1926.—Re JONES, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. JONES, [1934] Ch. 315 ; 103 L. The last of the brothers & sisters died in 1930. The widow was still living. On the construction of the will surviving brothers & sisters was held to mean brothers & sisters surviving the widow, & there was therefore an intestacy as to the reversionary interest in the testator's residuary estate expectant on the widow's death:—Held: the reversionary interest ought not to be forthwith sold.—Re MCKEE, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. MCKEE, [1931] 2 Ch. 145; 100 L. 299c. Provision for accumulation for children—Death without issue.]—A testator, after bequeathing an annuity to his mother, directed his trustees out of the annual income of his residuary estate to pay an annuity to his wife, & he further directed that the surplus income of his residuary trust fund should be accumulated during the life of his wife or for twenty-one years from his death (whichever period was the shorter); & he directed that at the expiration of the period of accumulation his residuary trust fund should be held upon trust, as to both capital & income & the accumulations of such income, for his children. Testator died without issue, & his widow claimed that she was entitled to call on the trustees to stop the accumulation of any surplus income of the residuary estate & deal with any such surplus income as upon an intestacy. Testator's mother claimed that the accumulations ought to be continued:—Held: testator having died without issue there was no effective disposal by his will within sect. 49 of Administration Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), of the residuary estate, & the direction to accumulate the income was not a direction to which the property not effectively disposed of by the will was subject. Therefore, subject to making provision in due course of administration for the annuity given to testator's mother, the trustees ought not to accumulate the surplus income, but that it ought to be dealt with as income from the residuary estate undisposed of by testator.—Re THORNBER, CRABTREE v. THORNBER, [1937] Ch. 29; [1936] 2 All E. 712a. Reference to deed—Deed inoperative.]—On Apr. 15, 1935, a testator executed a document in the form of a deed expressed to be made between testator, his brother, his sister & 7 named persons as trustees, which stated that each of the first three parties thereto covenanted with the others that he or she would execute a will whereby all his or her residuary estate should be given to the trustees upon the trusts therein mentioned, being charitable trusts for the establishment & endowment of a hospital. The instrument was also executed by testator's brother, but not by his sister or the trustees. On Apr. 25, 1935, testator by a codicil to his will revoked the gift of his residuary estate contained in his will & directed his exors. " to stand possessed thereof upon trust to pay & transfer the same to the persons (naming them) named in a deed dated Apr. 15, 1935, to be the trustees of such deed or the survivors of them or other the persons who are for the time being the trustees of such deed (hereinafter referred to as the ' charity trustees ') to be held by the charity trustees upon the trusts in the said deed declared." The testator died & the question arose whether his exors. ought to hand over his residuary estate to the persons named as trustees in the instrument of Apr. 15, 1935, to be held by them upon the trusts therein expressed :—Held : testator by his codicil intended to give his residuary estate to the trustees of an operative deed to be held by them upon the trusts of that deed, & as the instrument referred to never became an operative deed, the exors. ought not to hand over the testator's residuary estate to the persons named as trustees in that instrument.—Re HURDLE, BLAKENEY v. HURDLE, [1936] 3 All E. so. Will typed by testator—& signed.]—A typewritten testamentary document was found in the repositories of a deceased bank agent, to which was appended his signature in writing. An addition, also typewritten, had been made to the original document, altering one of its provisions, & his written signature was also appended to it. The original document & the addition each contained a statement, also typewritten that they were "accepted as holograph." In a special case brought to determine the validity of the document as a testamentary writing, the parties were agreed in stating that both of the signatures were those of deceased, & further that, owing to a physical disability, he had for some time prior to his death invariably used a typewriter for his communications in writing, & that the whole of the document in question had been typewritten by him:—Held: as the document was a document admittedly typewritten in its entirety by testator, who had appended his written signature to it, it could competently be treated as holograph of testator, &, accordingly, it fell to receive effect as a valid testamentary writing.—M'BEATH'S TRUSTEES v. M'BEATH, [1935] S. Some time prior to his death he delivered to his law agents, who had custody of his trust-disposition & settlement, a sealed envelope bearing the following holograph endorsation: "To be placed with my Last Will & Testament—T. R." After his death the envelope was found to contain three documents of a testamentary character, all holograph of the testator. Only one was signed. One of the unsigned documents began in these terms: "I T. R. desire to make the following alterations & additions to my last Will & Testament namely." Certain directions followed, & the document concluded with these words: "Written by my own hand at L. A. the 17th day of October 1921":—Held: the trustees were bound to give effect to the directions contained in the unsigned document, on the ground that the facts connected with the document, taken in conjunction with the directions in the trust-disposition & settlement, showed that testator intended it to be read along with his formal settlement, of which he had effectually made it a part.—RONALDS' TRUSTEES v. LYLE, [1929] S. On the second page under the words, "Continuation from the other side," there were dispositions of property & a residuary gift without any further execution or attestation: —Held: the words, "See other side for completion," had the effect of joining in or interlining the writing on the second page, & that the executed writing should be included in the probate.—PALIN v. PONTING, [1930] P. 185; 99 L. Below this was an attestation clause with the signatures of testatrix & attesting witnesses. There was evidence that the whole will was written before the execution, but there was nothing on the face of the page containing bequests to show that the words of the final bequest were the concluding words of the will. On the question whether the whole of the will or only the page containing the appointment of the exor. received the protection of Wills Act Amendment Act, 1852 (c. 24), s. 1, & whether the bequests were disentitled to probate by reason of their being "underneath or following" the signature, within the meaning of the exception in the closing words of the sect.:—Held: distinguishing cases previously decided on those words, which were cases of the use of will forms, if the ct. is satisfied that the whole will was written before execution & that the dispositive part of it may fairly be read as leading up to the execution & in no sense as a mere annexe or schedule to the will, it would be transgressing the spirit of the statute to insist as a criterion of valid execution upon proof that the several parts of the will were actually written in any particular sequence.—In the Estate of LONG, [1936] P. 166; [1936] 1 All E. 1 i. ——— ———.]—Sect. 14a of Wills Act Amendment Act, 1924, fixes a time as to when the validity of a will of the class referred to therein is determined, viz., when it was made. In 1911 testatrix made a codicil to the will of 1907 declaring that a share in her estate thereby given to a son should be held upon protective trusts. In 1921 testatrix executed a third codicil, which referred only to the will & codicil of 1893, altered some of the provisions of the will & otherwise confirmed it:—Held: the effect of the codicil of 1921 was to revoke both the will of 1907 & the codicil of 1911, & to revive the will & codicil of 1893. —Re BAKER, BAKER v. BAKER, [1929] 1 Ch. 668; 98 L. 1657a. —— ——.]—The question whether a will has been revoked by a subsequent instrument depends entirely upon the intention of the testator as expressed in that instrument. The rule laid down in Baker v. Story, No. 1655, & earlier cases that a second will will revoke an earlier one though it is ineffective to confer any gift, if such failure is due to the incapacity of the devisee or legatee & not to any infirmity in the will itself, is no longer acceptable since the decision in Ward v. Van der Loeff, No. 1662.

Testatrix by a will made in 1914 gave her residuary estate upon trust to pay an annuity to her son H., & subject thereto for her grandchildren who should attain twenty-one. In 1921 she executed a document which she described as her last will, by which she gave the whole of her estate to H. absolutely, but it contained no clause revoking former wills. The later will was ineffective, though admitted to probate, owing to the wife of H. having attested it :—Held : the earlier will was restored, there being no intention shown by testatrix in the later one to revoke it.—Re ROBINSON, LAMB v. ROBINSON, [1930] 2 Ch. 332 ; 99 L. 1707a. ——.]—B., by his will, after appointing his sister W. & one S. exors. & trustees thereof, & after giving certain legacies & exercising certain powers of appointment therein more particularly referred to, appointed & devised his mansion house, lands, cottages & hereditaments known as Wick Episcopi unto & to the use of his trustees upon trust after payment thereout as therein mentioned to pay the residue of the rents & income thereof to his sister the said W. for her life, & after her death upon the trusts therein mentioned. After a further bequest of jewellery, plate & portraits so as to devolve as heirlooms with the said mansion house so far as the rules of law would permit by (sic) the person or persons for the time being entitled to the possession or receipt of the rents of the same mansion house, testator thereby further gave, appointed, devised & bequeathed all the rest & residue of his real & personal estate unto & to the use of his trustees to such uses, upon such trusts, & for such ends intents & purposes as the Wick estate might under the trusts of his will for the time being be held so far as the rules of law would permit. By a codicil dated August 4, 1927, after reciting that he was desirous of giving to his stepdaughter C. (pltf.) a residence in England, testator appointed, devised & bequeathed to her for her life his said house Wick Episcopi & all the furniture, books, linen, plate & effects therein or belonging thereto & also the land he occupied therewith. After testator's death in 1928 pltf. C. took out an originating summons to determine (inter alia) the question whether pltf. was entitled for her life to the whole or any & if so what part of the rents, profits & income arising out of the residuary real & personal estate of the testator or of the income of the proceeds of sale thereof, or whether deft. W. was entitled during her life to the said rents, profits & income or to some & what part thereof, or to whom the same were payable :—Held : testator intended by the codicil only to give certain defined property to pltf. for her life for the definite purpose, namely, the provision of a house in England, mentioned in the codicil & that the codicil could only be read as interpolating into the will an interest in favour of pltf. in respect of the property specifically mentioned in the codicil ; & therefore deft. W. was entitled during her life to the rents profits & income of testator's residuary real & personal estate, & the proceeds of sale thereof. Further, the jewellery, plate, etc., included in the gift of heirlooms contained in testator's mansion house at the date of his death, were in the events that had happened, to be enjoyed by deft. W. during her life ; & the excepted articles of plate were to be enjoyed by pltf. during her life.—Re BUND, CRUIKSHANK v. WILLIS, [1929] 2 Ch. 455 ; 99 L. J. Ch. 4 ; 142 L. T. 39.

1801a. —— —— Remainder stitched together.]—Testatrix in 1921 had a will prepared by her solrs. in the usual way. In 1935, some two months before her death, she asked for the will & sent it to the solrs. She was then about 98 years old. It was noticed that the will had been cut & stitched, but as she was then ill, nothing was said about it. In fact two or three lines had been cut out of the will & the remainder stitched together again. There was no evidence when this had been done but there was evidence that the lines taken out were not of a dispositive character :—Held : the part cut out had been revoked & the remainder should be admitted to probate.—In the Estate of NUNN, [1936] 1 All E. Then there was a direction that the surplus moneys remaining after payment of the legacies should be divided between seven named persons, the children of A., the children of W., & the two children of J., in certain proportions. By a codicil testatrix gave £1,000 upon trust to pay the income to E. for her life, & after her decease directed that the same should fall into her residuary estate & be divisible accordingly; she then revoked the gift by her will of the portion of her residuary estate to the two children of J., & directed that they should take no part of her residuary estate, &, in all other respects, she confirmed her will :—Held : in the absence of sufficient indication of intention to give the shares, the gift of which was so revoked, to the other residuary legatees, the effect of the revocation was that those shares were undisposed of.—Re FORREST, CARR v. FORREST, [1931] 1 Ch. 162; 100 L. 2754 i. Whether valid—Condition for divorce.]—By her will testatrix directed her trustees to invest one-fourth share of her estate & to pay the net annual income to pltf., her daughter, E., during her life without power of anticipation, & after her death to hold such fourth share for the three other children of testatrix, & testatrix declared that if E. " shall survive her present husband or shall obtain a divorce " from her present husband " the trustees should hold such fourth share for E. absolutely. E. was committed to a mental hospital in 1921, & had continued to be a mentally defective person ever since. Her marriage with " the present husband " was dissolved in 1932 on the husband's petition :—Held : (1) on a general review of the dispositions of testatrix concerning E., the words " shall obtain a divorce " were not limited to proceedings in which pltf. should be the petitioner ; (2) provision made by a mother for her daughter upon the contingency of the latter either divorcing her husband or being divorced by him was not against public policy as being contra bonos mores, not being in itself likely to induce the mischief aimed at in Lambert v. Dillon, [1933] N. Z. L. R. 1059, & the cases therein cited.

Semble : there is a clear distinction between the encouragement of separation between the spouses, which is the voluntary act of one or both, & provision for the contingency of divorce, which in the final resort is the decree of the ct. made only upon proof of its legal justification.—Wacker v. Bullock, [1935] N. r i. —— Condition subsequent—Annexed to gift of personalty.]—A testamentary condition subsequent in general restraint of marriage, whether it forfeits or only reduces the gift, is, in the case of personalty, only primâ facie void ; &, if on the true construction of the will the intention is to benefit the object in whose favour the gift over is made & not to compel the celibacy of the first object of the gift, the condition takes effect.—Re Haythornthwaite Estate, [1930] 1 W. 2786 ix. —— ——.]—A settlement made by a Jewish mother contained trusts of real property in favour of her sons, who were of the Jewish faith, & of their widows, & of the children of her sons. It also contained a forfeiture clause in the following terms : " Provided nevertheless & notwithstanding anything herein contained if any person or persons entitled hereunder should marry out of their persuasion then any share or interest of him her or them shall go be applied, & be divided & distributed as if there had never been any such person " :—Held : the forfeiture clause was void for uncertainty.—Equity, Trustees, Executors & Agency Co., Ltd. v. Moss, [1931] Argus L. 2786 x. —— ——.]—Testator directed his trustees after payment of his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses to divide the whole of the assets of his estate into three equal parts, to pay two of them to his son for his own use absolutely & to pay the other part to his daughter for her own use absolutely. This direction was followed by a defeasance clause & gift over in the event of marriage with a member of the Roman Catholic Church :—Held : the interests taken by the children indefeasibly vested in them on the death of testator, &, accordingly, the defeasance clause was restricted in its operation to the period anterior to the vesting, that is to marriage in the lifetime of testator.—Saywell v. Saywell (1932), 32 S. Moreover, the fact that the legatee in question was so confirmed when thirty-one years old was not a substantial compliance with the condition.—Re Forbes, Harrison v. Commis, [1928] 3 D. L. sd. Condition against entering Roman Catholic convent.]—On the construction of a forfeiture clause in a will :—Held : " in the event of her entering any Roman Catholic Convent or similar institution " meant a permanent assocn. with a convent as a member of the community, which assocn. could only be brought about by the taking of the final vows after periods spent first as a postulant & then as a novice. No forfeiture was incurred by children attending a Roman Catholic convent, school or institution as boarders.—Re Madore Estate (1936), N. L. R. 215. S. Af.

se. Condition interfering with parental duties.]—A testator, after devising property to his trustees for his son, John, for life, & thereafter for his son's children on their attaining the age of twenty-one years, or being females attaining that age or marrying, expressed the desire " that the children of my said son John shall be brought up in the Protestant faith & in the event of my wish not being complied with in this respect I hereby exclude if she predeceased him the capital to be divided between her children in equal shares. The following condition was added: "I desire that my daughter & any children she may bear should at all times conform to & be members of the Established Church of England & at no time may any child of hers go to or be sent to any Roman Catholic school for education & if either my daughter or her children violate this my wish in any way then all the benefits accruing to her or them under this my will shall be considered as null & void," & there followed a gift over:—Held: (1) the first part of the condition requiring persons to conform to & be members of the Church of England was void for uncertainty, since it was open to grave doubt whether any particular act or omission in the future would bring about a forfeiture; (2) the second part of the condition requiring that "at no time may any child of hers go to or be sent to any Roman Catholic school for education" was void as a fetter upon the mother to do what she might think best for the welfare & education of her children. The condition was directed against sending the child to a Roman Catholic school & did not require that the child should not be brought up in or adopt the Roman Catholic faith; &, the mother having survived testator, the result would be to the detriment of the mother rather than the child.—Re TEGG, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. BRYANT, [1936] 2 All E. 2837a. Condition against association or marriage with named person.]—Testator devised & bequeathed one moiety of his residuary estate upon trust for conversion & investment & to pay the income to his wife during her life or widowhood, & subject thereto in trust for his two children named, a son & a daughter, in equal shares, but subject to a proviso in the case of the daughter that if she should intermarry with A. B. or live with him as his wife, or leave home with the intention of living with him or misconduct herself with him, or be delivered of a child or children of whom the said A. B. should be the father, then in any of those events any devise or bequest either residuary or otherwise under testator's will should be absolutely void & forfeited, & the daughter should be deemed to have died in his lifetime as a single woman. There was no gift over of the daughter's share upon any forfeiture for breach of the conditions:—Held: the conditions were not void for uncertainty, or as being in terrorem, for if a testator desires & expressly intends a gift to be revoked the absence of a gift over will not prevent the revocation from taking effect, & moreover the doctrine of in terrorem is only applicable to conditions in restraint of marriage & against disputing a will. Therefore, there was an intestacy as to the daughter's share, & the next-of-kin, being all sui juris, could agree so as to defeat the proviso.—Re HANLON, HEADS v. HANLON, [1933] Ch. 254; 102 L. In 1917, when the will was made, applt. was only twelve years of age, & testator knew that applt.'s mother was a Roman Catholic, & that he was being brought up in that religion. According to the law of Germany, where applt. & his parents were domiciled, applt. could not effectively change his religion without their consent until he was twenty-one years of age. On reaching that age he proved that he had become of the Lutheran religion, & he had since remained so:—Held: the intention of testator was that applt. should have an opportunity of choosing his religion, & as he was entitled in law to postpone his choice until he was twenty-one, but not beyond, he was entitled to receive the annuity, also arrears from the date of testator's death, as until he reached twenty-one his enjoyment of the annuity was free from condition.—PATTON (W. About eighteen months after the execution of the will, & five years prior to his death, testator had been committed to a lunatic asylum on the information of a neighbour & had been detained for a period of one month:—Held: the condition imposed by testator was valid, & in the events which had happened the gift over to the British & Foreign Bible Society took effect.—Re ARCHBOLD, MCKEE v. ARCHBOLD, [1933] N. accumulate the income until her nephew should attain the age of 24 years & afterwards to pay him the income, provided that he should not be a Roman Catholic at her death, or, if he was, that he should cease to be one within 12 months thereafter, the payments to continue until he should become a Roman Catholic, with a gift over if the gift failed. At the death of testatrix the nephew was a child of about nine years of age. He was the son of a Roman Catholic & was being brought up in that faith. In 1917 NEVILLE, J., decided (No. 2961) that within the meaning of the will the child was not a Roman Catholic at the death of testatrix & that he was to have an opportunity of making a choice in the matter when he attained 21 years of age. In 1931, when the legatee was 24 years of age & had never wavered in his adherence to the Roman Catholic Church, the trustees applied for a decision of the question whether the gift over had taken effect:—Held: although the proviso as to the child's ceasing to be a Roman Catholic within 12 months was void, yet, as the will provided that even after the age of 24 years the legatee was to benefit only until he became a Roman Catholic, & as this provision included his being a Roman Catholic at that age, the gift over took effect.—Re MAY, EGGAR v. MAY, [1932] 1 Ch. 99; 101 L. The husband survived both the parents, but predeceased testatrix. Testatrix left no issue of her own, but at her death there were six children of her husband's first marriage living:—Held: there was no implication of a gift over to those children on failure of the gift to the husband by lapse in any event, & therefore the residuary estate of testatrix was undisposed of & passed to her next of kin.—Re GRAHAM, GRAHAM v. GRAHAM, [1929] 2 Ch. 127; 98 L. A will so dated was then in existence. The ct., in certain proceedings, pronounced the trusts which were declared by the settlement to take effect after the settlor's death to be irrevocable whether the will should be revoked or not. No child of S. M. C. survived testator. One child, a daughter, C. S. C., married W. A. She died intestate in the lifetime of testator, leaving her husband, W. A., who became her personal representative & beneficially entitled to the whole of her estate, & a daughter, J. W. W. A., having made certain dispositions by his will in favour of J. 3490a. —— ——.]—(1) The ct. of Probate, in considering whether certain wills should be admitted to probate, expressed an opinion as to how the wills should be construed. In arriving at that opinion the ct. referred to matters which would have been inadmissible in a ct. of construction on a question of construction & the order for probate did not contain any finding on the question of construction. In view of the form of the order, there was no opportunity of appealing from it in the case of some of the parties who would be affected by the opinion expressed on construction if that opinion was binding on them :—Held : the opinion expressed by the ct. of Probate did not bind the Chancery Ct. before which the question of construction ultimately came.

(2) The testatrix, in a will executed by her in 1927, described the document as her " last will & testament " & referred in it to a will of 1922 as a " cancelled will." She also wrote " cancelled " on the will of 1922 :—Held : these words by themselves were not sufficient to effect a complete revocation of the 1922 will & a codicil to it of 1925, but the question whether there had been revocation must depend on the construction of the 1927 will as a whole.

(3) It being found, as a matter of construction, that the provisions of the 1927 will were either entirely inconsistent with the provisions of the 1922 will & the codicil or merely repeated the provisions therein contained :—Held : the 1972 will rendered ineffective the whole of the provisions of the 1922 will & the codicil.

(4) If an absolute gift or appointment is made by a testator in one testamentary document to one person & the subject of the gift or appointment is then given or appointed by a subsequent document to a second person & the second gift or appointment fails to take effect, the doctrine of dependent relative revocation does not apply in the absence of evidence that the testator intended that the person first benefited should take if the second person could not, & the first gift or appointment does not become operative.—Re HAWKSLEY'S SETTLEMENTS, BLACK v. TIDY, [1934] Ch. 384 ; 103 L. 4921a. Money invested in Swansea Harbour Trust—Statutory substitution of Great Western Railway Stock.]—The undertaking of the Swansea Harbour Trustees was vested in the Great Western Railway Co. by the Great Western Railway (Swansea Harbour Vesting) Act, 1923, which provided that stock of the Great Western Railway should be issued to holders of stock of the trustees in substitution therefor. Sect. 12 of the Act provides: "Stock of the co. substituted by virtue of this Act for any stock of the Trustees . . . shall be held upon & subject to the same trusts liens charges powers & other legal or equitable rights privileges & restrictions as affected the stock . . . for which by virtue of this Act the stock of the co. is substituted . . . & any reference in any Act of Parliament deed will codicil book document instrument or writing to any such stock . . . shall be deemed to be a reference to the stock of the co. . . . by virtue of this Act substituted therefor":—Held: the latter part of the sect. was not restricted in meaning by regard to the first part, & it applied to any reference to stock of the trustees in any "document instrument or writing" in existence when the Act of 1923 came into force, even though the "document instrument or writing" was not then effective to create trusts liens charges powers or other legal or equitable rights privileges or restrictions.

By his will made in 1913 testator bequeathed "the sums of £3,500 & all other moneys that I may at my death possess invested in the Swansea Harbour Trust" upon certain trusts. In 1923 testator received, pursuant to the Act of 1923, £2,800 5 per cent. consolidated preference stock of the Great Western Railway Company in substitution for his holding of £3,500 4 per cent. 5332a. Manuscript letters.]—(1) Testator by his will made a settlement of his two mansion houses & then bequeathed "all the pictures prints statues sculptures articles of vertu books furniture & plate in my mansion houses . . . unto my trustees upon trust to allow the same, hereinafter called 'the said heirlooms,' to be used & enjoyed" as in the will mentioned. Included in testator's estate were 155 original manuscripts of the series of letters & papers known as the Paston letters. All the originals of the series had belonged to Sir John Fenn, who, towards the end of the eighteenth century, had had these 155 letters inlaid into sheets of paper, which he had then had bound in three volumes. Testator had acquired them so bound, & they were still so bound at the date of his death. On a summons on behalf of the tenant for life under the settlement asking whether the 155 letters were included in the chattels settled by the will to devolve as heirlooms or formed part of testator's residuary estate, &, if the answer to the first part of the question was in the affirmative, that the tenant for life might be authorised to sell them:—Held: the three volumes containing the MSS. of the Paston letters passed under the will as heirlooms under the word "books."

(2) There must be many objects of antiquity or curiosity which are not, ordinarily speaking, articles of vertu. I have suggested two, a prehistoric axe-head & an Egyptian mummy. I do not think that anybody in ordinary parlance would describe either of those things as an article of vertu. For my part I think that an article of vertu must be in some sense a product of the fine arts; & the phrase connotes, if not artistic merit, a certain effort on the part of the person who originally produced it, in the direction of what he conceived to be the fine arts (MAUGHAM, J.).—Re TOMLINE'S WILL TRUSTS, PRETYMAN v. PRETYMAN, [1931] 1 Ch. 521, 526; 100 L. The desk had a drawer in which were three pass-books referring to deposit accounts for a total sum of over $30,500, & nine promissory notes payable to testator's order & not endorsed. Another part of the will provided for pecuniary legacies, including one to testator's niece:—Held: the bequest was only of such things as could properly be treated as personal effects, & did not extend to the choses in action represented by the pass-books & promissory notes.

At the date of the will, apart from the sum of £400 which was held in New Zealand inscribed stock, she had £700 in war bonds issued under the War Purposes Loan Act, 1917, & £900 in New Zealand Government "Victory" war bonds issued under the Finance Act, 1918. Subsequent to the date of the will she invested in inscribed stock the sum of £1,500, received from discharged mtges.:—Held: the expression "Dominion war bonds" must be taken as meaning New Zealand Government war bonds; &, having regard to the will itself & the surrounding circumstances, testatrix had not beyond all (or beyond reasonable) doubt excluded the ordinary & well-known meaning of "war bonds," which did not include the inscribed stock subsequently purchased.—Re BANKS, LOUGHNAN v. HAMILTON; HAMILTON v. LOUGHNAN [1931] N. All the shares in the provincial co. were surrendered for shares in the amalgamated co. & for all practical purposes the provincial co. ceased to exist & since then there had not existed anywhere any co. of the name of the British Columbia Telephone Co., Ltd., although that name was often applied by the public to the British Columbia Telephone Co. All but 15 shares of the existing co. were held by another telephone co. & the shares so held were not for sale. Neither at the date of his death nor at that of his will or codicil did deceased own any common shares in the British Columbia Telephone Co. or in the provincial co. but some years prior to any of said dates he had owned a greater number of common shares in the British Columbia Telephone Co. than 87 shares & at the time of the date of his death he owned, & for some years prior thereto had owned preference shares in the British Columbia Telephone Co.:—Held: the legatee was entitled under said bequest to 87 shares of common stock of the British Columbia Telephone Co.—Re BARNARD ESTATE, [1937] 1 W. Each of testator's children except the last survivor left lawful issue, some of whom were living at the date of distribution :—Held : (1) the word " issue " must be construed as extending to all descendants, & the division among them was to be a stirpital one ; (2) the contingency that there should be issue living at the date of distribution was not to be imported by implication into the constitution of the class of issue entitled, & therefore the personal representatives of four of testator's grandchildren all of whom predeceased the last survivor of testator's children without leaving issue living at her death were entitled to a share in the capital directed to be divided among the issue of testator's children.—Re SUTCLIFFE, ALISON v ALISON, [1934] Ch. 219 ; 103 L. 6527a. —— ——.] — The primary meaning of " shall die " in a will is " shall hereafter die." In the absence of some context to indicate a contrary intention it cannot be construed as equivalent to " shall have died " or " shall be dead," so as, in an original or substitutional gift to the issue of a child or other person who " shall die," to let in the issue of one who was already dead at the date of the will.

Testator by his will directed that after the death of his wife his trustees were to stand possessed of his residuary estate for all his children in equal shares " provided nevertheless in case any child of mine shall die in my lifetime leaving issue living at my death such issue shall stand in place of such deceased child, & shall take equally between them if more than one the share of my residuary estate which such deceased child of mine would have taken if he or she had survived me." He then gave directions for the distribution of the income of the business during the period of its continuance. At the date of testator's death there were a number of grandchildren, of whom one had attained the age of twenty-one years. The trustees had postponed conversion for several years, & during that period other grandchildren were born :—Held : the " rule of convenience " laid down in Andrews v. Partington, No. 6266, had no application until conversion, inasmuch as (a) upon the true construction of the will there was no occasion for the operation of the rule until conversion had taken place, & (b) the will contained an expression of a contrary intention. Testatrix had three nephews named Arthur Murphy, two of whom were legitimate sons of two of her brothers & the other was an illegitimate son of a sister. One of the legitimate nephews was resident in Australia, but had visited testatrix on occasions. The other legitimate nephew was resident in England & known to testatrix, but he was the son of a brother who was given another share of the residuary estate. The illegitimate nephew had married a legitimate niece of testatrix & was well known to testatrix, whose affairs he had managed before her death for some time. Questions arose as to which person testatrix had intended by the words "my nephew Arthur Murphy":—Held: (1) if there had been only the two legitimate nephews it would have been impossible to tell which of them was intended, & the ambiguity would have caused an intestacy; (2) although as against one legitimate claimant evidence could not be admitted in favour of an illegitimate claimant, the ct. was entitled in the circumstances to look at evidence as to the family; (3) if from such evidence it appeared that testatrix did not intend to describe either of the legitimate nephews, but did intend to describe the illegitimate nephew, the ct. could not disregard such evidence; (4) in order to avoid ambiguity the ct. was entitled to consider the claim of the illegitimate nephew; (5) on the evidence the person who had married a niece of testatrix, & so was in a sense a nephew, was clearly intended by the words used in the will; & the illegitimate nephew took a share of the residuary estate.—Re JACKSON, BEATTIE v. MURPHY, [1933] Ch. 237; 102 L. 6728a. "Grandchildren of any degree"—All lawful descendants except children.]—By his will testator disposed of two equal fourth parts of his residue, in the will called "the residuary trust fund," as therein mentioned, & directed his trustees, after the death of one of his daughters, whom he named, & her husband, & subject to or in default of any exercise of a general power of appointment by her, to hold another equal fourth part "in trust as to the capital & income for all my grandchildren who may be living at the time in equal shares." By the second of two codicils he directed that his trustees, at the death of the survivor of his son J. & J.'s wife, should divide the amount of the remaining fourth part "into as many parts as there may be grandchildren of any degree of mine then living, & give to each one a part, part & part alike." Testator had five children. One predeceased him without leaving issue her surviving. All of the remaining four married, three having issue of their marriages. J. predeceased his wife, there having been no issue of the marriage. At the date of the death of J.'s wife, there were living lawful grandchildren, great-grandchildren & great-great-grandchildren of testator. By this summons the trustee of the will & codicils asked (inter alia) whether, on the true construction thereof, the words "grandchildren of any degree of mine then living" included lawful grandchildren & remoter descendants of the testator living at the death of J.'s widow. There was evidence that a great-grandchild of testator was shown to him at a date before the execution of the codicils:—Held: the words "grandchildren of any degree" included all testator's lawful descendants, save his children, living at the date mentioned in the second codicil.—Re HALL, HALL v. HALL, [1932] 1 Ch. 262; 101 L. -.]—Testatrix made her will on Oct. 28, 1925, & died on May 22, 1932. Her niece A. G. R. had a child born on Oct. 9, 1925. A. G. R. died in childbirth. The name at that time mentioned as one to be given to the child was Clifford, but he was baptized Kenneth Higham R. By clause 3 of the will testatrix gave free of duty "to my nephew Clifford Rich, the infant child of my late niece Annie Gertrude Rich, the sum of one thousand pounds." She bequeathed the residue of her estate equally between all or any my nephews & nieces living at my death who being male attain the age of twenty-one years or being female attain that age or marry. The greatnephews & greatnieces of testatrix claimed that having regard to clause 3 of the will testatrix intended her residuary estate to be divided equally between nephews, nieces & greatnephews & greatnieces. If the nephews & nieces only were entitled they would take one-eighth share each in the residue, but if greatnephews & greatnieces were entitled also each of the class would be entitled to one-twentieth of the residue :—Held : the present case was not governed by James v. Smith, No. 6747, as there were sufficient variations in the will there & the will in the present case to prevent its being authority to govern the words in the will in this case. There was no interpretation of the words "nephews & nieces" to be found in clause 3, but the use of the word "nephew" in that clause was rather a term of affection. The single use of a word inaccurately in one part of a will did not necessarily mean that that word was used equally inaccurately when it occurred again later on.—Re RIDGE, HANCOCK v. DUTTON (1933), 149 L. 6887a. ——.]—Testatrix executed a power of appointing trust funds under her father's will by appointing the funds in favour of all her children surviving her in equal shares, & directed that each child's share should be retained by the trustees of her father's will upon trust during twenty-one years from her death to pay the income of such share to such child if he or she should so long live. If such child should die within the said period of twenty-one years then the trustees were to hold such share & the income thereof in trust, in default of appointment by the child, upon the trusts following : "In the event of such child of mine leaving any issue him or her surviving in trust for such child of mine absolutely but in the event of such child of mine not leaving any issue him or her surviving then such share & the income thereof shall go & accrue by way of addition to the share or shares in the appointed funds of my other child or children who shall survive me," etc. Testatrix died on Jan. 12, 1912, leaving her surviving three sons, of whom one married on Apr. 14, 1931, & died on May 11, 1932, intestate without having exercised the power of appointment under the will of testatrix. On June 12, 1932, a posthumous child was born to him :—Held : the said son did not "leave issue him surviving" within the meaning of the will, but in the events which happened, his share accrued by way of addition to one of the other sons of the testatrix.

The effect of Villar v. Gilbey, No. 6886, may be thus summarised :—

Subject to any special context in the document to be construed : (a) Words referring to children or issue "born" before or "living" at, or "surviving," a particular point of time or event will not in their ordinary or natural meaning include a child en ventre sa mère at the relevant date.

(b) The ordinary or natural meaning of the words may be departed from, & a fictional construction applied to them so as to include therein a child en ventre sa mère at the relevant date & subsequently born alive if, but only if, that fictional construction will secure to the child a benefit to which it would have been entitled if it had been actually born at the relevant date.

6857 vii. ——.]—A child en ventre sa mère is considered as a child in being. To include such unborn child in a class of "living" children, it must be shown that such inclusion, as here is for that child's benefit.—Re BROWN, BROWN v. BROWN, [1933] N. Z. L. R. 115.—N.Z.

(c) The only reason & the only justification for applying such a fictional construction is that where a person makes a gift to a class of children or issue described as "born" before or "living" at or "surviving" a particular point of time or event, a child en ventre sa mère must necessarily be within the reason & motive of the gift.

(d) That being the only reason & the only justification for applying the fictional construction, it follows that, if the person who uses the words under consideration confers no gift on the children or issue described as above mentioned, but confers the gift on some one else, it is impossible (except in the light of subsequent events) to affirm either that the fictional construction will secure to the child en ventre sa mère a benefit to which if born it would be entitled, or that the child en ventre sa mère must necessarily be within the reason & motive of the gift made. In these circumstances the words used must bear their ordinary or natural meaning.—ELLIOT v. JOICEY, [1935] A. C. 209; 104 L. J. Ch. 111; 51 T. L. R. 261; 79 Sol. Jo. 144; *sub nom. 7034a. Son born "within due time after my death."]—By a will devising estates in strict settlement the testator declared that if any son of W. or M. should be thereafter born "whether during my lifetime or within due time after my death" the estate in tail male therein devised to such son should not take effect, & in lieu thereof he devised the estates to the use of such son for his life, with remainder to the use of his first & other sons in tail male. The will also contained a name & arms clause requiring every person who became entitled to the possession of the estates as tenant for life or in tail to take & use the name & arms of X. upon pain of forfeiture to the next person entitled in remainder. Testator died in 1899. Pltf., the eldest son of M., was born in 1909, & on the death of W. without issue in 1925 became tenant in tail in possession subject to the effect, if any, of the above proviso cutting down estates tail to estates for life. Immediately after attaining the age of twenty-one years, in 1930, pltf. executed a deed disentailing the estates :—Held : the expression "within due time after my death" referred to the period of gestation. Pltf. not having been born in testator's lifetime or within nine months of his death did not come within the clause cutting down his estate tail to a life estate, & having duly disentailed the estates, was not bound to comply with the name & arms clause.—Re WATSON, CULME-SEYMOUR v. BRAND, [1930] 2 Ch. 344; 99 L. On Oct. 2, 1875, by an award of the Copyhold Comrs., the copyhold lands so devised were enfranchised. Robert John Smith, who would have been testatrix's heir at common law had he survived her, died on May 12, 1879. Testatrix died on Sept. 11, 1883, leaving John Robert Smith, the eldest son of the said Robert John Smith, her heir at common law, a nephew Alfred William Smith, her heir at common law if Robert John Smith & his issue were excluded, & a brother George Smith, her heir according to the custom of the manor, which was borough-English:—Held: the words " my own right heirs " must be construed to mean her heirs at common law & not her customary heirs: & the limitation, not materially differing from the limitation in Goodtitle d. Bailey v. Pugh (1787), 3 Bro. Testator died in 1934, his mother having died in 1910 & his wife in 1924:—Held: applying the rule which inclines against intestacy, the word " heir " must be construed in its popular meaning of heir apparent or heir presumptive, & the estate passed to the person or persons who would have been testator's heir or heirs-at-law if he had died at the same time as his wife.—Re HOOPER, HOOPER v. CARPENTER. At the date of the will testator had two sisters living, each of whom had one child, also then living. He had had no sister who had predeceased him. He had no brother then living, but had had one brother who had predeceased him leaving a wife & one child, both alive at the date of the will. Testator's wife predeceased him:—Held: (1) the gift " to the heirs of my brother & sisters " was a gift to the sisters & the daughter of the deceased brother; (2) the gift for division between the charity & the three other donees was a gift in equal fourth shares.—Re COSSENTINE, PHILP v. WESLEYAN METHODIST LOCAL PREACHERS' MUTUAL AID ASSOCN. e i. —— Effect of assimilation of descent of realty & personalty—New Zealand.]—Testator, who at the date of his death, childless, in 1895, was resident & domiciled in New Zealand, by his will, made in 1891, devised all his real estate " whatsoever & wheresoever " to trustees for the benefit of a brother & the oldest son of that brother during their joint lives & the life of the survivor, & then directed it at the expiration of twenty-one years after the death of the survivor to be conveyed & transferred absolutely to " the heir-at-law of such survivor his heirs & assigns." The whole of testator's real estate consisted of a farm of 500 acres in New Zealand:—Held: (1) the heir-at-law named in the will was the heir-at-law constituted by the law of New Zealand, where the basic law of succession to real estate was the old common law of England as modified in 1833 by the Inheritance Act; (2) notwithstanding anything contained in the provisions of the three New Zealand statutes, the Real Estate Descent Act, 1874, the Administration Act, 1879, which repealed the Act of 1874, & the Administration Act, 1908, a consolidation statute, which introduced in New Zealand a new rule of succession to real estate by which in cases of intestacy realty was to be administered & was to devolve precisely like personalty, the common law heir-at-law had not been extinguished in New Zealand, but still survived there with definite rights & privileges appertaining to his status, & remained an heir capable of being ascertained & identified as easily as before the passing of the above legislation. Change of ownership of business unknown to legatee.]—By his will, made in Oct. 1933, a testator gave " to every person who shall at the date of my death be in my service & shall have been in my service for not less than three years continuously immediately prior to that date " one year's wages. Testator had carried on the business of a sports ground proprietor. In May, 1931, testator had signed a declaration of trust whereby he admitted & acknowledged that he held the business of a sports ground proprietor carried on in his name in trust for the persons mentioned in the declaration in certain proportions. Testator continued until his death to manage the business exclusively. The question arose whether certain persons who had been employed in testator's business since before May, 1931, &, without any knowledge of any change in the ownership of the business, had remained in the employ of the business continuously until testator's death, were entitled to legacies under testator's will :—Held : the employees were in testator's service for a continuous period of three years immediately prior to his death within the terms of the will, & they were entitled to legacies.—Re HOWELL'S TRUSTS, BARCLAYS BANK, LTD. v. SIMMONS, [1937] 3 All E. By a codicil testator, after reciting that since the date of his will he had purchased a freehold house, devised the same on trust for his wife for life & on her death for E. for life. On the same day he executed another codicil in almost identical terms, the only material difference being that a blank left in the amount of a legacy in one codicil was filled in in the other. The two codicils were attested by the same witnesses & placed in one envelope, which was sent to a bank for custody. The testator at a later date executed another, which he described as a "third" codicil to his will, & referred therein to his will & codicils :—Held : the two codicils of even date were duplicates of one & the same instrument, & that the legacies thereby given were substitutional & not cumulative. — Re MICHELL, THOMAS v. HOSKINS, [1929] 1 Ch. 552 ; 98 L. Testator died in 1918, & the son, on attaining the age of twenty-five years in 1930, brought an action against applts. claiming an account as from the date of testator's death of the rents of the properties devised to him by clause 6 of the will :—Held : (1) the established rule for construing devises of real estate is that they are to be held to be vested unless a condition precedent to the vesting is expressed with reasonable clearness ; (2) on

There was also a direction to use the whole or part of the income for the benefit, etc., of all or any of the children of the four children respectively, whether of full age or not. 8919a. ——.]—A testator who died in 1914 domiciled in Scotland & was survived by his widow, two sons & three daughters, directed his trustees by his will (1) to settle certain capital sums on each of his five children; (2) to give the life-rent of the remainder of his estate to his widow; & (3) on her death, after increasing the amount of the children's provisions, (a) to convey the heritable or real estate in Scotland to his elder son, whom failing to his younger son, & (b) to divide the whole residue of the estate equally between the elder & the younger son; & in the event of the elder son dying before attaining the age of 26 & leaving lawful issue, such issue were to take his half, but failing such issue his half was to go to the younger son or his issue. There was a vesting clause in the will which declared that the bequests & provisions " shall vest at the dates when the same are due & payable & fall to be made over." The elder son, who died at the age of 41, predeceased the widow & left no issue. The questions raised in the appeal were (a) whether one half of the residue primarily destined to the elder son vested in him a morte testatoris, & (b) if it did not so vest whether it passed to the younger son & his issue, or was the subject of an intestacy & was thus available as a fund out of which testator's widow & children could benefit :—Held : the vesting clause could reasonably be construed to mean that the one half of the residue destined to the elder son vested in him a morte testatoris, at which date he had already attained the age of 26, regardless of whether the widow was then alive or not.

Testator devised the H. farm to the same trustees, in fee, upon trust for his son J., for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live, remainder to the use of his first & other sons in tail, with divers remainders over. Testator devised the S. farm in like manner for the benefit of his son H. & his issue. By clause 6 she gave, devised & bequeathed the residue of the estate equally between the said grand-daughter & her three daughters share & share alike. By clause 7 she directed that, if the grand-daughter or any of the daughters predeceased her or her son leaving issue, the child or children of the person so dying should take the share to which their mother would have been entitled had she survived. All the beneficiaries mentioned survived testatrix. A special case was stated for the opinion of the Supreme Ct. of Canada, asking two questions: (a) whether the legacies given by clause 5 on the death of the son vested in the beneficiaries on the death of the testatrix; (b) if they became so vested whether they were liable to be divested under clause 7. The Supreme Ct. answered the first question in the negative, & the second question did not arise. On appeal to the Privy Council :—Held : the legacies given by clause 5 on the death of the son vested in the beneficiaries on the death of testatrix since the postponement of the division was solely for the purpose of interposing a life interest in favour of the son; in the case of a beneficiary dying in the lifetime of the son without issue the legacies would not be divested; in the case of a beneficiary dying in the lifetime of the son leaving issue, the legacies would be divested in favour of the child or children of the beneficiary so dying.—BROWNE v. MOODY, [1936] A. e i. —— Discretion in trustees to withhold distribution while children in need of assistance.]—A will after devising certain lands & all testator's personal property to his wife, devised all the rest of his estate to trustees, who were empowered to retain, manage, lease, sell or otherwise dispose of the whole or any part thereof in their discretion & to invest the proceeds & to pay the income, after discharging all liabilities in respect of the estate, as follows : " One half thereof to my wife during her life in manner hereinafter described & the rest as follows : To such of my children including M. [one of the trustees] from time to time as to my exors., shall appear to be most in need, the payments to be at the absolute discretion of my exors. If at any time it appears to my trustees that none of my children are in need of assistance but are all unembarrassed financially then after the death of my wife my trustees may divide the estate among my children then living in such proportions as to them shall seem fit my desire being that as far as possible the division shall be made so as to give the larger share to those of my children who are not so well off as the others nevertheless this desire is not to affect the absolute discretion hereby vested in my trustees. . . ." The trustees acted on the view that all the income (less the share given the widow during her life) should be available for distribution among needy children without disposal of the corpus until the time arrived, if at all, when in their view, none of the children required assistance :—Held : the estate did not vest in the beneficiaries upon the death of the wife but would vest only when the time for distribution arrived ; that time would never arrive if it should appear to the trustees that the last surviving child was in need.—Re Magee Estate, [1935] 1 W. The daughter-in-law, D., died in 1926, her husband having predeceased her. Five children were born of the marriage, three of whom survived D. Two sons predeceased her, each leaving a widow but no issue, & each dying intestate :—Held : at the death of testator in 1898 a vested estate was created in any child then born to his son & D. subject to be divested in part as other children were born; & the widows, or personal representatives of the sons who died before D. would take the husband's share unless there was issue, in which case the issue could be substituted for the father; the gift to the children of D. was determinable only in one event, their death leaving issue, an event which did not happen.—Re SMITH, [1928] 1 D. One of testator's sons died childless; afterwards, another died, leaving one child, who attained twenty-one years of age; after, a third son died childless :—Held : the use of the word " other " in the accruer clause did not import that the child, or children, referred to therein should survive the point at which the accruer clause came into operation. g i. ——.]—Testator's Family Maintenance Act, R. S. B. C., 1924, was not intended to authorise the ct. to make a new will for testator, but only to alter the will in so far as might be necessary for the proper maintenance of testator's wife, husband or children. It is always a question of fact in each case whether or not an order under the Act should be made ; & with respect to children the Act refers only to children for whose maintenance at the time of the testator's death no adequate means of support are available. If the children are at least as well established in life as testator was in his or her lifetime, the Act should not be applied where the surviving parent is the beneficiary under the will. The discretion which is given the ct. to apply the Act where it thinks it just & equitable in the circumstances to do so is not judicially exercised unless the object, intent & spirit of the Act are observed. If a higher ct. is convinced that the judge of first instance did not take a proper view as to the scope of, & the application of the powers conferred by, the Act, it may & should interfere. If, too, a higher ct. is satisfied that the facts of the particular case are such that it was not intended that the powers conferred by the Act should be exercised, it may intervene. In such cases the order made would be based on a wrong principle. If, too, a higher ct. is convinced that on all the facts the judgment under appeal is clearly wrong, it should be set aside.—WALKER v. MCDERMOTT, [1930] 1 W. W. g ii. —— To consider change in conditions since will made.]—G. left an estate of a net value of £26,000. After making certain provisions for members of his family, he bequeathed a farm property of a conservative value of £8,000 for charitable purposes, & a sum of £5,000 for the erection of an orphanage thereon. The farm was leased at the statutorily reduced annual rental of £512, & was charged with an allowance of £250 per annum for the lifetime support & maintenance of an imbecile son. G.'s widow, aged eighty years, had a life interest in the residue, & was thus provided with a house, furniture (her own), & an income of £612 per annum, subject to payment of outgoings amounting to £31 1*s.* 5*d.* each year. Her imbecile son & an unmarried daughter lived with her, the latter having £100 a year from the estate during the widow's lifetime, & on the widow's death receiving one-third (approximately £4,000) of the residue. A similar amount each would come to the married daughter & married son, who meanwhile received no benefit. A great part of the residue consisted of mtges. On an application by each of the widow & children for an increase of the amounts bequeathed to them:—Held: after consideration of the possible fluctuation of income & the doubtful position of mtges., however sound, the ct. is entitled to take into consideration the different conditions prevailing at the date of a testator's death from those when the will was made, whenever it appears that an estate consists largely of mtge. securities & both corpus & income of provisions made for a widow & children are likely thereby to be affected. —Re GIBSON, GIBSON v. PUBLIC TRUSTEES, [1933] N. Z. L. R. (S.) 13.— N.Z.

g iii. —— Difficulty of realising estate.]—It is not the proper course to postpone dealing with an application for maintenance under Testators' Family Maintenance Act because difficulty in realising the assets of the deceased exists. The ct. should exercise the power under the Act & leave it to the exor. to resort to another jurisdiction for directions if the order cannot immediately be carried out owing to difficulties in realising the assets. When the spouses have been living apart, the ct. may make an order for a further amount to the widow than that allowed by the husband to her as his wife during his life.—Re GERLOFF, [1933] S. A. S. R. 351.—AUS.

g iv. ——.]—The discretion reposed in the ct. by sect. 139 of Administration & Probate Act, 1928, to order provision out of testators' estates for the maintenance of widows & children left without sufficient means of support, is not limited to cases in which there has been a capricious or unreasonable testamentary disposition of property. A covenant by a wife with her husband that she will not, after his death make an application for such provision does not deprive the ct. of jurisdiction to entertain such an application, though the existence & terms of the covenant, & the circumstances under which it was entered into, may be extremely important & sometimes conclusive facts in relation to the exercise of the ct.'s discretion in a particular case.—Re PEARSON, [1936] V. L. R. 355; 42 Argus L. R. 480.— AUS.

h i. —— ——.]—Under Testator's Family Maintenance Act, R. S. B. C., 1924, the provision, which the ct. is authorised to make in the circumstances stated in sect. 3, is "such provision as the ct. thinks adequate, just & equitable." The conditions upon which this authority rests are that the person whose estate is in question has died leaving a will, & has not made, by that will, in the opinion of the judge, adequate provision for the proper "maintenance & support" of the wife, husband or children, as the case may be, on whose behalf the application is made. What constitutes "proper maintenance & support" is a question to be determined with reference to a variety of circumstances. It cannot be limited to the bare necessities of existence. For the purpose of arriving at a conclusion, the ct. on whom devolves the responsibility of giving effect to the statute, would naturally proceed from the point of view of the judicious father of a family seeking to discharge both his marital & his parental duty; & would of course consider the situation of the child, wife or husband, & the standard of living to which, having regard to this & the other circumstances, reference ought to be had. If the ct. comes to the decision that adequate provision has not been made, then the ct. must consider what provision would be not only adequate, but just & equitable also; & in exercising its judgment upon this, the pecuniary magnitude of the estate & the situation of others having claims upon testator, must be taken into account. Applying these principles to the circumstances of this case, where the only daughter of the deceased brought an application under the Act for an order directed against his second wife, sole beneficiary under the will:—Held: the judge was right in deciding that the widow should be called upon to forego part of her annual income in order to make some provision for the appct.—WALKER v. MCDERMOTT, [1931] S. h iv. —— ——.]—In applications under Testator's Family Maintenance Act, R.S.B.C., 1924, the ct., in exercising its discretion as to what is adequate provision for the widow of testator, should inquire into: (1) the station in life of the parties; (2) the age, health & general circumstances of the widow; (3) the means possessed by testator at the time of his death; (4) the property or means which the widow possesses in her own right. Further the claims of others upon testator must be taken into account.— Re MORTON ESTATE, [1934] 3 W. W. R. 719; 49 B. C. R. 172.—CAN.

h v. —— ——.]—In determining on an application under Testator's Family Maintenance Act, R.S.B.C., 1924, whether testator has made adequate, just & equitable provision for a child, the ct. will consider among other things the obligations & necessities of the child arising from the fact that said child has, & may have more, children of his or her own.—Re JONES ESTATE, [1934] 3 W. W. R. 726; 49 B. C. R. 216.—CAN.

h vi. —— ——.]—The ct. has no right to interfere under the Family Protection Act except in so far as it is satisfied that the testamentary dispositions of a testator fall short of making for the wife or for the children such provision as a wise & just testator would regard it his moral duty to make. Where, owing to a change in economic conditions, the provision made for wife & children became inadequate, & testator gave instructions for a further testamentary document making further provision for them, the execution of which was prevented by the state of his health, the ct., although it could not make for him the codicil that he contemplated, would be encouraged by testator's views to increase the provision.

Where a testator is able to leave the financial provision necessary for all his dependants to continue the style of living in which he had encouraged them & to which his generosity had accustomed them, it is his duty, so far as his widow, his dependent daughters, & young children are concerned, under the Statute, to leave that provision unless he considers on good grounds that a humbler style is desirable.—Re HAWKE, HAWKE v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1935] N. l ii. —— —— Power to rescind or alter order—Whether increase in benefit authorised.]—The power conferred upon the ct. by Testator's Family Maintenance & Guardianship of Infants Act, 1916, s. 6 (4), to "rescind or alter" any order making provision under that Act, does not extend to authorising an increase to any benefit that has been awarded to an appct. upon an original application.—Re MOLLOY (1928), 28 S. l iii. —— ——.]—On an application by a widow for relief under Testator's Family Maintenance Act the ct. should not attempt to make a new will or speculate as to how the estate might have been better divided, but should merely determine whether in view of the widow's needs & the property left by the testator he has made adequate provision for her proper maintenance & support. Its duty is to place itself, in all respects, as far as possible, in the position of the testator, & to consider whether or not, having regard to all existing facts & surrounding circumstances, the testator has been guilty of a breach of the moral duty which a just, not a loving, husband owes his wife, &, if it finds that he has been so guilty, to make such an order as appears to be sufficient, but no more than sufficient, to repair it.—Re FERGUSON ESTATE, Re TESTATOR'S

r iv. —— —— —— Second wife.]—A factor of importance, in cases where there has been a second marriage of testator, is the period during which his second wife had lived with him, as the moral claim of a second wife on his bounty & on his consideration is not so great as that of a widow who has lived with testator for the whole of his married life; & the children are entitled to regard themselves as successors not only to their father's rights, but, in a measure, to their mother's rights. The position of the second wife must correspondingly be less strong in her claim for consideration either as against the testator himself or under Family Protection Act, 1908, than the position of a first wife.—Re CUNNINGHAM, CUNNINGHAM v. CUNNINGHAM, [1936] N. S. B. C., 1924, or Testator's Family Maintenance Act. Under the circumstances of the present case:—Held: the sister of testator, & two children who had lived with testator & his wife as their daughters until they returned to their father, for which sister & children testator had made provision by his will, came within the word "others" in said expression. Having regard to all the circumstances, & the claims of said "others," the whole estate should not be given to the widow. However, she should be given a larger share than that given her by the will, &, as against her claim, there should be a reduction by one-half of the amounts which said sister & children claimed under the will.—Re PEDLAR ESTATE, [1933] 1 W. Shortly before his death he released the mtgors. from payment of all interest & agreed to accept repayment of the principal by instalments, the whole debt to be repaid in 1936. The widow had property of her own producing about £40 per annum; also a house & land, on which she resided, & kept a cow, poultry, etc. By his will testator left the widow the whole income from his estate, subject to her suitably maintaining the four children of the marriage, of whom the eldest was eighteen, & the youngest, seven. Up to very shortly before his death the deceased had had an income of between £600 & £700, & had lived just within his income:—Held: (1) the standard of living of deceased prior to his death could not be taken as the measure of the allowance to be now made to his wife for the support of herself & the children; (2) among the circumstances to be considered in granting the allowance were the depressed state at the time of & since testator's death, of business & of the property market & the financial stringency & also the doubt whether this position would improve; (3) having regard to the widow's income of £40 & the ownership of house & land an allowance of £310 per annum was sufficient; (4) the proper course was not to make a separate allowance for each child, but to fix a sum to be paid to the widow, she thereout maintaining the children. —Re LOCK, [1931] S. e (p. 1290) iv. —— ——.]—In order to raise jurisdiction under sect. 3 of Testator's Family Maintenance Act, it must be found that a person has so disposed of his or her property by will that upon his or her death his widow or her widower or his or her children or any of them are left without "sufficient means for their maintenance & support." The jurisdiction conferred is to order such provision to be made out of the deceased person's estate in or towards the "maintenance & support" of the widow, widower, or children, or any of them "as to the ct. or judge seems proper having regard to all the circumstances of the case." The sect. must be read as a whole & the jurisdiction conferred by sect. 3 is co-extensive with the insufficiency predicated by the first part of the sect., & means that to the extent that the means are insufficient the ct. can make good the insufficiency. The language of the second part of sect. 3 leaves no doubt that the insufficiency which is predicated is not merely an insufficiency of the means of bare subsistence. The measure of the provision to be made, is what is sufficient in the circumstances of the particular case to provide for the needs of the appct. as regards fit maintenance & support, & in no case can the ct. exceed that measure.—Re GREENE'S ESTATE (1932), 25 Tas. L. R. 15.—AUS.

● (p. 1290) vi. —— —— Application for increase—"Undue hardship."]—An increase of an annual allowance made in pursuance of an order under Family Protection Act, 1908, will not be made where the hardship alleged is not "undue" in the sense of being excessive & confined to the appct.'s particular class or peculiar to the appct.'s case caused by the order itself, or is a common hardship due to the widespread fall in rents & interest—i.e. assuming the ct. has power in its discretion to make such an increase. A reduction of an annuity provided by an order of the ct. under the said Act for the benefit of testator's only surviving child, a daughter, will not be made for the exclusive benefit of a person who had no claim on testator's bounty unless the exercise of the ct.'s discretionary power is clearly called for by the altered circumstances of the case. No modification under sect. 42 of the National Expenditure Adjustment Act, 1932, will be made in an order under Part II. of Family Protection Act, 1908, where appct. has failed to prove that she has suffered undue hardship through the operation of the order, in that its terms cannot be complied with or could not be complied with without causing undue hardship to another annuitant under that order. Qu.: whether sect. 42 of the National Expenditure Adjustment Act, 1932, should enure for the benefit & sole advantage of an Englishwoman who chooses to live in a foreign country.—Re ROPER, PRESTON v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1933] N. By the will the widow took a life estate, & thereafter her two children took also life estates. At the date of the application the widow had assets of her own worth £3,700, her daughter was earning £103 per annum as a postmistress, & the son had saved £200:—Held: the delay had been great & had not been satisfactorily explained. Before the completion of the term, the worker refused to obey a lawful order of the employer & left the employment without notice :—Held : the Agricultural Wages (Regulation) Act, 1924 (c. 37), did not prevent the making of an agreement for employment for a fixed term with payment of a lump sum equivalent to the prescribed rate at the end of the term, & the Act did not entitle a worker who had broken his contract to demand any wages for the period during which he was in fact employed.—POCKNEY v. ATKINSON, [1930] 1 K. 68a. —— Deduction in respect of washing & mending.]—Resps. employed a worker in agriculture upon a yearly hiring under which the employers did his washing & mending for two shillings a week, which was reckoned as part of his wages. By the orders made for that county under Agricultural Wages (Regulation) Act, 1924 (c. 37), washing & mending were not benefits or advantages which might be reckoned as part payment of wages in lieu of payment in cash. The justices held that no offence had been committed, & alternatively that it was trivial. They did not convict, & made no order under sect. 7 (3) of the Act for payment of the arrears:—Held: (1) there was no material on which the justices could find that no offence was committed, that which was done being the very thing prohibited; (2) they were not entitled to find that the offence was trivial; the question was not the quantum of money involved, but the nature of what was done, which was something entirely subversive of the Act; (3) in any event sect. 7 (3) was imperative in its terms, & the justices were bound to make an order for payment of the arrears due.—HUGHES v. DAVIES (1929), 94 J. P. 48; 28 L. G. R. 11, D. C.

—— Charge for board & lodging in excess of value fixed by order.]—A worker in agriculture under his contract of service received his proper statutory wages in full. Under a separate agreement with his employer he paid back to his employer £1 each week for board & lodging with him, 15*s.* being the maximum amount fixed by statutory order under Agricultural Wages (Regulation) Act, 1924 (c. 37), s. 8 (1) (a), as the value of that benefit or advantage which could be reckoned as payment of wages instead of payment thereof in cash. The worker was free to lodge elsewhere, & the employer would have preferred him to do so:—Held: as the employer had allowed the worker to board & lodge with him he might not receive from him more than 15*s.* per week in respect thereof, although in form the contract to pay more was distinct from the contract of service.—WILLIAMS v. SMITH, [1934] 2 K. 68c. —— Value of lodgings supplied.]—A farmer, in calculating the wages of one of his workers, deducted the value of certain lodgings which were available to the latter. The worker had not agreed to accept such accommodation & did not in fact avail himself of it, preferring to sleep at his own home, which was about half a mile distant:—Held: the value of the lodgings was not a benefit or advantage received by the worker within Agricultural Wages (Regulation) Act, 1924 (c. 37), s. 7 (11), & the deduction ought not to be made.—WILLIAMS v. HUGHES, [1936] 1 All E. C., 1924, for unlawfully employing complainant, a hair dresser, for less than the minimum wage fixed by a valid order of the Board at $14.25 per week. Resp. contended hat because of the special conditions under which the complainant worked she was not an "employee" & therefore not subject to the Act. He conducted a hairdressing parlour in Vancouver in which employees are engaged admittedly subject to the Act. In 1932 he divided the premises & constructed an annex with a separate entrance from the street. A superintendent was placed in charge of this annex & she, on resp.'s direction, gave employment to the complainant & others on a commission basis. They received 30 per cent. of the receipts for all work done by them, the resp. taking 70 per cent. He paid the rent & supplied materials including machines. Complainant, however, had her own machine & received an allowance for it:—Held: the arrangement between complainant & resp. brought the former within the definition of "employee" in sect. 2 of Minimum Wage Act & the latter within that of "employer" in the same sect., &, therefore, he was rightly convicted, under sect. 13 of that statute, for employing complainant at less than the minimum wage.—R. v. GAUTSCHI, [1934] 2 W. 74a. Power of Minister to define "trade"—Validity of Order.]—By Trade Boards Act, 1918 (c. 32), s. 1, Parliament has given the power of defining or specifying a definite trade for which he may make a special order to the Minister of Labour, with this qualification, that there must be some subject-matter which can be reasonably described as a trade before its exact limits are defined. The Minister may define a trade by exclusion as well as by description. A special order does not exceed the scope of the very extensive powers given to the Minister & is not bad, on the grounds (1) that it defines a trade by reference to the place where it is carried on ; or (2) that it includes a number of occupations or vocations whose collocation is fortuitous except for the fact that all the work is done in or in connection with a trading establishment ; or (3) that an employee by its terms might be within or outside the scope of the Acts according to the particular part of the premises on which at a particular moment he might be.—R. v. MINISTER OF LABOUR, Ex p. NATIONAL TRADE DEFENCE ASSOCIATION, Ex p. INCORPORATED ASSOCIATION OF PURVEYORS OF LIGHT REFRESHMENTS, Ex p. STRAND HOTEL, LTD., [1932] 1 K. The office of Collins Orchestras, Ltd., a theatrical employment agency, was in Dean Street. A contract between that firm & deft. was drawn at the licensed premises on stationery headed with an address in Shaftesbury Avenue (an old office of the co.) was discussed & developed at various places, & finally signed in an office of a director of the co. in Lisle Street. By the contract deft. agreed to pay "commission during the whole period of my present engagement & on every subsequent prolongation of the agreement." Deft.'s present engagement with a music hall was determined & another band engaged for a week. After that deft. was engaged again :—Held : (1) the real transaction took place at the licensed premises & the contract was not void as having been entered into at premises other than the licensed address ; (2) the re-engagement of deft. was a prolongation of the present engagement.—AIGRAM v. WALTERS, [1936] 2 All E. 123b. —— Tramway undertaking—Depot cleaner & lavatory attendant.]—In the first case B. was employed by the Blackpool Corpn. as a lavatory attendant & a depot cleaner at the corpn.'s tramway depot. In the second case J. was employed by the Liverpool Corpn. as a lavatory attendant. In both these cases the tramway undertakings were owned & worked by the corpn. & were carried on for purposes of gain. In the third case W. was employed as a waitress by the Manchester Corpn. in refreshment rooms at H. Park, Manchester, which was over three miles from the centre of the city. Refreshments were there served to the public at a price which would just cover the cost. In the fourth & fifth cases M. was a waitress & D. a waiter, the former being employed at a pier restaurant & the latter at the "Lucullus" room at the Pavilion, Bournemouth, both being carried on by the Bournemouth Corpn. as part of their pier undertaking. It was admitted in all these cases that the employed persons were in domestic service :—Held : the test for making these persons insurable persons within the Act being (1) whether a trade or business was being carried on for the purposes of gain, & (2) whether they were employed in that trade or business. B. & J. were both insurable persons, as the tramway undertakings constituted a trade or business which was being carried on for the purposes of gain. The same reasoning applied to the two Bournemouth cases, but in the case of W. the Manchester Corpn. did not carry on the refreshment catering for the purposes of gain. quired for the work. M. was himself paid weekly by G. from £3 6*s*. to £4 a week, such payment being at a rate per working hour. When M. was not employed on work for G. he worked independently, describing himself as a "builder & contractor," & he had billheads so printed. M. also undertook to do all kinds of electric lighting work & shop & house repairs. On one occasion M. gave a certificate that a certain sum had been spent upon one of G.'s houses for the purpose of sustaining an increase of rent of the house by G., M. purporting to give the certificate as an independent contractor. G. considering that M. was not exercising proper supervision over certain work which G. had engaged him to carry out, & in annoyance at his repeated absence, put an end to his engagement. Two years after M. had ceased to work for G., M. claimed that he was, while in the employment of G., an "employed person" under "a contract of service" with G. within Unemployment Insurance Act, 1920 (c. 30). G. contended that M. was an independent contractor working upon a time & material basis :—Held : M. was not an "employed person" within the Act.—GRAHAM v. MINISTER FOR INDUSTRY & COMMERCE & MOLLOY, [1933] I. No premium was paid to G., by or on behalf of the apprentice & the contract did not provide for any payment to the apprentice during the four years' period of apprenticeship. After the first year of the apprenticeship G. paid the apprentice a sum of three shillings & sixpence per week, the payments generally being made every fortnight in respect of each two weeks. The payments were made gratuitously to enable the apprentice to pay for his daily lunch & to purchase cigarettes, etc., but were entered in G.'s petty cash book, & were charged as one of the expenses of his business in his income tax returns :—Held : the payments were "money payments" within Sched. I., Part I. to Unemployment Insurance Act, 1920 (c. 30) ; the apprentice was an employed person & the employer was liable to pay unemployment insurance contributions in respect of the apprentice.—Re GIVEN, [1936] I. The laundry was within the precincts of the army barracks, but was situated in a separate building & quite distinct from the building where the soldiers resided. Although the laundry was not conducted with a view to profit, the facts did not exclude the possibility of a profit being made :—Held : M. & A. were not employed in domestic service, as they had all the characteristics of ordinary industrial workers ; their service was entirely impersonal ; & their work, in the circumstances in which it was carried on, was of a purely industrial character.—MINISTER FOR INDUSTRY & COMMERCE v. STEWART & LOWRY, [1930] I. At the beginning of a fishing season R. let a boat to one B., who proceeded to select a crew of two others, one of whom was H., & proceeded to fish in the ordinary way. R. was not aware that H. was a member of the crew of the boat. All fish caught had to be handed over to R., who sold them, retaining one-fourth of the proceeds of the sale of the salmon, & handing over the remaining three-fourths & the proceeds of the sale of any other fish caught to B. B. then divided all he received with the crew in proportions arranged between themselves. R. had no part in the arrangement between B. & the crew as to payment, & was not concerned as to how the money was disposed of. In the event of no fish being caught, R. received nothing & made no payment to B. or to the crew, & if B. failed to take the boat out to fish, R. could take it away from him. All repairs to the boat, nets, & tackle were done by R. at his own expense, but B. had full control over its management, the part of the river to be fished, etc., & could dismiss any of the crew, who had to obey his orders:—Held: there was no contract of service between R. & H., & consequently R. was not liable for insurance contributions in respect of H.—GALVIN v. MINISTER FOR INDUSTRY & COMMERCE & HIGGINBOTHAM, [1932] I. R. 216.—IR.

a (p. 1310) i. —— Employment under local authority in pensionable office.]—By an order made under National Insurance Act, 1913 (c. 37), s. 6, "employment under any local or other public authority in any pensionable office in a permanent capacity" shall be deemed not to be employment within the meaning of Part I. of National Insurance Act, 1911, the Order providing that "the expression 'office' includes any office, situation, or employment, & the expression 'pensionable office' means an office coming within the provisions of any Act authorising the grant of a superannuation allowance." A rural district council employed H. in Sept. 1899, temporarily to take charge of the waterworks system which supplied water to the town of C. shortly after the waterworks had been constructed. In Nov. 1899, H. was permanently appointed as "a person to drive the engine & the pumps, & perform any other duties he might be called upon to perform." The town of C. became on Apr. 1, 1900, an urban sanitary district by virtue of two orders of the Local Govt. Board, & the urban district council, which was created thereby, took over the waterworks. This council was under no obligation to take over the employees or officials of the rural district council who were employed on the waterworks, but H. continued to carry on his duties as before. H.'s wages were increased from time to time, & such increases were passed by the auditor of the Local Govt. Board. He furnished reports from time to time to the urban district council & frequently attended their meetings. At a meeting of the council soon after they had taken over the waterworks the opinion of the Local Govt. Board was sought as to the payment of H.'s wages, & the Board was requested to make an immediate adjustment of the council's property & liabilities. The Board replied that H.'s wages were to be paid by the council pending an adjustment of the accounts. There was no evidence as to the making of any such adjustment. The Board was fully aware of everything done at the meetings of the council, as copies of the minutes had to be transmitted to the Board:—Held: having regard to the provisions as to the granting of superannuation allowances contained in Part IV. of Local Govt. Act, 1925, H. was engaged in employment under a local authority in "a pensionable office in a permanent capacity," & therefore not engaged in employment within Part I. of National Insurance Act, 1911.—HANRATTY v. MINISTER FOR INDUSTRY & COMMERCE & IRISH INSURANCE COMRS., [1931] I. a. Employment partly in Free States & partly in Scotland—Whether "continuously insured."]—The husband of appct. for a widow's pension had been employed in Scotland from 1912 till Aug. 1928; he had been employed in the Irish Free State from Oct. 1928 till Aug. 1930; he was employed in Scotland from Dec. 1930 till Aug. 1931, after which he was in ill-health until his death in June, 1932. He was insured under National Health Insurance Act, 1924, while in Scotland, & under the corresponding Irish Free State Insurance Act while in the Free State:—Held: in view of Irish Free State Reciprocal Arrangements Order, 1924, appct.'s husband must be treated as though he had been continuously insured under 1924 Act, & appct. was entitled to the pension claimed.—MELVILLE v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1934] S. He then sent to deft. society an account of his charges, which the society refused to pay:—Held: (1) although pltf. was, under Dentists Act, 1921 (c. 21), entitled to practise dentistry, he was not a "dentist" within the Dental Benefit Regulations, 1930, from whom a member of an approved society was entitled to obtain dental treatment, & he was not, therefore, a person who could send in charges & obtain payment of them from the approved society; (2) the regulations, which confined the giving of dental treatment to those persons who were dentists as defined by the regulations, were not ultra vires.—BYNOE v. GENERAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS APPROVED SOCIETY (110), [1937] 4 All E. PART VI.

179 i. Widows', Orphans' & Old Age Contributory Pensions Acts—Meaning of "entry into insurance."]—A workman engaged in employment which, after July 5, 1912, rendered him compulsorily insurable under National Insurance Act, 1911, became insured as at that date, & paid his weekly contributions in full until Dec. 1922, when he passed out of insurable employment. For the purposes of the Insurance Acts he ceased, in Dec. 1924, to be an insured person. On Jan. 4, 1926, he again became insured as a voluntary contributor, & thereafter, until his death in July, 1927, he paid his weekly contributions, numbering 81, in full. His widow applied for a pension, but her claim was rejected on the grounds that sect. 5 (a) of 1925 Act had not been complied with, since it had not been established that 104 weeks had elapsed & 104 contributions had been paid since the date of her husband's last entry into insurance. The Dept. contended that "entry into insurance" in sect. 5 (a) must be construed consistently with National Health Insurance Act, 1924, & particularly sect. 3 (4) thereof, which in effect gave to that expression the meaning "last entry":—Held: sect. 5 (a) had been complied with, in respect that the "date of his entry into insurance" was the date when appct.'s husband first became an insured person, not the date when he again became insured as a voluntary contributor; & the meaning was not controlled by sect. 3 (4) of 1924 Act, which was not applicable in the case of voluntary contributors.—KERR v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1930] S. C. 813.—SCOT.

179 ii. —— ——.]—An appct. for an old age contributory pension had been insured as an employed contributor from Mar. 6, 1922, till Dec. 31, 1925. On Jan. 4, 1926, he became insured as a voluntary contributor, & continued so insured until the expiry of five years, on Jan. 4, 1931. He had attained the age of sixty-five in Mar. 1930. The Dept. rejected his claim, on the ground that the date of his entry into insurance must be taken to be Mar. 6, 1922, & he had not been in continuous insurance since that date:—Held: on a construction of Widows', Orphans' & Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1925, s. 8 (a) & proviso (i), the phrase "entry into insurance" meant entry into the qualifying period; &, accordingly, the date of appct.'s entry must be taken to be Jan. 4, 1926, & he was entitled to a pension on the expiry of five years from that date.—WYLIE v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1932] S. C. 51.—SCOT.

179 iii. —— ——.]—An appct. for an old age contributory pension had been insured as an employed contributor from July 15, 1912, till Jan. 4, 1920. On Jan. 4, 1926, he became insured as a voluntary contributor, & continued so insured for five years. In accordance with the statutory provisions, no contributions were payable by him after the appointed day, Jan. 2, 1928. He attained the age of sixty-five in Oct. 1927. The Department having withdrawn a pension awarded to him, on the ground that the date of his "entry into insurance" for the purpose of sect. 8 of 1925 Act was Jan. 4, 1926, & that the number of contributions for the three contribution years immediately preceding the expiry of five years from that date, viz. July, 1927 to July, 1930, did not represent an average of thirty-nine for each year:—Held: the date of appct.'s entry into insurance in the sense of proviso (i.) of sect. 8 was not, as he contended, the date when he first entered into insurance as an employed contributor, viz. July 15, 1912, but was the date of his entry into the qualifying period, Jan. 4, 1916, & accordingly, he had not satisfied the condition required by sect. 8 (c) as modified by proviso (i.).—GILBERTSON v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1933] S. C. 707.—SCOT.

179 iv. —— ——.]—A woman who had reached the age of sixty-five claimed an old age pension at the full rate of 10*s.* per week. She had complied with the ordinary statutory conditions attached to the grant of such a pension. She had, however, obtained a certificate of exemption in 1924, which she had surrendered in Apr. 1926. At the latter date she was between fifty-nine & sixty. Contributions in respect of her insurance were paid by her employer during the period while she was exempt:—Held: the case was governed by Widows' Orphans' & Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1925, s. 14 (4), & the regulations made thereunder; "entry into insurance" in these regulations meant re-entry at the date when the certificate of exemption was surrendered, & accordingly claimant was entitled only to a pension at the rate applicable to the age at which she had surrendered her certificate of exemption.—MERSON v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1934] S. C. 47.—SCOT.

179 v. Husband's employment within three years of death—Husband bedridden.]—A widow, aged sixty, applied for a pension. Her husband, who died on Nov. 1, 1928, had been employed from boyhood until 1914, & periodically from 1914 until 1921, as a share-fisherman. He became paralysed in 1922, & from that date until his death he was wholly incapacitated for work. For the last three & a half years of his life he was bedridden :—Held : appct. was not entitled to the pension claimed, in respect that it could not be held that her husband's normal occupation, at any time within three years before his death, was employment of the specified character.—MACDONALD v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1931] S. C. 354.—SCOT.

179 vi. —— Nature of employment —Question for referee.]—A widow having applied for a pension under sect. 1 (1) (a) (ii.) of Widows', Orphans', & Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1929, the Department refused the application, on the ground that her husband's normal occupation was not employment in respect of which contributions would have been payable under the 1925 Act. This question turned on whether the husband's occupation had been employment by way of manual labour. The widow having applied for a reference to a referee, the latter found that the husband's occupation had been employment by way of manual labour. The Dept. refused to accept the referee's finding, &, after inquiry, held that the husband's occupation had not been by way of manual labour, & refused the application for a pension :—Held : the question of the nature of the husband's employment was determinable by the referee & not by the Dept., any question which might thereafter arise as to whether such employment was employment in respect of which contributions would have been payable being reserved for the determination of the Dept.—GAMMIE v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1932] S. C. 644.—SCOT.

179 vii. —— Decision of Department —Estoppel.]—An appct. for an old age contributory pension was informed that he was not eligible. Subsequently, in view of a decision of the Ct. of Session in the case of another appct., the Department decided that the appct. was eligible, & awarded him a pension. As a result of a later decision the Department revised its decision & withdrew the pension. The appct. maintained that the Department had no power to withdraw the pension, on the ground that it had been awarded for the purpose of giving effect to a decision by a referee :—Held : the Department was not debarred from revising its original award, in respect that proviso (c) of sect. 18 (1) of 1929 Act applied only to an award giving effect to a decision pronounced with reference to the case in question, & not to an award made owing to a decision in another case.—GILBERTSON v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1933] S. C. 707.—SCOT.

179 viii. —— Disqualification— Widow cohabiting with man as his wife.] —A widow was charged with having, in a form of claim for a widow's pension, fraudulently represented that she was not disqualified from receiving such pension by reason of any of the disqualifications stated in the form, & thus induced the Dept. of Health for Scotland to award her a pension. One of the disqualifications in the form was that a widow was disqualified if she was "cohabiting with a man as his wife." Accused was cohabiting with a man & had three children by him, but she did not hold herself out as his wife, & it was well known in the neighbourhood that the man was married & living apart from his wife :—Held : accused had been cohabiting with the man as his wife in the sense of the statute so as to be disqualified from receiving a widow's pension ; but in the circumstances the Sheriff-Substitute was not bound to find that she had acted with fraudulent intent.—PATERSON v. RITCHIE, [1934] S. 179 ix. —— Who entitled.]—An insured man, who had been divorced by his wife, did not remarry, & died survived by the wife & one child of the marriage. n i. —— Residence—Material date— Date of application.]—A claim for an old age pension under the Acts of 1925 & 1929, made on Mar. 4, 1930, was refused by the Department of Health for Scotland, on the ground that appct. had not satisfied the condition as to residence imposed by sect. 23 (1) (b) of the Act of 1925. Appct. had left Scotland in July, 1929, for the Falkland Islands, where he was still residing on Oct. 26, 1929, the date on which he attained the age of sixty-five :—Held : appct.'s right to a pension fell to be determined as at the date of his application ; at that date the condition as to residence imposed by sect. 23 (1) (b) of the 1925 Act had been effectively repealed by sects. 13 (3), 27 (5) of the 1929 Act ; &, accordingly, appct., who otherwise was duly qualified, was entitled to an old age pension.—ROSS v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1931] S. Against these defts. he pleaded that they had " assisted to publish " the libels in the book. The judge in chambers ordered this part of the statement of claim to be struck out & pltf. appealed :—Held : an allegation of assisting in publication is identical with an allegation of publication ; the question of whether these defts. were a party to the publication was one of fact to be decided on the evidence at the hearing & the claim in respect thereof should not have been struck out.—MARCHANT v. FORD, [1936] 2 All E. The sides of the trench were not secured by boards. Owing to the unsuspected existence of an old drain near one side of the trench, that side fell in, & the labourer was fatally injured. His widow commenced an action under the Employers' Liability Act, & Lord Campbell's Act. Shortly before the trial, it was discovered that deft. co. had, at the time of the accident, had certain hoisting apparatus & cement-mixers upon the site. At the beginning of the trial, pltf. sought leave to amend her statement of claim by alleging the presence of this machinery, & a breach, on the part of deft. co., of a statutory duty, imposed by the Building Regulations, 1926. Pltf., at the time of making this application, offered to give deft. co. an adjournment, & to pay any costs occasioned thereby. The judge refused to allow any amendment, & gave judgment in favour of deft. co. It was stated that pltf. had had an opportunity of asking for such an amendment when interrogatories relevant to the amended case were disallowed :—Held : (1) the amendment sought was one which was essential in order for the real issues in the case to be before the ct.,

& should have been allowed; it was, moreover, one which would not have caused deft. co. any injustice for which it could not have been compensated by way of costs; (2) (per SCOTT, L.J.): when a pltf. proposes to allege a breach of statutory duty, that is a strong additional reason for allowing an amendment. — v. RICE & SON, LTD. (a) the date on which the loan was made;

1229a. Action by Indian moneylender.]—Pltfs. brought proceedings by specially endorsed writ to recover the amount which became due on a promissory note dated June 24, 1932, on default in payment of an instalment, with interest at 3 per cent. per month from the date of default. Pltfs. were moneylenders who were stated on the writ to reside at Bombay, & the figures of the promissory note were in rupees, but it did not appear where pltfs. carried on business. Deft. did not appear to the writ, but when pltfs. sought to sign judgment in default of appearance, judgment was not entered because the writ did not comply with R. S. C., Ord. III., r. 10:—Held: in the absence of evidence to exclude the application of the Moneylenders Acts, the claim to enter judgment in default of appearance was rightly refused.—NIHALCHAND NAVALCHAND v. MCMULLAN, [1934] 1 K. R. S. C., Ord. XXVII., r. 2. The following amendments shall be made in Order XXVII.:—

In Rule 2, after the words "deliver a defence, the ——" there shall be inserted the words "subject as provided by Rule 17 of this Order." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 3), 1936.)

R. S. C., Ord. XXVII., r. 3. In Rule 3, after the words "the proviso to Rule 2" there shall be inserted the words "and subject as provided by Rule 17 of this Order." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 3), 1936.)

K. Actions for Money Lent (p. 155).

R. S. C., Ord. XXVII., r. 17. After Rule 16 the following Rule shall be added and shall stand as Rule 17:—

"17. In any action in which the plaintiff is claiming any relief of the nature or kind specified in Order LV., Rule 5A—

(a) no judgment shall be entered in default of pleading without leave of the court or a judge who may require the application for leave to be supported by such evidence as might be required if relief were being sought on originating summons under Order LV., Rule 5A and may require notice of such evidence to be given to the defendant;

(b) on any motion for judgment under Rule 11 of this Order the judge may require the motion to be supported by such evidence as might be required if relief were being sought on originating summons under Order LV., Rule 5A and may require notice of such evidence to be given to the defendant." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 3) 1936.)

L. Motion for Judgment in Default.

1372a. —— Motion to rectify register of patents—Delivery of points of claim & defence by consent.]—An application was made by originating motion to rectify entries in the register of patents relating to the patent above mentioned, & on the matter coming on for hearing LUXMOORE, J., by consent of the parties (inter alia), ordered points of claim & points of defence to be filed. Both resps. filed points of defence, but the first resp., R., failed to obey an order of the ct. & an order to strike out his points of defence was made; the second resp., P., applied for leave to withdraw its points of defence, leave was granted & the points of defence were withdrawn. The Comptroller-General had informed appct. that he did not wish to be represented at the hearing of the matter nor did he wish to have any documents served upon him. Appcts. then applied, by motion, for judgment in default of defence: —Held: the provisions of R. S. C., Ord. XXVII., r. 11, did not apply to a case in which points of claim & points of defence were delivered as a matter of convenience between the parties; also the motion to rectify should be set down in the witness list to be proved by oral evidence.—Re REPLOGLE'S LETTERS PATENT NO. 139,892 (1934), 51 R. P. C. 267.

Part IX.—Defence.

1424a. —— After grant of time in which to pay.]—Where a discretionary jurisdiction is given to the ct. or a judge, the judge in Chambers is in no way fettered by the previous exercise of discretion by the Master, although no doubt he will give the weight it deserves to that decision. A judgment debtor who asks for & obtains a stay of execution does not thereby approbate the judgment or elect to treat it as binding so as to preclude him from thereafter seeking to set it aside whether on appeal or otherwise. While the Ct. of Appeal will not normally interfere except on grounds of law with the exercise of the judge's discretion, if it is seen that on other grounds his decision would result in injustice being done, the Ct. of Appeal has both the power & the duty to remedy it.—EVANS v. BARTLAM, [1937] A. 1431a. —— —— Security for costs.]—On the construction of R. S. C., Ord. 27, r. 15, the discretion therein given is wide enough to allow the ct. or a judge to make an order for security for costs.—BURCHMORE v. HILLS (1934), 79 L. Jo. 30.

N. Proceedings for Foreclosure or Redemption.

R. S. C., Ord. XIII., r. 17. After Rule 16 the following Rule shall be added and shall stand as Rule 17:—

"17. In any action in which plff. is claiming any relief of the nature or kind specified in Order LV., Rule 5A no judgment shall be entered in default of appearance without leave of the court or a judge who may require the application for leave to be supported by such evidence as might be required if relief were being sought on originating summons under Order LV., Rule 5A and may require notice of such evidence to be given to deft." 1496a. Auction—Sales by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48) —Effect of pleading wrong section.]—Deft. here relies on sect. 6 of Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48). That sect. having failed him, he wishes to rely on sect. 5. I have already held that sect. 5 does not apply to this case, but if I am wrong in that, it would be improper to allow any amendment so that that sect. could be relied upon (LUXMOORE, J.).—HILLS & GRANT, LTD. v. HODSON, [1934] Ch. 53; 103 L. 1733a. —— —— Up to or at trial.]—Pltf. complained that she was libelled by a newspaper article concerning certain aeroplane smuggling exploits of "an Englishwoman." Pltf. was not referred to by name or description, but alleged that the words "an Englishwoman" referred to her. Defts. applied for particulars of the facts from which it was to be inferred that pltf. was the person referred to:—Held: defts. were entitled to the particulars asked, & pltf. should have leave to supplement the particulars at any time up to 20 days before the trial or at such later time as may be ordered by the ct. or a judge or at the trial on such terms as may be deemed just.—BRUCE v. ODHAMS PRESS, LTD., [1936] 1 K. Part XV.—Reply and Subsequent Proceedings.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DELIVERY OF REPLY (p. 208).

R. S. C., Ord. XXIII. Order XXIII. shall be revoked and the following Order shall be substituted therefor:—

1. Where the Plaintiff desires to deliver a reply, he shall deliver it within seven days from the delivery of the defence.

2. Where a counterclaim is pleaded, a reply thereto shall be subject to the Rules applicable to defences. (Substituted by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1933.)

SUB-SECT. 7.—DEFAULT IN DELIVERY (p. 211).

R. S. C., Ord. XXVII., r. 13. Rule 13 of Order XXVII. shall be revoked, and the following Rule shall be substituted therefor:-

13. Where a pleading subsequent to a reply is not ordered, then, at the expiration of seven days from the delivery of the defence or reply (if any), or, where a pleading subsequent to the reply is ordered, and the party who has been ordered or given leave to deliver the same fails to do so within the period limited for that purpose, then at the expiration of the period so limited, the pleadings shall be deemed to be closed and material statements of fact in the pleading last delivered shall be deemed to have been denied and put in issue; provided that this Rule shall not apply to a reply to a counterclaim, and that, unless the plaintiff delivers a reply to a counterclaim, the statements of fact contained in such counterclaim shall, at the expiration of fourteen days from the delivery thereof, or of such time (if any) as may by order be allowed for delivery of a reply thereto, be deemed to be admitted, but the Court or a Judge may at any subsequent time give leave to the plaintiff to deliver a reply." PRACTICE.

Part IV.—Indorsements of Claim.

SECT. 6.—SPECIAL INDORSEMENTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—CLAIMS FOR DEBT OR LIQUIDATED DEMAND (p. 270).

R. S. C., Ord. III., r. 6. The following provisions shall be inserted in Rule 6 of Order III. :—

(a) After the words " damages for its detention ; " the words :—" and (4) in all other actions in the King's Bench Division (except actions for libel, slander, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, seduction or breach of promise of marriage, and actions in which fraud is alleged by the plaintiff ").

(b) After the words " specially endorsed with," the words :—" or accompanied by."

(c) After the words " Appendix C., sec. IV.," the words : —" to VII. inclusive." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1933.)

In Rule 6 of Order III. after " detention " and before " and " in paragraph (3) there shall be inserted :—

" or (3A) Where the plaintiff claims possession of any property forming a security for the payment of money " (Added by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1937.)

A. In General (p. 277).

R. S. C., Ord. XIV., r. 1. Paragraph (a) in Rule 1 of Order XIV. shall be revoked and the following paragraph shall be substituted therefor :—

" (a) Where the defendant appears to a writ of summons specially indorsed with or accompanied by a statement of claim under Order III., Rule 6, the plaintiff may on affidavit made by himself or by any other person who can swear positively to the facts, verifying the cause of action and the amount claimed (if any liquidated sum is claimed), and stating that in his belief there is no defence to the action except as to the amount of damages claimed, if any, apply to a Judge for liberty to enter judgment for such remedy or relief as upon the statement of claim the plaintiff may be entitled to. The Judge thereupon, unless the defendant shall satisfy him that he has a good defence to the action on the merits or shall disclose such facts as may be deemed sufficient to entitle him to defend the action generally, may make an order empowering the plaintiff to enter such judgment as may be just, having regard to the nature of the remedy or relief claimed." (Substituted by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1933.)

197a. —— ——.]—Pltf., a legal mtgee., brought an action to recover possession of the mtged. land, & applied for judgment under R. S. C., Ord XIV. Deft. alleged that the terms of the mtge. deed had been varied by a parol agreement to the effect that the mtgee. should not exercise his right of re-entry before the end of 1936. To this the pltf. objected that the mtge. being required to be in writing under the Statute of Frauds the alleged variation must be in writing. Deft. then alleged that he had entered upon the land & spent money upon the property, in effect, setting up a plea of part performance : —Held : it could not be said that the defence was unarguable & deft. ought to be given leave to defend, & the action should be transferred to the Chancery Div.—KNAPP-CRISP, [1936] 3 All E. R. 560, C. A.

218a. —— Judgment not signed.]—A firm of costumiers claimed against a husband & wife the price of various articles supplied to the wife. An order was made that pltfs., the costumiers, be at liberty to sign final judgment in the action against the wife, the summons under R. S. C., Order XIV., against the husband being adjourned. Judgment was never signed against the wife. The matter went on to trial against the husband who alleged that in the circumstances of the case he was not liable in respect of orders given by his wife, even for necessaries. The county ct. judge found that the husband had given authority to the wife to pledge his credit in respect of the goods supplied & that he had not revoked his authority in any way, & judgment was given for pltfs. against the husband. The husband appealed on the grounds that, as the liability of the husband & wife was alternative & pltfs. had obtained leave to sign judgment against the wife, pltfs. were barred from proceeding against the husband in respect of the same debt, & further that the obtaining of an order against the wife constituted an election which barred proceedings against the husband :—Held : liberty to sign judgment against the wife was not sufficient to bar the pltfs. from proceeding against the husband ; the obtaining of liberty to sign judgment against the wife did not amount to an election, & as in all the circumstances of the case there had been no election pltfs. were entitled to proceed against the husband.—CHRISTOPHER (HOVE), LTD. v. WILLIAMS, [1936] 3 All E. R. 68 ; 80 Sol. Jo. 853, C. A.

277a. ——.]—Pltfs., in a claim for goods sold & delivered, said, in their affidavit, under R. S. C., Ord. XIV., that deft. had complained that the goods were not up to sample, but also said that they believed that he had no defence. Deft. paid into ct. part of the sum claimed, in satisfaction of the whole claim, with admission of liability. Pltfs. took out a summons, under R. S. C., Ord. XIV., asking leave to sign final judgment for the whole amount. On the day of the hearing of the summons deft. filed a defence & counterclaim. The master dismissed the summons with costs & the judge in chambers upheld his order. On appeal :—Held : the master & judge should have allowed pltfs. to sign judgment under R. S. C., Ord. XIV., r. 4, for such part of their claim as was admitted, but pltfs. were not entitled to the costs of the application to the master, as they had applied for leave to sign judgment for the whole amount & knew that there was a defence as to the bulk of it.—SHAERF (RECENIA R.), LTD. v. SMYTH, [1936] 2 All E. R. 1622, C. A.

JA. Writ of Inquiry (p. 297).

R. S. C., Ord. XIV., r. 7A. The following Rule shall be inserted after Rule 7 of Order XIV. and shall stand as Rule 7A :—

" 7A. Where in the case of any claim for unliquidated damages the Court or a Judge has given leave to enter interlocutory judgment, a writ of inquiry shall issue to assess the value of the goods and the damages (or the damages only) to be awarded, provided that the Court or a Judge may order that instead of a writ of inquiry the value and amount of damages or either of them shall be ascertained in any way which the Court or Judge may direct." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1933.)

K. Directions as to Trial—Short Cause List. (p. 297).

R. S. C., Ord. XIV., r. 8. The following paragraph shall added at the end of Rule 8 of Order XIV., and shall stand paragraph (d) :—

" (d) Where the plaintiff has obtained leave to enter final judgment subject to a suspension of execution pending the trial of a counterclaim, the provisions of this Rule shall apply to the counterclaim as if it were an action." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1933.)

SECT. 10.—ACTIONS FOR MONEY LENT. (p. 300).

R. S. C., Ord. III., r. 10. Rule 10 of Order III. shall be revoked and the following Rule shall be substituted therefor :—

" 10. Where an action for the recovery of money lent by a moneylender or for the enforcement of any agreement or security relating to any such money is brought by the lender or an assignee, the indorsement on the writ shall state, in addition to any other particulars, the fact that at the time of making the loan or contract the plaintiff or (in an action by an assignee) the original assignor was a licensed moneylender, and if the writ be specially indorsed under Rule 6 of this Order, shall also state—

(a) the date on which the loan was made ;
(b) the amount actually lent to the borrower ;
(c) the rate per cent. per annum of interest charged ;
(d) the date when the contract for repayment was made ;
(e) the fact that a note or memorandum of the contract was made, and was signed by the borrower ;
(f) the date when a copy of the note or memorandum was delivered or sent to the borrower ;
(g) the amount repaid ;
(h) the amount due but unpaid ;
(i) the date upon which such unpaid sum or sums became due ;
(j) the amount of interest accrued due and unpaid on every such sum." (Substituted by R. S. C. (No. 2), 1936.)

Part VI.—Issue of Writs of Summons.

SUB-SECT. 2A.—CLAIM ARISING OUT OF MORTGAGE OR CHARGE (p. 303).

R. S. C., Ord. V., r. 5A. In Order V. the following Rule shall be inserted after Rule 5 to stand as Rule 5A :—

" 5A. Every action in which there is a claim for payment of principal money or interest secured by any mortgage or charge or a claim for possession of any property forming a security for payment to the plaintiff of any principal money or interest shall be assigned to the Chancery Division :

Provided that this Rule shall not apply to an action assigned to the Probate Divorce and Admiralty Division by section 56 (3) of the Act." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 3), 1936.)

In Rule 5A of Order V. there shall be inserted :—

(a) after " mortgage or charge," the words " upon real or leasehold property " ; and

(b) after " possession of any," the word " such." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1937.)

B. Admiralty Actions in rem—Warrant of Arrest (p. ---)

R. S. C., Ord. V., r. 16. The following paragraph shall be inserted after paragraph (d) of Rule 16 of Order V., and shall stand as paragraph (e) of that Rule :—

" (e) The lodging of an undertaking in writing by the solicitor who applies for the issue of the warrant to pay the fees and expenses of the Marshal." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1934.)

Part IX.—Defence.

SUB-SECT. 3.—TIME FOR DELIVERY (p. 150).

R. S. C., Ord. XXI., r. 6. Rule 6 of Order XXI. shall be revoked and the following paragraph shall be substituted therefor :—

" 6. Where a defendant has entered an appearance, he shall deliver his defence within fourteen days from the time limited for appearance or from the delivery of the statement of claim, whichever shall be the later, unless such time is extended by the Court or a Judge, or, in actions in which the writ of summons has been specially indorsed with or accompanied by a statement of claim under Order III., Rule 6, the plaintiff in the meantime serves a summons for judgment under Order XIV." (Substituted by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1933.)

R. S. C., Ord. XXI., r. 8. Rule 8 of Order XXI. shall be revoked. (Revoked by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1933.)

Part XI.—Service of Writ of Summons.

443a. —— ——.]—Pltfs., the owners of a vessel damaged in collision with a vessel owned by defts., a foreign corpn., served a writ upon a member of an English firm, E. M. & Co., who acted as defts.' agents. The writ was served at E. M. & Co.'s London offices. The defts. moved to set aside the writ & service on the ground that they were not resident within the jurisdiction. It appeared that E. M. & Co. were one of defts.' agents in this country for the booking of freight, issue of passenger tickets, & the ordinary purposes for which ship's brokers are employed. The only remuneration received by them was the customary agents' commission, & they had no concern with the management of deft. corpn. The only name appearing on the door of E. M. & Co.'s offices was their own name, but upon the window of the ground floor their name was exhibited as agents for deft. corpn. together with the names of other foreign shipping cos. for whom E. M. & Co. acted :—Held : E. M. & Co. were a firm who " sold " & did not " make " contracts on behalf of defts., & that defts. did their business in this country " through " E. M. & Co. & not " by " them ; defts., accordingly, were not resident within the jurisdiction & that the writ & service must be set aside.—THE LALANDIA, [1933] P. 56 ; 102 L. J. P. 11 ; 148 L. T. 97 ; 49 T. L. R. 69 ; 18Asp. M. L. C. 351.

443b. —— ——.]—In a collision case where the procedure in rem was not available it was sought in an action brought in personam against a foreign shipping co. to effect service of the writ through London agents. The agents were general agents for shipping cos. & the foreign co. in question had no financial interest in the firm nor was any of their staff assigned exclusively to the business of the foreign co. The remuneration was wholly by commission :—Held : service on such general agents was bad.—THE HOLSTEIN, [1936] 2 All E. R. 1660 ; 155 L. T. 466.

448a. —— Share register in England.]—A Greek vessel & an Argentine vessel came into collision in the River Parana; the Argentine vessel sank, &, it was alleged, became a total loss. On Sept. 30, 1936, proceedings were instituted in the Argentine by the owners of the sunken ship, an Argentine corpn.; the owner of the Greek ship put in a counterclaim, but on Oct. 27 withdrew it. Meanwhile, on Sept. 30, he had issued the writ in the present proceedings in this country, & served it by leaving a copy at the London office of the Argentine Corpn. which had been established for the purpose of the transfer & registration of shares. The Argentine Corpn. moved to set aside the writ, or alternatively to stay the proceedings, on the grounds, amongst others, (a) that the corpn. only carried on business within the jurisdiction so far as claims connected with the share register were concerned; (b) that the proceedings were vexatious & oppressive as there was an action pending in Argentina, where all the corpn.'s witnesses as well as the chief witnesses for the Greek ship resided; & further that pltf. had no effective remedy, inasmuch as Argentine law must be applied in this country, under which, if a vessel was a total loss, liability being limited to the property available, her owners were under no liability at all. By s. 352 of Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), the expression "place of business" includes a share transfer office:—Held: (1) as the corpn. had a place of business within the jurisdiction it was amenable to the jurisdiction for all purposes & not merely to the limited jurisdiction suggested; (2) pltf.'s action could not be stayed merely because he was deft. elsewhere; it could not be said, as in Dawkins v. Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 499, that on the facts of the declaration no cause of action was shown; & the question whether pltf.'s claim was groundless depended on facts which he was entitled to have tried, & that accordingly the motion failed.—THE MADRID, [1937] P. 40; [1937] 1 All E. R. 216; 106 L. J. P. 39; 53 T. L. R. 237.

Part XIII.—Service Out of the Jurisdiction.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL (p. 338).

R. S. C., Ord. XI., r. 1. The following paragraph shall be inserted at the end of Rule 1 of Order XI. and shall stand as paragraph (i.) in that Rule:—

"or (i.) The action is one brought under the Carriage by Air Act, 1932." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 2), 1933.)

606a. Charterparty made in England—Action on foreign award.]—On Nov. 19, 1929, a charterparty was made in London which provided that any dispute arising during the execution of the charterparty should be settled by arbn. in Hamburg. In 1931, disputes arose between the parties which were submitted to arbn. in Hamburg, & an award made against deft. for £20,913 13*s.* 7*d.*, payment to be made in English currency. On Nov. 29, 1932, pltfs., who were a German firm, obtained ex parte an order that they should be at liberty to issue a writ against deft., who was residing in France, claiming the amount due & payable under the award, & to serve notice of the writ on deft. in France. On Jan. 5, 1933, deft. applied to have that order set aside, but GODDARD, J. dismissed the application. On appeal:—Held: (1) the order for service out of the jurisdiction was properly made under R. S. C., Ord. XI., r. 1 (e), as the action based on the award was for the enforcement of a contract made within the jurisdiction, namely, the submission to arbn. contained in the charterparty; but (2) the order could not be supported on the ground that the breach of contract was committed within the jurisdiction, as the award had not required payment in England, & the ordinary rule therefore applied that the debtor must seek out his creditors, the German firm, at their place of business & pay them there.—BREMER OELTRANSPORT G.M.B.H. v. DREWRY, [1933] 1 K. B. 753; 102 L. J. K. B. 360; 148 L. T. 540, C. A.

613a. ——.]—A pltf. obtained leave to serve notice of a writ for breach of contract on deft. out of the jurisdiction. Deft. appealed, submitting that the statement of claim, affidavit, & letters attached did not show a contract between pltf. & deft., but only between pltf. & a co-director of deft. acting as agent for a co. of which deft. was chairman:—Held: as there was no reasonable evidence that a contract had been made with deft., leave for service out of the jurisdiction should not have been given.—CROMIE v. MOORE, [1936] 2 All E. R. 177, C. A.

622a. Action on foreign award—Award not requiring payment in England.]—BREMER OELTRANSPORT G.M.B.H. v. DREWRY, No. 606a, ante.

624a. —— ——.]—Pltf. & deft., both British subjects, being in Germany, became engaged to marry. Pltf. came to England, & there received a letter written & posted by deft. in Germany, in which she declined to carry out her engagement. Pltf. sued out a writ of summons under C. L. P. Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 18:—Held: the words "cause of action," in the above sect., mean the whole cause of action, & do not apply where a contract has been made out of the jurisdiction & the breach has occurred in England; also, the breach of the contract to marry occurred in Germany, the receipt of the letter only furnishing evidence of the breach & not constituting the breach itself.—CHERRY v. THOMPSON (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 573; 41 L. J. Q. B. 243; 26 L. T. 791; 20 W. R. 1029.

626a. —— ——.]—Deft. made a promise of marriage to pltf. whilst both parties were residing abroad. Both afterwards came to England, where deft. wrote a letter to pltf.

renouncing the contract. He afterwards left the country. Pltf., under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76 s. 18, issued a writ indorsed for service abroad. Deft., having been served with the writ abroad, moved to set it aside:—Held: the writ was rightly issued; cause of action in sect. 18 means the act or omission constituting the violation of duty complained of, & not the whole cause of action.—DURHAM v. SPENCE (1870), L. R. 6 Exch. 46; 40 L. J. Ex. 3; 23 L. T. 500.

626b. —— ——.]—Pltf., a German national of Jewish faith, was manager of the London branch of a German co. The co., not knowing pltf.'s London address, sent from Germany to their agents in London a blank piece of notepaper containing their address & signature, & instructed their agents to write thereon a letter dismissing pltf. from their employment & to post it in London to his address. Pltf. commenced an action for wrongful dismissal, & obtained leave to serve the writ out of the jurisdiction of the ct. The co. applied to have the service of the writ set aside on the grounds that the alleged breach of contract took place in Germany, & as both parties were of German nationality, & as the contract of employment was to be construed according to German law, Germany was the forum conveniens. Pltf. contended that, being of the Jewish faith, he might not be entitled to the services of an advocate in the German ct., & moreover, should he return to Germany to prosecute a lawsuit, he would be in grave peril of being deprived of his liberty. The application to set the writ aside was granted. Pltf. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: (1) the alleged breach of contract was committed in London; (2) England was the forum conveniens.—OPPENHEIMER v. LOUIS ROSENTHAL & CO., A. G., [1937] 1 All E. R. 23, C. A.

667a. —— No substantial wrong within jurisdiction.]—Pltf. brought an action for libel in England against the respective publishers of a Belgian newspaper & a French newspaper. The evidence showed that the newspapers were published in Belgium & in France, respectively, & that they circulated almost entirely within those countries, only a very small number of each being brought to England & distributed there. Pltf., who was a foreigner, stated that he was a gentleman of no occupation, & there was no evidence that he had any reputation in or associations with England. Pltf. applied for an order under R. S. C., Ord. 11, r. 1 (ee), for service out of the jurisdiction upon defts. in each case:—Held: assuming that there was a tort committed within the jurisdiction & technically within the terms of R. S. C., Ord. 11, r 1 (ee), there was no question of substance in England, & as pltf.'s substantial complaint, if any, was one which ought to be investigated in the one case in Belgium & in the other case in France, an order for service out of the jurisdiction ought not to be made.—KROCH v. ROSSELL ET COMPAGNIE SOCIÉTÉ DES PERSONNES A RESPONSIBILITE, LTD., KROCH v. SOCIÉTÉ EN COMMANDITE PAR ACTIONS LE PETIT PARISIEN, [1937] 1 All E. 668a. Threat of action for infringement—No evidence of threats within jurisdiction.]—Pltfs., an Australian co., instituted an action to restrain threats against two American cos. registered in New York, & obtained an order giving leave to serve notice of the writ upon defts. out of the jurisdiction. Upon application by defts. to discharge the order:—Held: there was no evidence that any threats had been made within the jurisdiction & the order must be discharged & all subsequent proceedings stayed. Defts. were given the costs of the motion together with the costs of a motion of pltfs. for interlocutory relief.—EGG FILLERS & CONTAINERS (AUST) PROPRIETARY, LTD. v. HOLED-TITE PACKING CORPN. & PACKING PRODUCTS CORPN. SUB-SECT. 3.—ACTIONS UNDER CARRIAGE BY AIR ACT, 1932 (c. 36) (p. 375).

R. S. C., Ord. XI., r. 8A. The following Rule shall be inserted after Rule 8A of Order XI., and shall stand as Rule 8B of that Order:—

"8B.—(1) Where, for the purpose of an action under the Carriage by Air Act, 1932, and the Convention therein set out, leave is given to serve a notice of a writ of summons upon a High Contracting Party to the Convention other than His Majesty, the provisions of this Rule shall apply.

(2) The notice shall specify the time for entering an appearance as limited in pursuance of Rule 5 of this Order.

(3) The notice shall be sealed with the seal of the Supreme Court for service out of the jurisdiction, and shall be transmitted to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, together with a copy thereof translated into the language of the country of the defendant, and with a request for the further transmission of the same to the Government of that country.

(4) The request shall be in Form 10AA in Appendix A, Part I., with such variations as circumstances may require.

(5) The party bespeaking a copy of a document for service under this Rule shall, at the time of bespeaking the same, file a præcipe in Form 10B in Appendix A, Part I.

(6) An official certificate transmitted by one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State to the English Court certifying that the notice was delivered on a specified date to the Government of the country of the defendant shall be deemed to be sufficient proof of service and shall be filed of record as, and be equivalent to, an affidavit of service within the requirements of these Rules in that behalf.

(7) After entry of appearance by the defendant or, if no appearance is entered, after the expiry of the time limited for appearance, the action may proceed to judgment in all respects as if the defendant had for the purposes of the action waived all privilege and submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court.

(8) Where it is desired to serve or deliver a summons order or notice in the proceedings on the defendant out of the jurisdiction, the provisions of this Rule shall apply with such variations as circumstances may require." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 2), 1933.)

SECT. 13.—SERVICE OF FOREIGN PROCESS OR CITATION.

(p. 375).

R. S. C., Ord. XL, r. 9. In paragraph (4) of Rule 9 of Order XI. the words "verified by notarial certificate" shall be omitted. (Amended by R. S. C. (No. 1), 1934.)

Part XIV.—Appearance.

870a. Hearing of motion before appearance—Duty of solicitor to enter appearance immediately.]—It is the duty of a solr. who in exceptional circumstances instructs counsel to appear for a deft. on a motion before entry of appearance, to correct the irregularity without any delay.—PRACTICE NOTE, [1934] W. N. 228 ; 78 L. Jo. 381 ; 151 L. T. Jo. 443.

Part XV.—Default of Appearance.

A. In General (p. 385).

R. S. C., Ord. XIII., r. 3. The following amendments shall be made in Order XIII. :—

In Rule 3, after the words " the plaintiff may " there shall be inserted the words " subject as provided by Rule 17 of this Order." (Amended by R. S. C. (No. 3), 1936.)

SECT. 7A.—ACTIONS UNDER CARRIAGE BY AIR ACT, 1932 (c. 36).

(p. 390.)

R. S. C., Ord. XIII., r. 9A. The following Rule shall be inserted in Order XIII. after Rule 9 and shall stand as Rule 9A of that Order :—

" 9A. In any case to which Rules 3 to 8 of this Order do not apply, in which the defendant fails, or all the defendants, if more than one, fail, to appear, but in which by reason of payment, satisfaction, abatement of nuisance, or for any other reason it is unnecessary for the plaintiff to proceed with the action, he may by leave of the Court or a Judge to be obtained on summons in Chambers enter judgment for costs.

Provided that such summons shall be filed and shall be served in the manner in which service of the writ has been effected or in such other manner as the Court or a Judge shall direct." (Added by R. S. C. (No. 2), 1933.)

SECT. 10.—ACTIONS BY MONEYLENDERS OR ASSIGNEES OF MONEYLENDERS.

(p. 390.)

947a. Action by Indian moneylender.]—Pltfs. brought proceedings by specially endorsed writ to recover the amount which became due on a promissory note dated June 24, 1932, on default in payment of an instalment, with interest at 3 per cent. per month from the date of default. Pltfs. were moneylenders who were stated on the writ to reside at Bombay, & the figures of the promissory note were in rupees, but it did not appear where pltfs. carried on business. Deft. did not appear to the writ, but when pltfs. sought to sign judgment in default of appearance, judgment was not entered because the writ did not comply with R. S. C., Ord. III., r. 10 :—Held : in the absence of evidence to exclude the application of the Moneylenders Acts, the claim to enter judgment in default of appearance was rightly refused.—NIHALCHAND NAVALCHAND v. MCMULLAN, [1934] 1 K. B. 171 103 L. J. K. B. 234 ; 150 L. T. 170, C. A.

964a. Request to abstain from execution—Effect of.]—Where a discretionary jurisdiction is given to the ct. or a judge, the judge in Chambers is in no way fettered by the previous exercise of discretion by the Master, although no doubt he will give the weight it deserves to that decision.

A judgment debtor who asks for & obtains a stay of execution does not thereby approbate the judgment or elect to treat it as binding so as to preclude him from thereafter seeking to set it aside whether on appeal or otherwise.

While the Ct. of Appeal will not normally interfere except on grounds of law with the exercise of the judge's discretion, if it is seen that on other grounds his decision would result in injustice being done, the Ct. of Appeal has both the power & the duty to remedy it.—EVANS v. BARTLAM, [1937] A. SECT. 16.—PROCEEDINGS FOR FORECLOSURE OR REDEMPTION.

R. S. C., Ord. XIII., r. 17. After Rule 16 the following Rule shall be added and shall stand as Rule 17 :—

" 17. In any action in which the plaintiff is claiming any relief of the nature or kind specified in Order LV., Rule 5A no judgment shall be entered in default of appearance without leave of the court or a judge who may require the application for leave to be supported by such evidence as might be required if relief were being sought on originating summons under Order LV., Rule 5A and may require notice of such evidence to be given to the defendant. ' (Added by R. S. C. (No. 3), 1936.)

Part XVII.—Summary Judgment for Specific Performance.

991a. Proceedings for interest on purchase-money—Allegation of wilful default against plaintiff.]—Pltf., as the vendor of freehold property, sought to charge deft., the purchaser, with interest on the purchase-money. This deft. refused to pay, alleging that pltf. had been guilty of wilful default. In an action for specific performance of the contract, pltf. sought to avail himself of the summary procedure under R. S. C., Ord. XIVA. :—Held : this was not a proper case for the summary jurisdiction, as there was an issue to be tried & the parties must proceed to trial.—UPJOHN v. SIMMONS, [1936] 1 All E. R. 615.

Part XIX.—Parties.

1010a. Absence of right to sue—Power of court to strike out action.]—As a rule objection to the right to bring an action should be taken not at the trial but by interlocutory motion or summons, & if that course is not followed the ct. should not entertain an application at the trial to dismiss the action, but where want of capacity or authority to sue plainly appears at any stage the ct. may order the action to be struck out (ROCHE, L.J.).—SHAW (JOHN) & SONS (SALFORD), LTD. v. SHAW, [1935] 2 K. B. 113; 104 L. J. K. B. 549; 153 L. T. 245, C. A.

1019a. —— Of solicitors.]—Actions were commenced by E. & S. by separate writs issued by the same solrs. on the same date claiming damages against the same defts. in respect of personal injuries sustained in the same accident. After separate statements of claim & defences admitting liability had been delivered, the actions were consolidated. Defts. paid into ct. £225 in respect of E.'s claim, & £125 in respect of S.'s claim. S. recovered £185, £60 more than the payment into ct. & E. recovered £200, £25 less than the payment into ct.:—Held: (1) the question of suing on one writ or on separate writs was one for the discretion of pltfs.' solrs.; (2) the proper order as to costs was as follows: judgment for pltfs., S. for £185 & costs, including the costs of the consolidated action, except in so far as directly attributable to the claim of E. after the date of payment into ct. Order payment out to pltf. S. of the £125 in ct. in part satisfaction. Judgment for pltf. E. for £200 & costs up to the date of payment into ct. Pltf. E. to pay to defts. any costs of the consolidated action arising after the date of payment into ct. which are directly attributable to his being a party to the consolidated action. Order payment out to defts. of £25, part of the sum of £225 paid into ct. Order payment out to pltf. E. of £180, the remainder of the sum in ct. to be dealt with according to the taxing-master's certificate.—ENGLISH v. BLOOM & LONDON PASSENGER TRANSPORT BOARD, SIEGENBERG v. BLOOM & LONDON PASSENGER TRANSPORT BOARD, [1936] 2 K. B. 550; [1936] 2 All E. R. 1592; 105 L. J. K. B. 659; 155 L. T. 286; 52 T. L. R. 679; 80 Sol. Jo. 795.

1025a. —— Interference with light.]—Two pltfs. were interested in No. 4, B. Street, & two pltfs. in No. 6, B. Street. These buildings were not adjacent, there being an intermediate structure. Deft. was erecting new premises on the other side of B. Street & both pltfs. alleged an interference with ancient lights. Both sets of pltfs. joined in one action against deft. as pltfs. having a right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same transaction or series of transactions within the meaning of R. S. C., Order 16, r. 1:—Held: in the exercise of the discretion of the ct. pltfs. should elect within 14 days which of the two sets of pltfs. should be allowed to proceed in the action, & upon election being made, there should be struck out of the writ & statement of claim all parts thereof referring to the other set without prejudice to their issuing a new writ claiming relief pertinent to their premises, both actions to come into the list before the same judge on the same day to be dealt with as he thinks fit, the party issuing the new writ to stand in the same position as if that writ was issued on the date of the original writ.

Semble: without expressing any final opinion as to whether the joinder of these causes of action is permitted by R. S. C., Ord. XVI., r. 1, or on the meaning of the word "transaction" therein, that word would seem to mean an act the effect of which extends beyond the agent to other persons, & the building of the new premises is such an act in that its effect extends to other premises as an interference with an easement. The authorities support this view, & they have clearly extended its meaning from that of a mere contractual relationship.—BENDIR v. ANSON, [1936] 3 All E. R. 326; 80 Sol. Jo. 873, C. A.

1166a. —— All members not liable.]—In 1921, 89 out of 1093 members of a Lodge, which was a branch of the Durham Miners' Assocn., a registered trade union, received goods from pltf., such goods being supplied upon a form of voucher signed by the then secretaries of the Lodge & bearing the Lodge stamp. Between 1922 & 1930 pltf. received from the treasurer of the Lodge various payments on account. In Aug. 1936, he commenced an action against the chairman, treasurer, general secretary & financial secretary of the Lodge as representing the general body of members of the Lodge claiming a declaration that the balance of the price of the goods was due & owing to pltf. from the members of the Lodge & was payable to him out of the funds of the Lodge. Pltf. then applied for & obtained an order under R. S. C., Ord. XVI., r. 9, that defts. should defend the action on behalf of the Lodge. It appeared that the majority of the members of the Lodge in 1921 had now ceased to be members, & that the majority of the members of the Lodge at present time were not members in 1921, that members who were infants had no voting powers, & only 19 out of the 89 members to whom the goods were supplied were now members of the Lodge. The rules of the Assocn. did not provide for the supply of goods to members. The judge in Chambers set aside the writ & the representation order. On appeal:—Held: the representation order ought not to be made, as the various members of the Lodge had different interests & different defences in the cause or matter.—BARKER v. ALLANSON, [1937] 1 K. B. 463; [1937] 1 All E. R. 75; 106 L. J. K. B. 108; 156 L. T. 135; 53 T. L. R. 243; 81 Sol. Jo. 77, C. A.

1229a. —— —— Against trustee—Right of beneficiaries to proceed without joining trustee as plaintiff.]—Defts., the V. Press, Ltd., were the owners of five periodicals which dealt with philately, & deft. A. was helping in their production. In Nov. 1932, A. learnt that the co. desired to sell the papers, &, not being able to purchase of his own resources, he negotiated with pltf. H., who authorised him to make an offer of £1,500, of which H. his co-pltf. K. would find four-fifths & A. was to supply the remainder. The offer was accepted, & an agreement under seal dated Dec. 15, 1932, was made between the V. Press, Ltd. & A., under the terms of which A. agreed to purchase from the co. the copyright & interest & all the goodwill of the co. in the five periodicals. When that had been done, A. asserted that he alone was interested in the purchase, & purported shortly afterwards, with the consent of the co., to put an end to the agreement. Pltfs. in their action asked for a declaration that deft. A. entered into & took the benefit of the agreement of Dec. 15, 1932, as agent & trustee for pltfs. & himself in the share of two-fifths for each of pltfs. & one-fifth for himself, & also for an order for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: (1) the cross-appeal must be dismissed, as the evidence was clear & sufficient to hold that A. was acting as agent & trustee for pltfs.; (2) the appeal by pltfs. should be allowed so far as they were refused an order for specific performance of the agreement. A. having acted as trustee for pltfs. & being before the ct., & further having been found to have committed a breach of trust, & pltfs. being cestuis que trust as beneficiaries upon the contract, pltfs., having regard to R. S. C., Ord. XVI., r. 11, which provided that no action should be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or non-joinder of parties, could obtain leave to sue the co. for specific performance in the name of A. That, however, involved circuity of action & expense, &, using R. S. C., Ord. XVI., r. 11, the ct. were prepared in the special circumstances—all the parties being before the ct.—to give the remedy to which ultimately pltfs. would have become entitled, namely, to order specific performance of the contract in this action by pltfs. The order for inquiry as to damages would be discharged. The principle of equity was to enforce the contract in the name of & for the benefit of the trust.—HARMER v. ARMSTRONG, [1934] Ch. 65; 103 L. J. Ch. 1; 149 L. T. 579, C. A.

SECT. 13A.—ACTIONS UNDER CARRIAGE BY AIR ACT, 1932 (c. 36).

(p. 433.)

R. S. C., Ord. XVI., r. 14. The following Rule shall be inserted after Rule 13A of Order XVI., and shall stand as Rule 14 of that Order:—

Ord. XVI. The following amendments shall be made XVI.:—

(a) In paragraph (4) of Rule 23, the words "or Court of Appeal" shall be omitted.

(b) At the end of Rule 23 there shall be inserted the following words:

"The certificate shall bear the date on which the application is granted by the Committee."

(d) In paragraph (5) of Rule 28, after the words "shall direct" there shall be inserted the words "a sum of money," and after the words "conducting solicitor" the words "any sum of money not exceeding in the first instance the sum of £5" shall be omitted.

(e) Paragraph (1) of Rule 30 shall be omitted, and the following paragraph shall be substituted therefor:—

"(1) After the date on which the certificate is granted, no poor person nor any solicitor nominated to conduct the proceedings for him shall enter into any settlement or compromise, whether before or after the commencement of the proceedings, nor discontinue the proceedings, without the leave of the Court or a Judge, or, where no Court order is required, of the Committee."

"31A.—(1) In matrimonial causes every pleading shall be settled by counsel.

(2) Proofs of the witnesses shall be furnished to counsel with the instructions to settle the pleadings.

(3) This Rule shall not apply to petitions for alimony or maintenance or to answers to such petitions."

(g) The following Rules shall be substituted for Rule 31B, which is hereby revoked:—

Where such an order is made it shall be deemed to include all out-of-pocket expenses properly incurred in the course of the proceedings, but not office expenses, or fees to counsel, or Court fees.

(2) Where it appears to the Court or a Judge that any other party has acted unreasonably in bringing or defending the proceedings or in his conduct of them, or that the special circumstances of the case require it, the Court or Judge may order the other party to pay the costs of the Poor Person, including profit costs, or a proportion of profit costs, or a sum of money in respect thereof, in addition to out-of-pocket expenses properly incurred in the course of the proceedings, but not fees to counsel or Court fees.

(3) Where it appears to the Court or a Judge that the proceedings are of such length or difficulty as to throw an unusual burden on the solicitor acting for the Poor Person, the Court or Judge may order the other party to pay, in addition to out-of-pocket expenses properly incurred in the course of the proceedings, such sum as the Court or Judge thinks fit in respect of such unusual burden.

(4) All out-of-pocket expenses and other costs ordered to be paid under this Rule shall be taxed.

(5) Where an order is made to pay costs under paragraphs (2) or (3) of this Rule, the order shall not be enforced without the leave of the Court or a Judge, and the Court or Judge may refuse leave if satisfied by the party ordered to pay the costs that he has not the means to pay them.

In this paragraph 'means' shall include insurance or other indemnity.

31BB.—Where it appears to the Court or a Judge that the certificate was obtained by fraud or misrepresentation the Court or Judge may order the Poor Person to pay the costs of the other party, and where such an order is made, the costs shall be taxed as if the party ordered to pay them were not a Poor Person."

(h) At the end of Rule 31C the following paragraph shall be added:—

In the circumstances of the case leave to appeal as a poor person to the Ct. of Appeal was refused & the certificate given to pltf. by the Poor Persons' Committee admitting him to appeal to the Ct. of Appeal as a poor person was discharged by the Ct. of Appeal of its own motion under rule 29 of R. Part XX.—Third-Party Procedure.

1369a. —— ——.]—A passenger in a private motor car belonging to & driven by her husband sustained injuries as a result of a collision with a Glasgow Corpn. tramway car. She sued the corpn. for damages on the ground of negligence on the part of a servant of the corpn. In their pleadings the corpn. averred that the husband was solely to blame for the accident. After the close of the pleadings the corpn., in terms of the Rules of the Ct. of Session, 1934, proposed a counter-issue of negligence on the part of the husband & asked for an order for service of a third party notice upon him. The ct. held that the corpn. had not relevantly pleaded a right of contribution against the husband to bring the case within the rules, whereupon the corpn. asked for leave to amend their pleadings by adding averments of an alternative case alleging that, on the assumption that their servant was negligent, the collision was materially contributed to by the negligence of the husband, against whom the corpn. claimed a right of contribution, relief, or indemnity. There is a decision of the Second Division of the Ct. of Session against the right of the wife to recover from the husband in such a case & the addition of the husband as third party would probably necessitate the case being taken to the House of Lords:—Held: this was not a case in which the discretion of the ct. should be exercised in favour of allowing a third party notice to be served. Leave to amend the pleadings was, therefore, refused & applts.' proposed counter-issue was disallowed.—GLASGOW CORPN. v. ROBERTSON (OR CAMERON), [1936] 2 All E. R. 173, H. L.

5401a. —— Portland Harbour—Vessel "about to enter"—Collision in one of the "channels between the breakwaters."]—Rule 5 of a schedule to an Order in Council relating to the Port of Portland (1931, No. 176) provides that "When any vessel or vessels are about to enter from seaward any of the channels between the breakwaters, no vessel proceeding outward by the same channel shall enter this said channel until the before mentioned vessel, or vessels, shall have passed in."

A collision between the R., an outward bound submarine in command of deft., & pltfs.' vessel P. inward bound, took place in the North Ship Channel entrance to Portland Harbour, slightly to the southward of mid-channel & about 200 to 300 feet outside of a line drawn between the breakwaters. It was argued for deft. that r. 5 did not apply, inasmuch as a vessel "about to enter from seaward" one of the channels meant a vessel going to enter the water which might reasonably be taken to be included in the word "channels"; & that the P. was never in a position of being "about to enter," which implied that she must so approach as to indicate clearly her intention to enter, whereas, instead of "shaping up" at a proper distance to enter the channel, she was cutting the corner & then had to make a turn of five or six points :—Held : (1) the collision took place in what might fairly be called one of "the channels between the breakwaters"; taking r. 5 as a whole, its purport was not to lay down how vessels should or should not approach the harbour, but to lay down in clear language that the outgoing vessel should be the give-way vessel; & accordingly the R. was to blame; (2) the vessel with the right of way was not in the position of a "keep course & speed" vessel under the crossing rule; the P. having a bad look-out, &, considering the fine angle at which she was approaching the breakwater, too high a rate of speed, was also to blame. Both vessels accordingly held to blame in the proportions of two-thirds to the R. & one-third to the P.—H.M. SUBMARINE RAINBOW, [1933] P. 68; 102 L. J. P. 61; 149 L. T. 357; 18 Asp. M. L. The M., a dumb hopper loaded with spoil, had been moored alongside a dredger in Blackwall Reach, River Thames. Her after moorings were cast off, & she commenced to swing with the tide, being still made fast forward by her forward moorings. She was exhibiting one white riding light forward & one white riding light aft. In these circumstances the D., a steamship bound up-river, came into collision with the M.:—Held: (1) the M. was not a vessel under way; (2) in any case the M. was probably a "lighter" within the meaning of the Port of London River bye-laws 1914–26, & was not required to carry side lights when under way, & no lights were laid down by the bye-laws for her to carry; (3) the M., being moored to the dredger, which was moored to buoys, was herself moored & bound to exhibit two white riding lights in accordance with bye-law 14; (4) the D. was alone to blame for the collision.—THE DAGMAR (1929), 141 L. 5608b. —— Dumb barge.]—Pltfs.' steamship S. was lying moored at a tier on the south side of the River Thames. Defts.' dumb barge P. was lying inside of the S. & attached to her by ropes fore & aft. When the work of receiving cargo from the S. ceased for the day the P. was left alongside the S. unlighted & unattended. The S. was exhibiting the usual anchor light. During the night some unknown craft came into collision with the P. & she filled & sank, &, as the tide ebbed, the S. rested on the submerged hull of the P. & both vessels were damaged. Under bye-law 14 of the Port of London River Bye-laws, a vessel under 150 feet in length "when at anchor or moored" by night must exhibit a riding light; but by proviso (a) to the bye-law: "Where masted vessels are lying made fast at the moorings in the tiers, only the outermost off shore of such vessels in each tier shall be required to exhibit the riding light"; & by proviso (c), ". . . Lighters made fast at wharves, piers or jetties or alongside vessels thereat, shall not be required to exhibit the riding light":—Held: (1) it was not negligent to leave the P. unattended; but (2) not being a masted vessel nor made fast to a vessel at a wharf, pier or jetty, the P. could not bring herself within either proviso (a) or (c); accordingly there was nothing to take her out of the obligation imposed upon her under the main part of the bye-law to exhibit a riding light; (3) as defts. could not prove that the absence of the light was not a cause of the collision with the unknown craft, they failed to discharge the onus upon them, & there must be judgment for pltfs.—THE PRINCESS, [1929] P. 287; 98 L. Immediately afterwards the steamship ported her helm, &, in attempting to cross the bows of the barque, was struck on the port side by the bowsprit & stem of the barque & sank with all hands except one:—Held: the exhibition of the green flare by the barque was not a breach of Article 12; the green flare was intended simply to attract attention, & did not call upon the steamship to do anything except that which it was her duty to do when she saw a sailing vessel approaching with lights green to green; & the steamship, by improperly porting, was alone to blame for the collision.—ALCANTARA, S.S. Pakeha, bound up-river on the flood tide, sounded the appropriate signal under bye-law 28 (e), hard-a-starboarded her helm, & put her engines full speed astern. When she had swung two or three points the anchor was let go with thirty fathoms of chain & was reported to be holding. Her navigation lights were then switched off, the anchor lights switched on & the bell commenced to be rung for fog. The engines had then to be worked half ahead & full speed ahead for about a minute & a half to avoid a small vessel at anchor, & were then put full speed astern for about a minute & then stopped. About ten minutes after the anchor had been let go, & when the Pakeha had nearly swung head to tide, she was run into by defts.' steamship. Defts. alleged (inter alia) that the Pakeha was a vessel under way & turning in the river, & required, therefore, to continue sounding the signal of four short blasts followed by two:—Held: following the criterion laid down in The Esk, The Gitana, No. 5521, as the Pakeha was holden by & under the control " of her anchor during all the time in question, she was not " under way," & was right in ringing her bell, the appropriate signal for a vessel at anchor in a fog.—THE PALEMBANG, [1929] P. 246; 98 L. 5666a. Duty of ship hearing signals—Whether alteration of course justifiable.]—Two steam vessels, the H. & the G., came into collision in a fog. Both had headway at the time of the collision & were to blame for excessive speed in fog & for not stopping when they first heard the fog signals of the other vessel forward of their beam. The G. had been sounding a succession of two prolonged blasts (the signal prescribed by Art. 15 (b) of the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea to indicate that she was stopped in the water), when in fact she had substantial headway, & the case for the H., which had meanwhile stopped her engines, was that this signal justified her in altering course &, although she still had headway, in putting her engines slow ahead again:—Held: before altering course in fog every precaution ought to be taken to ascertain that the vessel blowing the two blast signal, a signal which is frequently unreliable, is really stopped & not altering the bearing or getting nearer; from the sound of the blasts blown by the G. it should have been apparent that she was getting nearer & not really stopped; accordingly the H. was to blame for going on again & altering her course; & both vessels were to blame in equal degrees.—THE GASTELU, [1934] P. 86; 103 L. The fact of the aircraft being in the air with only a limited supply of petrol was not a circumstance which justified the aircraft carrier for failure to comply with the regulations.—H.M.S. 5748a. —— —— Meaning of " ascertained."]—In order that the position of a vessel whose fog-signal is heard by another vessel may be " ascertained " within Art. 16 of the Regulations for the Prevention of Collisions at Sea, the vessel must be known by the other vessel to be in such a position that both vessels can safely proceed without risk of collision. An inference as to the vessel's position, based upon the direction from which the fog-signal was heard, the probable course which she is taking, & the improbability of her crossing the fairway in a fog, is not an ascertainment justifying a disregard of the precautions enjoined by the above article. Implicit obedience to the Regulations, upon which navigators are entitled to rely, is of great importance.—NIPPON YUSEN KAISHA v. CHINA NAVIGATION CO., LTD., [1935] A. C. 177; 104 L. J. P. The B., a large liner going down Channel in a dense fog at a speed of about 4 knots, heard, on the starboard side about abeam or a little abaft it, the fog whistle of the steamship B. G. After the whistle had been heard four or five times more, getting louder & nearer & apparently still on the same bearing, the master of the B. decided that he must act. He accordingly starboarded & increased his engine power to assist the helm. The B. G. then came into sight 100 to 150 yards away on the starboard side, crossing the bows of the B. from starboard to port, & the two vessels came into collision :—Held : (1) the main cause of the collision was the bad navigation of the B. G. (inter alia) in altering her course in fog, proceeding at excessive speed, & failing to stop on hearing the whistle of the B. forward of her beam.

The conclusion on the authorities is that in fog, unless the vessel hearing a whistle is quite clear that to continue course & speed will not involve risk of collision, she should always stop her engines (per CUR.).

(2) The B. was also partly to blame, inasmuch as the fact that the fog signals of the B. G. were getting louder & nearer on the same bearing was a clear indication of danger, & that accordingly good seamanship required the B. to stop after hearing the second or third blast, when those on board would know for certain that the other ship was approaching & causing risk of collision. Both vessels accordingly held to blame, the B. G. to the extent of 80 per cent. & the B. 20 per cent.—THE BREMEN, [1931] P. 166 ; 100 L. J. P. 122 ; 145 L. T. 565 ; 47 T. L. R. 505 ; 18 Asp. M. 5779a. —— ——.]—The battleship M. came into collision with the steamship K. in foggy weather. The whistle of the K. was heard by those on the M. & was judged to be 10 deg. to 15 deg. on the port bow & a long way off. The engines of the M. were stopped for about four minutes, during which time two or three more fog signals were heard. The ship's head fell off to starboard & the engines were then put ahead again. A few minutes later, the whistle having been heard several times on an estimated bearing of 15 deg. to 20 deg. or possibly 25 deg., the captain of the M., having come to the conclusion that the K. was on an opposite course & would pass port to port, made further substantial alterations to starboard, as the sound of the K.'s whistle was getting rather close & he wanted to give her more room. In fact, however, the K. was on the starboard bow of the M., & the starboard wheel action on the M., instead of terminating the risk of collision, brought it about. When the vessels came in sight of each other at a distance of about 500 yards the M. was on the starboard bow of the K. & the K. was on the port bow of the M. At that time the K., which had not heard the M.'s fog syren until just as the M. came into view, was proceeding at about 11 knots & the M. at about 7 to 8 knots :—Held : (1) the look-out on the K. was inefficient, since the marked deterioration in visibility shortly before the collision was not noticed, & both vessels were to blame in respect of their speeds ; (2) the M. was also to blame for altering course, because, although there is no rule that when two vessels are approaching one another in fog the course should not be altered, a vessel is not justified in altering without reasonable grounds for concluding that the position of the other vessel is ascertained ; that the only data known to those on the M. were that the bearing of the whistle signals of the K. appeared to be one or two points on the port bow & broadening slightly, but that it was only a guess as to the direction of approaching whistle signals two to four miles away with a strong head wind blowing, & the guess was in fact erroneous.—MALAYA, H.M.S., [1937] P. 179 ; 106 L. 5891a. ——.]—Two steam vessels, the S. & the K., while on courses crossing one another at the fine angle of 8 degrees, sighted each other's lights at a distance of several miles. The S. first sighted the masthead light of the K. fine on the starboard bow, & afterwards, as the K. was yawing considerably, saw both her sidelights. The K. had the masthead & green lights of the S. open to her a little on the port bow, & the Elder Brethren were of opinion that there must have been times also when, although those on board the K. denied seeing it, the red light of the S. must also have been open. The S. crossed on to the starboard bow of the K., & having got into a position of green light to green light altered her course to starboard, rendering a collision imminent. The K., which up to that time had kept her course & speed, then went full speed astern & hard-a-ported her helm (old command). LANGTON, J., held that art. 18 applied, & that while the S. was to blame for porting & hard-a-porting when the vessels were green to green & for not sounding any whistle signals, the K. was also to blame for not at an earlier stage altering her course to starboard so as to pass port to port, & he accord-

5757 i. When duty arises—Vessel approaching.]—The question whether vessels approaching one another in a fog should not merely stop their engines but also their way, or reverse their engines, must be decided under the circumstances of each case. In the present case it was held that the H., which did not reverse her engines immediately after hearing the second whistle of the A., did not "navigate with caution," within the meaning of art. 16 of the Collision Regulations, after, at least, she heard that whistle & thereupon should have realised that as it showed no indication of broadening the danger was imminently increasing.—OLSEN & CO. sh. What amounts to.]—A vessel in fog should run at such a speed that upon sighting an approaching vessel, she can pull up in the distance she can see. Art. 16 does not require a vessel running in fog to reverse her engine upon hearing of a fog signal apparently forward of her beam, but only to stop her engines & then navigate with caution, & as the H. could come to a stop in thirty feet & could see a vessel at three hundred feet, she was navigating with caution within Art. 16, & was not called upon to reverse before she did.—OLSEN & CO. v. S.S. ingly held the S. three-fourths to blame & the K. one-fourth. Both parties appealed. Not more than one minute before the collision, defts.' vessel sounded a short blast & hard a-ported, & afterwards before the collision stopped & reversed; pltfs.' vessel blew a short blast in reply, but by some mistake starboarded instead of porting, though, if she had ported, there would have been no collision:—Held: defts.' vessel was bound under Art. 21 of the Sea Regulations, 1897, to keep her course & speed until the other vessel could not by her own action alone avoid the collision.—THE ORNEN (1900), 79 L. The O., the stand-on vessel, had the K. M. broad on the port bow at a distance of several miles. As the bearing of the K. M. did not alter, the O., when the vessels were under three-quarters of a mile apart, hard-a-starboarded to pass under the stern of the K. M. & sounded two short blasts. Twenty or thirty seconds afterwards the K. M. hard-a-ported & sounded one short blast, & the two vessels came into collision less than three minutes after the alteration of course by the O. It being admitted that the K. M. was partly to blame for the collision, the question was whether the O. was also to blame:—Held: the master of the O. was justified in acting when he did, but not in starboarding & maintaining his speed. Two small steam vessels, the M. & the L. B., on courses crossing so as to involve risk of collision, took no measures at all to keep clear of each other & came into collision. The M., which had the L. B. on her own starboard side & consequently under art. 19 had to keep out of the way, admitted that she was partly to blame, but contended that the L. B., on her own pleadings, was also to blame, as it was admitted that she merely kept her course & speed from first to last. The L. B. attempted to justify taking no measures under the note to art. 21 on the ground that up to the last moment the M. could have avoided the collision, & that in keeping her course & speed the *L. The C. was heading for the Inner Automatic Buoy, & the K. was northward & westward of the buoy, each showing her red light to the other, until the K., almost immediately after passing the buoy, altered her course suddenly, showing her green light on the port bow of the C. which would be about half to three-quarters of a mile S.S.E. of the buoy, & in attempting to cross the bow of the C. was struck as aforesaid. The K. gave no signal of her intention to change her course:—Held: as the vessels were travelling red to red, the K. by altering her course without justification, & especially without signalling the C. her intention to do so, & in attempting to cross the C.'s bow, thus creating a danger of collision, violated Arts. 19, 22, 23, 27 & 29 of the International Rules of the Road, & was guilty of mismanagement & bad seamanship, & was solely to blame for the collision which occurred. — THE CAVELIER v. LIVERPOOL [illegible] Co., [1931] Ex. fact taking the action which would best aid to avert collision:—Held: although the exact moment when the stand-on vessel must act under the note must not be unduly pressed against her, it would render the note nugatory to say that she can be excused from taking any action at all; that at a very late stage the action of taking the way off the L. B. would have averted the collision, & that she also was to blame in the proportion of three-fourths to the M. & one-fourth to the L. B.

While it may be desirable in particular cases to sound a warning blast or blasts to attract the attention of a vessel which apparently is taking no steps to keep out of the way (& it would have been a wise precaution if the L. B. had done so), it is not the ordinary practice of seamen to sound whistle signals for which no provision is laid down in the Regns., & accordingly it is not negligent to omit to sound the whistle in such circumstances.—THE LADY BELLE, [1933] P. 275; 102 L. 5958a. —— Channel between line of buoys & open sea.]—By the practice of pilots navigating in & out of the Thames estuary, steam vessels rounding the N.E. Spit buoy from the southward to proceed up river pass outside the buoy at a sufficient distance to the northward to enable an outward bound vessel to pass between them & the buoy port to port. Two steam vessels, the A., inward bound, & the T., outward bound, got into collision about 400 yards to the northward of the buoy. The T., which had the A. on her own starboard side, &, therefore, under the crossing rule (Art. 19) had the duty to keep out of the way, alleged that the narrow channel rule (Art. 25) & not Art. 19 applied, & that the A. was to blame for being too close to the buoy & for not keeping to her own starboard side of the channel, the southern limit of which was the buoy. LANGTON, J., held that it was impossible to apply Art. 25 to waters which were defined only by one or more buoys & which had on the other side the whole of the North Sea; Art. 19 applied, & the T. was to blame for not keeping out of the way. He found, however, the A. also to blame, not for having been set down by wind & tide closer to the buoy than she had intended, but under the Note to Art. 21, which provides that when the vessel which has the duty of keeping course & speed under the crossing rules "finds herself so close that collision cannot be avoided by the action of the giving-way vessel alone, she also shall take such action as will best aid to avert collision"; & in the result the T. was held three-fourths to blame & the A. one-fourth. On appeal:—Held: (1) the crossing rule & not the narrow channel rule applied; (2) the practice did not exclude the crossing rule, but was in fact the direct consequence of the group of rules of which Art. 19 was one; for, by Art. 22 the vessel which is to keep out of the way "shall . . . avoid crossing ahead of the other," &, if she does not cross ahead, she will ultimately pass port to port; (3) on the facts it appeared that with close navigation there was room for the T. to pass between the A. & the buoy, but (4) if there was not room, although a vessel ought not as a general rule to pass inside a channel buoy, the T., whose draught enabled her to do so, should, to avoid immediate danger, have gone inside the buoy; (5) up to the time the A. acted the T. could easily have avoided the collision by her own unaided action, & the T. was alone to blame.—THE TREHERBERT, [1934] P. 31; 103 L. By bye-law 41: "Any regulations for preventing collisions at sea for the time being in force, under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts, shall be deemed to apply to the port, & shall be construed as if the following bye-laws, Nos. 42 to 52 (inclusive), were added thereto, & the entire fairway shall be deemed to be a narrow channel." In 1916 the Harbour Comrs. issued a "Description of Fairway," para. 6 of which was as follows: "From the eastern limit of the inner man-of-war anchorage to the White Point Buoy there are two fairways—the northern fairway & the southern fairway. The northern fairway is bounded on the north by an imaginary line from 20 fathoms south of Copper Point Buoy to the western end of Queenstown Deep-water Quay, & thence towards White Point House until Rushbrooke Church bears N.W. by W.½W., & thence to White Point Buoy showing a fixed white light, & on the south by the line of Admlty. battleships' mooring buoys. 6163a. Vessel turning—Duties of other vessels—Both to blame.]—By Article 40, r. 3, of the Scheldt Bye-laws a vessel turning in the river must give the appropriate signal, & every vessel in the vicinity ("proche") proceeding against the tide must stop her way over the ground, & every vessel proceeding with the tide must slacken her speed, until the vessel turning no longer presents any obstacle "au passage."

Applts.' steamship C., a collier, bound up the Scheldt with the tide, had ahead of her the steamship A., which sounded the appropriate signal, that she was going to swing to get head on tide. Resps.' vessel B., one of the Harwich & Antwerp mail boats, was coming down the river at her full speed of 14 knots. She saw the lights of the C. coming up astern of the A., & when she got down towards the A., which was blocking about half of the navigable waterway of some 1,000 feet, she saw the lights of the C. coming under the stern of the A. on the B.'s side of the waterway. The B. kept her speed until about one minute before the collision when she slowed, &, about half a minute afterwards, stopped & went full astern. The President absolved the B. from blame for the ensuing collision on the ground that Article 40, r. 3, did not apply to her under the circumstances, as there was ample waterway for her on her own proper side of the river under the stern of the A. He held that the B. was justified in keeping her speed "until her master saw that there was an element of risk in the turning movement of the A. combined with the oncoming of the C. but before that risk had developed." He held the C. alone to blame for over-starboarding into the water of the B. & for not sounding a signal that she was starboarding. The owners of the C. appealed :—Held : Article 40, r. 3, is directed, not to the moment when the approaching ships get up to the turning ship, but to the time when they are coming towards her & do not know where she may be when they get up to her ; the ship coming against the tide cannot excuse herself by saying that when she arrived in the vicinity of the turning ship there was in fact room for her to pass ; (per GREER, L.J.) r. 3 is a regulation for the purpose of ensuring the safety of vessels navigating the river at the time the turning movement is taking place quite as much as it is directed to the safety of the turning vessel herself, & that the rule has to be applied until the turning vessel no longer presents any obstacle "au passage" ; & (per CUR.) while the C. was to blame, the B. was also to blame for keeping her speed & not stopping & reversing her engines until the risk of collision was apparent. Decision of the President varied by holding both vessels to blame in equal degrees.—THE "CHATWOOD," [1930] P. 272 ; 100 L. J. P. 1 ; 143 L. T. 735 ; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 165, C. A.

Vessel tying-up.]—Defts.' vessel A., while tying-up to the bank in the Suez Canal to allow pltfs.' vessel B. to pass, was exhibiting three clusters of lights which, under the Canal regulations, should only be exhibited when the operation of tying-up is completed. The A., however, was still exhibiting an arc lamp which should not be extinguished until the tying-up is completed, & she was also exhibiting her masthead lights &, until a moment before the collision, her starboard side-light. Her lights, therefore, were more consistent with her not being finally tied up than with that operation being completed so as to enable the B. to pass in safety. In answer to pltfs.' allegation that they were misled by the lights, defts. contended that if the B. had kept a better lookout she would not have been misled :—Held : the mere fact that if the B. had been keeping a better lookout, she might have appreciated the situation sooner, was not sufficient to exonerate defts. ; the burden was on defts., who had broken, not indeed one of the International Regulations, but a rule of an accepted code laid down for Canal pilots, to prove not only that the breach ought not to have misled the B., but that it did not in fact mislead her ; & the ct., being of opinion that the B. was to some extent misled, found the A. one-fifth to blame, & the B., which was coming too fast & took drastic helm & engine action causing her to sheer into the A., four-fifths to blame.—THE AENEAS, [1935] P. 128 ; 104 L. Pltfs.' steamship D., which had been at anchor head down on the north side of the river waiting to cross over to the south side to enter the Surrey Commercial Docks, was proceeding to work slowly across the river under port helm. In this position only her stern light was visible to defts.' steamship B., which was coming down the river to the south of mid channel. The B. sounded a short blast to a tug coming up the river & the D. sounded two short blasts & starboarded her helm a little. As the D. got more athwart the river she opened her green light to the B., which thereupon reversed her engines & dropped both anchors, but her stem came in contact with the starboard quarter of the D. :—Held : although a crossing vessel had not the duty, as she had under the old Thames Bye-laws of 1898, of keeping out of the way of vessels navigating up & down the river, Art. 34 did not give her the right of way, but specially put upon her the obligation of care both as to the time when she crossed & the way in which she crossed : the D. ought to have given ample warning either by means of a long warning blast or preferably a short blast to indicate that she was crossing the bows of the B., or have taken timely action to allow the B. to pass if there was not room to cross ahead of her ; & the D. was alone to blame.—THE BORS, [1926] P. 5 ; 95 L. I. Vessel leaving Dock.

212a. St. Katherine's Docks—Sufficiency of signal.]—Bye-law 26 of the Port of London River Bye-Laws, 1914-21, provides that "A steam vessel coming out of dock or leaving a wharf or tier shall signify the same by a prolonged blast of the steam whistle, except in the case of a vessel coming out of the St. Katharine Docks requiring the bascules of the Tower Bridge to be raised in order to get into position in the river which shall signify the same by a prolonged blast of the steam whistle followed by three short blasts in rapid succession."

Defts.' steamship having, on the flood tide, come stern first out of the lock of the St. Katharine Docks into the Upper Pool of the Thames, was in collision with the pltfs.' steamship. When entering the lock defts.' steamship sounded a signal of one long blast followed by three short blasts, & this signal she twice repeated as she passed through the lock & into the river. It was contended for pltfs. that she ought in addition to have sounded the prolonged blast mentioned in the first part of bye-law 26 :—Held : the framers of the bye-laws must have had in mind that almost the only occasion when a vessel leaving St. Katharine Docks would require the bascules of the Tower Bridge to be raised was when she was coming out of the docks stern first on the flood tide & so would need all the room she could obtain in which to turn head down river ; the combination of one long blast & three short blasts conveyed a warning to those whom it might concern that a vessel was leaving the dock & in doing so coming astern ; if the bye-law required a vessel in those circumstances also to sound the general warning signal of a prolonged blast prescribed in the earlier part thereof, it followed that she must also, while going astern, sound three short blasts if & when any other vessel in the crowded reach came in sight ; & such a series of blasts would be wholly unnecessary & lead to confusion, & defts.' steamship was right in sounding only a signal of one long & three short blasts.—THE FALCON (1931), 47 T. L. R. 621.

J. Vessel at Anchor.

6212b. Barge dropping down river on anchor—Under-way lights shown.]—While defts.' sailing barge was dropping down the River Thames on the tide the anchor of the barge fouled the chain of a dredger lying just above Battersea Bridge. The barge continued to exhibit the regulation side lights & stern light for a sailing vessel under way. About half an hour afterwards, the master of pltfs.' tug, which was coming down the river with six barges in tow, saw the red light of the sailing barge & thought that she was under way & about to pass through the bridge. In attempting to avoid the sailing barge, when it was realised that she was foul of the dredger, the tug & one of her craft in tow struck the bridge & received damage. Bye-law 5 of the Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914-34, provides that "the expression 'under way,' when used in relation to a vessel, means when she is not at anchor, or moored, or made fast to the shore, or aground, & includes a vessel dropping up or down the river with her anchor on the ground." Bye-law 14 provides that "a vessel under one hundred & fifty feet in length when at anchor or moored shall, by night exhibit forward . . . a white light. . . ." :—Held : the sailing barge was "at anchor or moored" within the meaning of bye-law 14, & ought to have taken in her side lights & put up an anchor light, & she was alone to blame.—THE CURLEW, [1937] P. 30 ; 106 L. 6212c. Lights not sufficiently visible.]—This was a claim by the owners of the Greek steamship N. against E. W.'s Line Limited, of Hull, owners of the steamship T., for damages in respect of a collision which occurred about abreast of Shellhaven Point, Sea Reach, River Thames, on a clear but dark night, at about 2.30 a.m. on Dec. 12, 1936. The N., with no pilot on board, was at anchor ; the T., in charge of a fully-licensed Trinity House pilot, was proceeding down-river on a voyage from London to Hull. Pltfs.' case was that the N., having failed to find a pilot off the Tongue Light Vessel, had proceeded up the river in the wake of another vessel, whose pilot had undertaken, by wireless, to lead the N. to a safe place of anchorage ; that when the N. was about abreast of Holehaven

Creek the pilot on board the other vessel had sent a wireless message to the N. telling her to drop anchor there & promising to return in a couple of hours to pilot the N. to London Docks; that the N. thereupon immediately dropped her starboard anchor, she being then about 300 yds. off Holehaven Creek & stemming the ebb tide, put out her navigation lights & posted her anchor lights, which thereafter burned brightly. About ten minutes before the collision those on board the N. observed the red light of a vessel which proved to be the T., about a mile distant & bearing on the N.'s port bow. The T. came on, but instead of passing the N. portside to portside as she could & ought to have done, the T., with her stem & port bow, struck the N.'s port bow, doing damage. Defts.' case was that the T. was proceeding down the river at full speed & doing about twelve knots over the ground. After passing West Blyth buoy on her starboard side at a distance of about 150 ft., the T. set a course of E. ½ S., which was maintained until just before the collision, & on that course she proceeded down Sea Reach well on the southern side of mid-channel. When about half a cable away, those on board the T. descried the loom of the N. about ahead, & very shortly afterwards a faint light was seen. Although the wheel of the T. was hard-a-starboarded & her engines were put full speed astern, the T.'s port bow struck the port bow of the N., whereby the T. sustained considerable damage. As the T. then scraped along the port side of the N., it was observed that some of the N.'s portholes appeared to be very dimly lit. Defts. denied liability & blamed pltfs. for the collision, alleging that the N. was improperly anchored in the fairway & was not exhibiting the anchor lights required by the Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914–1934. The learned judge having found as a fact that the N. was not lying where she said she was, but was anchored well in mid-channel about abreast of Shellhaven Point:—Held: even if the N.'s lights were visible at a cable's distance, as the evidence called on behalf of defts. appeared to establish, this was in flagrant breach of bye-law 14 of the Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914–1934, which required that anchor lights should be clear & visible all round the horizon at a distance of at least one mile; the failure of those on board the T. to descry such lights as the N. had before they did, did not amount to a bad look-out, & in the circumstances there was no negligence on the defts. for not having avoided the collision. Pltfs. were accordingly alone to blame.—THE TRENTINO (1937), 157 L. T. 70.

433a. —— ——.]—Pltfs., as owners of the barge H., brought an action in the Mayor's & City of London Ct. against the owners of the barge V. in respect of damage sustained by the H. in Milton Creek, River Swale, through coming in contact with the V.'s anchor, which was admittedly being carried in an improper position, with the stock projecting over the bows, in breach of one of the Milton Creek bye-laws. But for the position of the anchor, the use of fenders would have avoided damage to either vessel. The judge held that the master of the H. knew of the position of the anchor & took the risk of coming in contact with the V. when the rush of the flood tide swung the H., which was aground, athwart the creek & into contact with the V. lying moored on the opposite bank. He found that the master of the H. was negligent in not taking measures to avoid coming in contact with the V., &, on the authority of The Monte Rosa, No. 6430, which he thought was in conflict with The Dunstanborough, No. 6429, gave judgment for defts. 6453a. Collision with vessel at anchor.]—Pltfs.' vessel C. at anchor in London Reach, River Thames, was run into by defts.' vessel E. proceeding up the river. The C. had her anchor lights exhibited, but she was lying nearly athwart the river with her whole length to the north of mid-channel in such a position that she was obstructing a large part of the fairway. The practice in Long Reach, according to the evidence, was for vessels to anchor to the south of mid-channel, & for large vessels proceeding up & down to pass to the northward. Defts.' case was that the C.'s lights were defective, & that those on the E. only saw the dim forward anchor light, & immediately afterwards the hull, of the C. about 650 feet away. The ct. found, however, that the lights were effective & that they were, or should have been, seen at a considerably greater distance than 650 feet ; but that the failure of those in charge of the E. to identify the lights as anchor lights in time to avoid the collision was partly due to the C.'s improper & unexpected position in the river in a locality where bright lights on the north shore would probably make it more difficult to pick up her lights, & partly to the fact that those on the E., which had a speed of at least 10 knots, were not sufficiently alert as to the possibility of danger ahead :—Held : (1) the E. was to blame, inasmuch as those in charge of her on seeing the lights should have realised the possibility that they were those of a ship or ships ahead the precise position of which was obscure, & should have reduced the speed of the E. immediately ; (2) the C.'s negligence in anchoring in an improper position contributed to the failure

6455b. —— ——.]—This was a claim by the owners of the motor barge C., which was towing their dumb barge F. up-river in the Thames, against the owners of the steamship R. for damage suffered by the F. in a collision with the R. which occurred on the night of Apr. 4, 1935, opposite the Royal Albert Dock, which the R. was waiting to enter. Pltfs. contended that as the C. was proceeding up-river with three barges in tow laden with cement, the R. which was waiting to enter the Royal Albert Dock but which was moving slowly down river & was angled across it, struck the F., the port hand barge in tow of the C., doing her so much damage that she had to be beached to avoid sinking in deep water. Defts. denied liability & said that the R. was not moving; she was stemming the tide & not altering her heading; they contended that the C. was alone to blame for the collision in that, instead of passing the R. on the starboard side, the C. tried to pass ahead of the R. from starboard to port, & although the starboard engine of the R. was immediately put full speed astern, the C. having got her craft across the tide was unable to regain control of the barges, with the result that the F. fell across the stem of the R. At a later stage in the hearing & after the conclusion of the evidence, defts. applied for leave to amend the defence by alleging that the C. failed to give any sound signal of her intention to alter course so as to pass the R. port to port. The amendment was allowed:—Held: in a reserved judgment, the governing fact of the collision was that the R. was moving down river & trailing across to the northward while her head was falling off to port; she was swinging from time to time & straddling across the water. The R. was to blame for bad look-out, for going across into the northern water when she ought to have been held steady in the channel if she were going to remain there at all, & for not taking timely steps to assist the C., which, owing to the action of the R., had to go closer to the north shore than she originally intended; further, the C. was also to blame for not letting the R. know by sound signal what she was doing & for substantially contributing to the collision thereby. The blame was apportioned as to two-thirds on the R., & as to one-third on the C., the judge directing that the costs of the action should follow the event in the same proportion.—THE ROTORUA (1936), 155 L. 6628a. —— Detention due to collision—Owner unable to use ship owing to contract during period of detention.]—On Mar. 12, 1927, resps.' steamship suffered damage by a collision with applts.' steamship, for which the applts. admitted liability. The damage did not render resps.' vessel unseaworthy, & she continued trading without effecting repairs. While she was so trading her owners by a memorandum of agreement dated Dec. 21, 1927, contracted to sell her. The agreement set forth that the vessel was "due London on Dec. 24, thence H. & A., expected ready for delivery between, say, Jan. 10 & Jan. 31, & to be delivered to buyer at Antwerp or a U.K. port at seller's option, but not later than Feb. 25, 1928, subject to buyer's approval afloat & to bottom examination in dry dock, as specified in Clauses 4 & 5 of this contract . . . 4. The buyer shall commence the inspection of the steamer afloat within twenty-four hours of receiving notice of steamer's readiness for inspection, & if on superficial inspection the buyer is satisfied with the general condition of the steamer, seller shall at his own risk & expense open up the engines, boilers & tanks for the inspection of the steamer afloat by the buyer. . . . The buyer shall declare acceptance or refusal of the steamer in writing within twenty-four hours after completion of such inspection afloat . . . 5. For examination of bottom &/or other water parts &/or tailend shaft, seller agrees to put the vessel into dry dock. . . ." The steamship arrived at Antwerp on Jan. 10, 1928, & her owners gave notice to the buyer of her readiness. On Jan. 16 they proceeded to open up the vessel's engines, boilers & tanks for inspection, & while the vessel was in that condition & therefore unable to trade, they took the opportunity to effect the repair of the collision damage, which was of such a nature that it could be repaired while the ship was afloat. The repairs admittedly occupied four days, & were completed on Jan. 24. Subsequently the vessel was put into dry dock for bottom examination. On the reference to assess the damage caused by the collision resps. claimed (inter alia) loss & expenses in respect of four days' detention while their ship was undergoing repairs:—Held: inasmuch as resp. shipowners had entered into contractual obligations which prevented them from trading with the vessel & earning profits during the time when the repair of the collision damage was being executed, they had not suffered any loss by the detention of their vessel in consequence of the collision, & were therefore not entitled to recover from the wrongdoer.—THE YORK, [1929] P. 178; 98 L. 6653a. —— —— ——.]—A British battleship damaged by collision was put into a naval dry dock for her repairs. The ship's effective life was estimated at twenty years & she was under four years old at the time of the collision. In assessing the damages the registrar allowed nothing in respect of the use of dock & cranes, on the ground that the Admiralty had suffered no pecuniary expenses or loss, & in respect of the loss of use of the ship for fifteen days, the time estimated for the collision repairs, he allowed interest at 2½ per cent., on half the initial costs of the ship for the fifteen days. The Admiralty appealed:—Held: that the case must go back to the registrar for re-assessment, for (i) the ship occupied the dock & used the cranes, etc., to the exclusion of other vessels & some allowance, therefore, must be made to the Admiralty in respect of these items, & (ii) having regard to the estimated life of the ship, her annual depreciation & cost of maintenance, the amount awarded for detention appeared to have been computed on a wrong basis.—THE WEST WALES, [1932] P. 165; 101 L. 6671a. —— Although ship sold.]—Pltfs.' & defts.' vessels, while laid up, ranged against each other & each sustained slight damage. Before any action was brought both vessels were surveyed, but no estimate of the cost of repairs was made. Pltfs.' vessel was then sold to be broken up. Defts. afterwards agreed with pltfs. that the repairs, if executed, would cost £250, but no repairs were in fact done. Defts. contended that pltfs. had suffered no loss & were not entitled to any damages:—Held: (1) the mere facts that the vessel had been sold to shipbreakers, & that the repairs would never be carried out, did not discharge the onus, which was on defts., of proving that pltfs. had suffered no damage; (2) primâ facie the value of a vessel damaged in collision is less, by the cost of the repairs, than her value if undamaged, & the fact that a vessel has been sold to be broken up is an accidental circumstance not to be taken into account in the way of diminution of damages.—THE LONDON CORPORATION, [1935] P. 70; 104 L. 6694a. —— —— On special contract.]—While the dredger L. was lying moored alongside the breakwater at Patras Harbour in the Hellenic Republic the steamship E. fouled the dredger's moorings & carried her out to sea, where she sank & was lost. The owners of the E. admitted sole liability for the loss. In proceedings before the Admiralty Registrar & a Merchant between the owners of the L. & the owners of the E. to assess the damages it appeared that the L. had been bought in 1927 for £4,000 by her owners, who had spent a further £2,000 in bringing her to Patras. They were a syndicate of civil engineers. Under a contract with the Patras Harbour Comrs. they were engaged in constructive work in the harbour, for which a dredger was necessary & for which they were using the L. The contract provided for completion of the work within a specified time. Delay in completion involved payment of heavy penalties &, if prolonged, cancellation of the contract. The owners of the L. had staked their capital & credit on the successful result of the contract. The loss of the L. stopped the work &, being unable from want of funds to purchase any suitable dredger which was for sale, on May 4, 1929, they hired a dredger, the A., which was lying in harbour at Carlo Forte, Sardinia, to take the place of the L. The A. was more expensive in working than the L., & required the attendance of a tug & two hopper barges. The L. was sunk on Nov. 26, 1928. The A. got to work on the harbour on June 17, 1929. On June 30, 1930, Harbour Comrs. bought the A. from her Italian owners for £9,177, & on Sept. 5, 1930, they resold her to the owners of the L. for the same sum payable in instalments: —Held : the measure of damages was the value of the L. to her owners as a profit-earning dredger at the time & place of her loss; & that it should include :—

(1) A capital sum made up of (a) the market price on Nov. 26, 1928, of a dredger comparable to the L.; (b) the cost of adapting the new dredger & of transporting & insuring her from her moorings to Patras; & (c) compensation for disturbance & loss suffered by the owners of the L. in carrying out their contract during the period between Nov. 26, 1928, & the date on which the substituted dredger could reasonably have been available for use at Patras, including in that loss such items as overhead charges & expenses of staff & equipment & the like thrown away, but neglecting any special loss or extra expense due to the financial position of one or other of the parties.

(2) Interest upon that capital sum from Nov. 26, 1928.

11 i. —— No market for such ... of ship.]—On Aug. 14, 1926, a hopper digger barge belonging to the ... of the Clyde Navigation was sunk in collision with the s.s. Ronda, admitted that those in charge of her were solely to blame for the accident. In an action at the instance of the trustees, brought on Jan. 24, 1928, to assess & recover damages for (inter alia), the loss of the barge, it was proved that there was no market for such a vessel, so that the test of market value was not available. aid doing. At that time the *T. Pltfs. claimed salvage. Defts. denied that any salvage services were rendered, as the N. was under a statutory duty to go to the assistance of the *T. The value of the N., her cargo & freight, was alleged to be over £225,000; the value of the T. B. was agreed at £10,000:—Held: each separate item of the proceedings could not be isolated & regarded by itself & the whole of the circumstances must be taken into account; without quantifying the moral support given to defts. by the knowledge that the N. was coming to their assistance, pltfs. rendered a very definite salvage service, in the course of which the N. sustained considerable damage, in giving information that the T. B. would find clear water within twelve miles by steering E.; & the proper award was the sum of £2,000, of which, having regard to the damage, £1,500 would go to the owners of the N., £200 to the master & £300 to the crew.—THE TOWER BRIDGE, [1936] P. 30; 105 L. 7621a. —— —— No open market for ships—Restrictions on exchange.]—The E., a German ship, was salved & towed into Dover Harbour, & the salvors alleged that her sound value at the time the services ended was £45,000. This figure was arrived at by taking the sum of 550,000 marks which was the price at which the ship was subsequently sold, & converting it into sterling at the rate of 12·2 marks to the £. There was no reliable standard upon which such conversion into sterling could be made, & the usual method of assessing the value of a salved ship based upon sales of similar vessels, was not available, as the shortage in Germany of foreign exchange prevented such sales. Evidence having been given that the cost of building a similar ship in Germany would be approximately three times the sum of 550,000 marks for which the salved ship had been sold :—Held : the salved value of the ship was one-third of the cost in sterling of building a new & similar ship in England less the cost of repairs.—LADY DUNCANNON OWNERS v. EISENACH OWNERS, SIMSON & GOLIATH OWNERS v. EISENACH OWNERS, [1936] 1 All E. In an action by the owners of the former, the owners of the latter pleaded (inter alia), that their vessel was at the time in charge of a Dutch pilot by compulsion of law, & that the negligence, if any, was solely that of the pilot. The ct. found that the collision was due to the negligent navigation of the Dutch vessel, &, after evidence had been given as to the Dutch law on the question of compulsory pilotage :—Held : though the employment of the pilot was compulsory, the pilot acted as the adviser of the master who remained in charge, &, therefore, the owners of the Dutch vessel were liable for the damages sustained by the owners of the British vessel.—THE PRINS HENDRIK, [1899] P. 177 ; 68 L. 8083a. —— Company managing barge under verbal agreement with lightermen.]—For the purposes of certain constructional work pltfs. supplied defts. with barges for the removal of soil. By the negligence of a bargee damage was done to a coffer dam, part of defts.' works, & in previous proceedings, pltfs. were held to be liable. The present action was brought under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503, to limit their liability to £8 for each ton of the ship's tonnage. Pltfs. had in 1916 formed a subsidiary co., Cory Lighterage, Ltd. & all lighters were transferred to the new co. & the men employed on them became employees of the subsidiary co. From 1917 the management of the subsidiary co. was carried on by the principal co. & in 1927 a notice was sent out that trading in the name of the subsidiary co. was to cease. The co. itself, however, continued to exist, & although all agreements with third parties were made with the principal co., all profits were credited to the subsidiary co. & all expenses, wages & the like were debited against it. There was not at any time any document in writing transferring the property or any rights therein from the subsidiary co. to the principal co. In these circumstances the question arose whether pltfs. were the "owners" or the charterers by demise of the barge within Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503, as amended by Merchant Shipping (Liability of Shipowners & Others) Act, 1900 (c. 32), s. 1, Merchant Shipping Act 1906 (c. 48), s. 71, & Merchant Shipping Act, 1921 (c. 28), s. 1 (2) :—Held : pltfs. were neither the owners nor the charterers by demise of the barge & were not entitled to limit their liability under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503.—Cory (William) & Son, Ltd. v. Dorman, Long & Co., Ltd., [1936] 2 All E. 1 i. — Reconstruction of collision—One party absent.]—E., the master of a steam ferry which had been involved in a collision with a coastal steamer, was summoned to appear before a Ct. of Marine Inquiry appointed to investigate the circumstances of the collision. After evidence had been entered upon, the ct. attended a reconstruction of manœuvres of vessels concerned in the collision. The reconstruction took place in E.'s absence, & without his knowledge. E. became aware of what had taken place before termination of proceedings before the Ct. of Marine Inquiry, but there was no evidence that he had communicated with his legal advisers in regard thereto. The ct. found that the collision was due to the negligent navigation of E., & indicated that he would be called upon to show cause why his certificate should not be dealt with. E. thereupon obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition to restrain further proceedings :—Held : the rule nisi must be made absolute on the grounds : (1) the reconstruction & the order of the ct. subsequent thereto involved a denial of natural justice to E. ; (2) the reconstruction, not being a mere view, amounted to evidence adduced otherwise than in open ct. ; it was not open to appct. to waive his rights as the inquiry was one in which the public was interested.—Re Court of Marine Inquiry, Ex p. Evans (1935), 52 N. The mtgee. appeared & claimed that his mtge. should be preferred to the claim of materialmen:—Held: though by English law a maritime lien created by a foreign law, under circumstances which do not give rise to a maritime lien according to English law, is recognised; the priority which it will be given in the distribution of proceeds is treated as relating only to the remedy determined by the law of the forum at which the vessel is libelled & sold, the mtge. should be preferred to the claims of the materialman.—MARQUIS v. THE ASTORIA, [1931] EX. 8618a. Lighter sinking after being moved—Onus of proof.]—While pltfs.' lighter W. was loading cargo from defts.' steamship in the Royal Albert Docks defts.' servants moved the W. to another position, & she was left for the night moored alongside the quay & a little inside the stem & port bow of the steamship. On the following morning the W. was found sunk through water having entered her hull from an unknown cause. Pltfs. failed to establish any positive evidence of negligence, but they alleged that the fact that defts. had moved & remoored the W., & that she sank, raised a primâ facie case of negligence which defts. could only discharge by proof that the W. sank from a cause which they could not have avoided by the exercise of reasonable care:—Held: defts. were not insurers of the W.'s safety; they had no greater duty than to exercise reasonable care & skill in the handling & management of her; & having shown such care & skill they had discharged the burden upon them; further, assuming that the sinking of the W. afforded primâ facie evidence of negligence, defts.' suggestion that the leakage which caused her to sink was due to her condition as an old wooden barge was a reasonable suggestion; having shown a reasonable way consistent with the accident having happened without their negligence, they had shifted the burden of proof back to pltfs. to establish that it was the negligence of defts. which caused the W. to sink; & that accordingly the claim failed.—THE MULBERA, [1937] P. 82; 106 L. 8629a. —— —— No duty to disclose condition of berth.]—Pltfs.' steamship was damaged by lying in an uneven berth at a wharf owned by defts., a railway co. Defts.' harbour master at the wharf acted as ship's agent for pltfs. for the limited purposes of reporting the ship at the Custom House, paying the pilot, & providing the master with funds to pay the labourers discharging the cargo. Before pltfs. arranged to send the vessel to the wharf the harbour master had in writing informed them that the berths were "perfectly safe for steamers to lie aground." Defts. alleged that the vessel came to the wharf subject to printed conditions, known to the harbour master, whereby the railway co. did not represent, warrant or guarantee that the berths alongside the wharf were safe or suitable for the accommodation of vessels, & all vessels brought alongside remained at the sole risk of their owners & on the terms that the co. should "in no event whatever be liable for any damage . . . however caused to or suffered by any such vessel." The harbour master did not in fact know that the berth was defective:—Held: (1) even if the harbour master ought to have known of the defective condition of the berth, which was doubtful, it was not his duty to impart to pltfs. information, acquired as harbour master, which would be against the interests of defts. & of the harbour master to disclose; (2) the notice did not form part of the contract between pltfs. & defts., & afforded defts. no defence; & accordingly pltfs. were entitled to judgment.—THE HAYLE, [1929] P. 275; 99 L. 8632a. —— —— Whether loss recoverable from Harbour Board under Maritime Conventions Act, 1911 (c. 57), s. 1.]—Pltfs., the owners of the K. O., sued defts. the owners of the R., for damages arising out of a collision between the K. O. & the R. near the entrance to the Princes Half Tide Dock in the River Mersey. The owners of the R. pleaded that the R. had been ordered to leave the dock as & when she did by the officials of the Mersey Docks & Harbour Board. Pltfs. thereupon added the Dock Board as defts. The K. O. was lying at Princes landing stage, River Mersey; the R. was in the Princes Half Tide Dock, which is a little lower down the river than the landing stage. BUCKNILL, J., found on the facts that the K. O. left the stage before the R. was directed by the harbour-master to come ahead into the entrance, & absolved the K. O. from blame, but held both the R. & the Dock Board to blame on the ground that the employees of the Dock Board were co-operating with the master of the R. in bringing the R. out of dock into the river & did so at a time when, if either of defts. had had a better look-out, they would have seen that the K. O. had started away from the stage. He accordingly gave judgment for the K. O. against both defts. & dismissed the counterclaim of the R. against the Dock Board on the ground that the common law rule as to contributory negligence, & not the maritime rule of division of loss, applied. On appeal:—Held: (1) the K. O. was to blame for a bad look-out & for leaving the stage as & when she did, which (per SCOTT, L.J.) was at or about the same time as the R. began to come ahead through the entrance; the R. was also to blame because, after the direction to come ahead had been given, if she had been keeping a good look-out she would have seen the approaching K. O. & ought to have stopped her way & remained in the entrance; & the proportion should be two-thirds to the K. O. & one-third to the R.; (2) (per SLESSER & SCOTT, L.JJ.) that the directions of the dock-master were orders within the meaning of sect. 49; but (3) (per GREER & SCOTT, L.JJ., SLESSER, L.J., dubitante) the employees of the Dock Board at the time the direction

was given were not negligent; (4) if, however, there was any negligence on the part of the Dock Board (per CUR.) the rule as to division of loss provided for in the Maritime Conventions Act, while applicable as between the K. O. & the R., did not apply to the Dock Board, & that, both the K. O. & the R. being negligent, on the application of the common law rule, the Dock Board would be entitled to judgment.

Per SCOTT, L.J.: the ordinary rule unless there is reason to depart from it, should be that costs should be divided in the same proportion as the liability.—THE ROCKABILL, [1937] P. 93; 106 L. J. 8683a. —— Responsibility of owners—Custom of port—Grimsby.]—Pltfs.' steam trawler, having sustained injury which necessitated repairs, was placed in a graving dock at Grimsby belonging to the London & North Eastern Ry. Co. for the purpose of being repaired by defts. (a local firm of ship-repairers) under a contract, by the terms of which the first dock dues were payable by pltfs. & subsequent dues by defts. In carrying out the repairs defts. removed certain of the trawler's bow plates, exposing the vessel to the necessity, when in the normal course of business the dock was refilled with water, of floating on her forward watertight bulkhead. Unknown to all the parties the said bulkhead had in its face three small rivet holes, & through these holes the dock water entered the trawler & caused her to sink & suffer damage. There was on board her at the time only a watchman employed by her owners, pltfs. Pltfs. claimed damages on the ground that it was an implied term of the contract that the repairers should safely keep the trawler during the execution of the repairs:—Held: defts. were entitled to judgment, for in the circumstances of the case there was no surrender of the trawler to the repairers for the purpose of the repairs, such as would have put upon them a special duty to take care, &, moreover, as regards trawlers in the public dock in question there existed a local custom that some one acting on the owners' behalf should inspect an exposed bulkhead & if necessary keep watch over the ship during the repairs.—THE REHEARO, [1933] P. 286; 102 L. J. P. 108; 149 L. T. 570; 49 T. L. R. 559; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 422.

8684a. Failure to light wreck—Limitation of action.]—Defts.' sailing barge sank & became an obstruction to navigation in the channel of the River Orwell within the limits of the Port of Ipswich, of which pltfs. were the port & harbour authority. Defts. wrote to pltfs. saying that they presumed pltfs. would take steps to raise the barge & that they (defts.) would pay the reasonable expenses. Pltfs. replied that they hoped to raise the wreck of the barge on the next spring tides, & they did so & moved the barge nearer to the shore. They negligently omitted, however, to put a light on the barge, & she was run into by a passing vessel, dragged further into the channel again, & damaged. Defts. refused to pay the expenses of raising the barge a second time &, more than six months afterwards, counterclaimed in respect of the damage the barge had received. Pltfs. alleged that in raising the barge they were acting in the exercise of their statutory duty under sect. 56 of Harbours, Docks & Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), &/or other public duties as the authority responsible for the conservation of the navigation of the river, & that the counterclaim, not having been brought within six months of the act complained of, was barred under sect. 1 of Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61):—Held: pltfs. were under no obligation to raise the barge, which they could have blown up or got some one else to raise; they raised her in pursuance of a contract made between the parties; the negligent act complained of was not done in the direct execution of any statutory or public duty; & the provisions of sect. 1 of Public Authorities Protection Act did not apply.—THE RONALD WEST, [1937] P. 212; 53 T. 8685 iii. ——.]—In an action of damages brought by a shipowner against harbour trustees for injuries sustained by his ship through being given a foul berth in their harbour, it was established that the berth in question was in a tidal river; that débris discharged into the berth from a sewer formed a mound on the bottom of the berth which was a danger to ships taking the ground at the ebb of the tide; that when dredging the berth defenders, in view of this tendency, made it their practice to dredge at the locus of the mound to a greater depth than at other parts of the berth, but that no regular system of examination existed; that the berth had in fact been dredged some three weeks before the ship arrived, but that no special precaution had been taken to ascertain its condition before assigning her to it:—Held: defenders had failed to establish that they had taken reasonable care to make sure that the berth should be in a safe condition for vessels using it; & accordingly, as the ship had been injured owing to the condition of the berth, defenders were liable for the damage occasioned by their negligence.—CORMACK (OWNER OF THE S.S. 8693a. Breach of covenant to maintain berth—Measure of damages.]—A corpn. which owned the bed of a river & the quays & berths alongside, leased one of the quays to a co. & undertook to keep (inter alia) the quay & river berths in good order & condition. While lying aground at the quay to which she had come to discharge a cargo for the co. pltfs.' vessel received damage owing to the defective state of the berth; &, in an action against the corpn. as first defts. & the co. as second defts., recovered judgment against both on the following grounds: (a) that the corpn.'s harbour-master knew that the ground alongside the quay was not safe & had taken no steps to put it right, & (b) that the co. were liable, because, although they did not know of the actual hard ridge which caused the damage, they knew that the berth was in a generally defective state, & took no steps to assure themselves that some repairs, which the corpn. had carried out, were satisfactory or to warn pltfs.' master that they had not done so. In a third party claim by the co. against the corpn. for an indemnity in respect of the damages & costs for which they had been rendered liable:—Held: the fact that the co. had not fulfilled their duty to pltfs. involved no breach of duty to the corpn.; the co. were entitled to rely on the covenant by the corpn. to keep the berth in good order; the resulting damage to the vessel for which the co. were liable flowed naturally from the breach of covenant; accordingly the damages were not too remote; & the indemnity claimed would include the solr. & client costs incurred by the co. in defending the action.—THE KATE, [1935] P. 100; 104 L. J. P. 36; 154 L. T. 432: 51 T. L. R. 410; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 562.

8697a. Damage "in connection with" towage—What amounts to.]—Pltfs.' steamship with two tugs in the employ of defts., the Port of London Authority, fast to her, was proceeding from the Albert Dock to the Victoria Dock. Defts.' lock foreman had signalled to her to enter the narrow Cutting, some 300 feet long, between the two docks, but at about the same time he had signalled to another tug that she could enter the Cutting from the opposite end. In order to avoid collision with that tug the steamship put her engines astern, with the result that she got out of position & struck the walls of the Cutting, doing herself damage. Defts. relied on the terms of the towage contract, which contained a clause that the owners of the ship being towed or transported would "indemnify & hold harmless the Port Authority" against claims in respect of damage of any kind "arising in the course of & in connection with the towage or transport," & whether caused or contributed to by any negligence on the part of the Port Authority's servants:—Held: (1) the clause was not an indemnity against party & party claims, but only against third party claims; (2) the damage did not arise "in connection with" the towage or transport; & accordingly the shipowners were entitled to recover the amount of the damage caused by the negligence of defts.' servant.—THE CARLTON, [1931] P. 186; 100 L. 8715a. —— ——.]—Pltf., a lighterman, was in charge of a barge, which was being taken from a dock through a lock. The dock & lock were both the property of defts. While pltf. was navigating the barge under the orders & directions of defts., a rope attached to the barge broke & struck pltf., causing him personal injuries. Pltf. had no option to refuse to take the rope on board. Defts. relied on the terms of a notice, exhibited on the pierhead of the lock, to the effect that lightermen availing themselves of the facilities & assistance of defts.' servants must do so at their own risk, & upon the understanding that no liability whatsoever should attach to defts. or their servants for any injury from whatever cause arising to or by the craft or to or by any person on board thereof:—Held: the words of the above notice were primâ facie adequate to exempt defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, & the fact that pltf. was compelled to regulate the barge according to the directions of the dockmaster was in no way inconsistent with the fact that he was in the circumstances "availing himself of the facilities & assistance" of defts., & did not deprive defts. of the exemption afforded by the notice.—WICKETT v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1929] 1 K. The society certified that the yacht had been reported to be in a good & efficient state & that she had been classed as A1. In fitting out the yacht for sea pltf. found that the mainmast was rotten in places & wholly unfit for use, & he claimed damages from deft. for negligence & breach of duty :—Held : there was no privity of contract between pltf. & deft., & that independently of contract deft. owed to pltf. no duty of care or skill with regard to the survey, & therefore the action failed.—HUMPHERY v. BOWERS (1929), 45 T. 8755a. —— —— ——.]—The C. M. was requisitioned on behalf of the Crown in 1917 by a charterparty, which provided that the Crown should not be liable for marine risks, but should be liable for "all consequences of hostilities or warlike operations." Whilst so requisitioned, the C. M. sailed from New York in convoy, destined for Nantes, then a war base, but also an ordinary commercial port, with a cargo, 84 per cent. of which in weight was for the civil commissariat, & 16 per cent. in weight was for war purposes. She was the third ship in the second column from the port hand in the convoy, another vessel, the W. F., which admittedly was at all material times engaged upon & carrying out a warlike operation, being in the corresponding position on the port column. While the convoy was proceeding at night without lights the steering-gear of the C. M. suddenly broke down, she sheered seven points off her course & came across the bows of the W. F., by which she was struck & sunk. There was no negligence on the part of those on board the C. M. :—Held : (1) the arbitrator was entitled to find that the C. M. was at no material time engaged, upon or carrying out a warlike operation, notwithstanding a portion of her cargo consisted of war material ; (2) the loss of the C. M. was not the consequence of a warlike operation, inasmuch as the dominant & direct cause of the loss was the break-down of her steering-gear & her sheering off her course.—CLAN LINE STEAMERS, LTD. v. BOARD OF TRADE, THE CLAN MATHESON, [1929] A. 8746 i. Amount of compensation—Interest.]—The Crown, in Apr. 1918, pursuant to Order in Council passed under War Measures Act, 1914, requisitioned resps.' ship. The Exchequer Ct. of Canada fixed the compensation at $11,000 with interest thereon from date of requisition to date of judgment. The Crown appealed against the allowance of interest :—Held : the allowance for interest should be set aside. The right to interest does not depend on the income earning capacity of the property requisitioned. Where interest is allowed, it is on the ground of express or implied contract or by virtue of a statute ; & no such ground existed here. Interest was really asked for here as damages for detention of the compensation money pending the ascertainment of what was due ; & as such it could not be recovered.—R. v. MACKAY, [1930] S. C. The vessel was loaded with steam coal at Cardiff & dispatched with it to Malta. The coal was not discharged at Malta, but petrol & other stores were put on board & the naval authorities sent the vessel to Tenedos & used her there as a submarine tender. After about four months at Tenedos the cargo took fire by spontaneous combustion, & the vessel was damaged & had to be sent back to Malta:—Held: the risk was a consequence of hostilities or warlike operations as the vessel had become part of a combatant fleet, & the cesser clause had no application to a case where the suspension of working was due to injury which was the result of compulsory orders.—HINDUSTAN S.S. sa. Agreement to quit before expiry of lease—Subsequent demand for renewal—Small Landholders (Scotland) Act, 1911, s. 32.]—A statutory small tenant, under a lease terminating at Whit Sunday, 1929, entered into an agreement with his landlord to quit the holding at Martinmas 1926, the landlord undertaking to buy the straw produced at the threshing of that year's crop, & to pay certain compensations. On the faith of the agreement the landlord advertised the farm for sale with entry at Martinmas 1926, & the farm was sold. The tenant, who knew of these proceedings, refused to remove when the term arrived, & some days later took up the position that he was entitled to a renewal of his lease under above sect. 8a. Jurisdiction of Benchers.]—Held : pltf. was entitled to have his name restored to the rolls. The benchers' order striking it off was null & void. Under the Legal Profession Act, R. S. A., 1922, such an order could be made only after investigation & recommendation by the discipline committee, which never took place. The fact that the official discipline committee comprised all the benchers who eventually received & adopted the recommendation of the special committee, could not, even apart from the fact that those benchers adopting it had made no investigation of their own, overcome the statutory requirement of the acting by the discipline committee as a distinctive body.—HARRIS v. LAW SOCIETY OF ALBERTA, [1936] S. Appct. applied for admission as a candidate attorney & the application was opposed by the Law Society :—Held : granting the application, by entering into the articles prior to the repeal of r. 53 appct. had acquired a right which was preserved to him by sect. 13 of Act 5, 1910.—Ex p. DE SOUZA (1930), 51 N. An articled clerk, whose articles contained such special provisions & whose required term of service was four years, was absent from service during the fourth year for 114 days owing to illness. Under the special provisions in the articles he served for an additional period of thirty days, which ended on Apr. 16. He continued to serve the master, & on June 27 entered into supplementary articles for a further period of eighty-four days :—Held : the clerk's service did not comply with the requirements as to service under articles, & a special order that his service had been sufficient should be refused.—Ex p. AHERN, [1931] V. 179 i. When application granted—Solicitor called to the Bar—Appointed to judicial office—Office abolished.]—A solr., admitted in 1894, was struck off the roll at his own request in 1900 in order to be called to the Irish Bar. He was called to the Bar in the latter year. In 1918 he became a judge of the Chancery Div. of the then High Ct. in Ireland, & later in the same year a Lord Justice of the then Ct. of Appeal in Ireland. He held the latter office until 1924, when, following the change of government in Ireland, the office was abolished. Subsequently he was called to the English Bar, but, owing to illness, was compelled to abandon his practice. He was then disbarred both in Ireland & in England at his own request, with a view to his being readmitted a solr. in the Irish Free State. He now applied to be so re-admitted. The Incorporated Law Society did not oppose the application : —Held : the application be granted having regard to the special circumstances of the case, viz., that appct. did not retire from his judicial office voluntary, but owing to its abolition; that as a solr. he would not be an officer of, or practise in, any ct. in which he sat as a judge; that upwards of five years had elapsed since he had ceased to hold judicial office, & during the greater part of that time he had lived out of Ireland; & that the reason for the application was the state of his health, which required active occupation, this motive displacing the idea of any improper or corrupt consideration behind the application. 449a. —— ——.]—Deft. had embarked upon a variety of investments & transactions which were likely to result in serious losses. She retained pltfs. generally to prosecute all such actions & proceedings as might be necessary to get her out of her difficulties. Having successfully prosecuted several matters pltfs. delivered a bill of costs. Deft., while offering to meet all disbursements in arbn. proceedings which were then being prosecuted on her behalf, intimated that she could not pay anything further. Pltfs. then discharged themselves from their retainer & delivered a second bill & brought this action upon both bills :—Held : this was not a case of a solr. retained to prosecute an action & no question of entire contract arose. The retainer here was one to prosecute a variety of matters & in such a case it was not reasonable that a solr. should engage himself for an indefinite time without payment. On summons for directions issued by pltf., counsel for the solrs. moved the learned judge to order that the Official Solr. should leave the control of the defence in the hands of the said solrs., & that they should remain on the record, & that the notice of change of solrs. should be removed from the file. The learned judge accordingly varied in this sense his original order appointing the Official Solr. to represent deceased deft. The Official Solr. appealed :—Held : as the Official Solr. had the same right as any other litigant to choose who should be his solr., & was entitled to act for himself, he was entitled to control the defence of himself as representative of deceased deft. & the change of solr. on the record was properly made, & the learned judge had no jurisdiction to make the variation complained of.—WATTS v. OFFICIAL SOLICITOR, [1936] 1 All E. The ct. will allow a client to institute proceedings against a solr. within a reasonable number of years after the connection of solr. & client has ceased. A solr. took an assignment of some leasehold property from his client in 1810 ; their connection determined a few months afterwards. In 1828, the client filed a bill against the solr., insisting that the assignment was intended to be a mtge., & not a sale. The bill was dismissed by the Master of the Rolls in 1830 ; a petition of appeal was presented in 1840. Pltfs. retained deft. as their solr. (inter alia) to arrange for the transfer of the registration of the New Atlantic Club. Deft. sent the necessary documents to the justices' clerk who refused the registration on the ground that the Danesbury Club was on the register as of that address, but the papers were left at the clerk's office. It was found as a fact that deft. never notified pltfs. of this refusal, & the New Atlantic Club moved into their new premises. The police raided the club & pltfs. were prosecuted & fined for supplying drink at an unregistered club. In an action for damages for negligence, deft. denied negligence & contended that even if he was negligent the damage to pltfs. resulted not from his negligence, but from a decision of the magistrates which was wrong in law :—Held : deft. was negligent in not notifying pltfs. of the clerk's refusal to accept registration of the New Atlantic Club at their new premises ; notwithstanding that the clerk's duty was purely ministerial & that he could not decide whether the club should or should not be registered, the leaving of the registration papers was not sufficient to register the club, & the convictions were right ; in considering the damages recoverable no reduction should be made because the fines have been paid out of club funds.—ASHTON v. WAINWRIGHT, [1936] 1 All E. 1035a. Pltf.'s car was run into by a motor lorry, the collision being caused solely by the negligence of the lorry driver. A passenger in pltf.'s car was seriously injured, & issued a writ against the owners of the lorry & also, at their request, against pltf. The latter informed the insurance co., & left the matter in its hands, as he was bound to do under the policy. The co. sent the papers to its solrs., who entered an appearance to the writ & acted in the conduct of the defence. Neither the co. nor the solrs. ever at any time communicated with pltf. in any way & eventually the solrs. delivered a defence on behalf of pltf. admitting that the accident was caused solely by his negligence & write a letter to this effect to the solrs. opposing them. Having accidentally found out what was happening, pltf. protested to the local agent of the insurance co., to which agent the latter wrote. " If we had repudiated liability we ran a very serious risk of the ct. holding a different view." At the trial of the action, judgment was entered against pltf. for £1,124 12*s.* 10*d.*, damages & costs. The latter now claimed damages against the solrs. & the insurance co. for breach of duty, negligence & libel :—Held : (1) the question whether there was a breach of duty on the part of the insurance co. fell within the doctrine of Scott v. Avery & was a matter for arbn., the policy containing the usual clause making arbitration a condition precedent ; (2) the letter written by the insurance co. was not defamatory ; (3) the letter written by the solrs. was defamatory, the occasion on which it was written was privileged, but there was evidence of indirect motive ; (4) the solrs. were negligent ; (5) the damages for negligence were not nominal, as pltf. might have to pay an additional premium on future insurances. They must be taken at the figure assessed by the jury, £1,000 ; (6) pltf. was also entitled to recover the £1,124 awarded against him as damages in the previous action, but would hold the same as trustee for the insurance co. ; (7) deft. was entitled to a declaration that by reason of the negligence of the solrs. he was not liable to pay any part of their costs while acting for him in the action.—GROOM v. CROCKER, [1937] 3 All E. C., Ord. 65, r. 27, reg. 29 (a).]—(1) For the purpose of taxation of a solr.'s bill under Solicitors Act, 1932 (c. 37), the phrase "costs due to a solr." in sect. 65 (1), must be deemed, having regard to the definition of "costs" in sect. 81, to include "disbursements" due from the client to the solr., which means actual payments before delivery of the bill, & any sums claimed in the bill as disbursements, e.g., fees to counsel, which have not been paid before its delivery, must be disallowed. Solrs. Act, 1932 (c. 37), has not made any alteration in the law in this respect & R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27, reg. 29 (a), is still in force.

sb. Absence of agreement as to scale of commission—Effect.]—Where a solr. & client agree that the former's remuneration for collecting a claim shall be a commission, but they decide to leave the matter of the scale of the commission in abeyance, the solr., if he intends to exact payment according to the scale provided by Ord. 65, r. 27, reg. 29, should draw the client's attention to said rule & give the client to understand that, in the event of the scale of commission, not being otherwise agreed on, he will apply the rule in demanding payment. The failure to so inform the client was held to be good cause in the present case for depriving the solrs. of their costs.—CAMERON & CAMERON v. BOULTON, [1930] 3 W. W. R. 61; 4 D. L. R. 1021; 43 B. sc. "Fair & reasonable"—What is.]—In deciding whether a contract between a solr. & client is "fair & reasonable to the client," within sect. 73, Law Society Act, R. S. M., 1913, the word "fair" is to be taken as relating to the means by which the contract was brought about, & "reasonable" as relating to the quantum of remuneration therefrom resulting to the solr. In deciding whether the amount is reasonable the actual work which the solr. was called on to do is a factor but not the sole factor to be considered; & where the contract is one on the contingency & percentage basis, the mere fact that under the percentage agreed on the amount payable to the solr. in the event of success has turned out to be in excess of the costs taxable on the ordinary solr. & client basis is not ground for holding the contract unreasonable. The reasonableness of such excess must depend on the reality & extent of the risk the solr. undertook & the amount of work anticipated at the time he assumed his obligation.—GALBRAITH v. MURRAY, ROBERTSON & THOMAS, [1930] 3 W. W. R. 120; 4 D. L. R. 1005.—CAN.

The client was adequately warned that the senior's fees were special & such as would not be recoverable from the other party on a party & party taxation. The client was informed that the junior counsel's fees were ordinarily two-thirds of senior counsel fees, & agreed in writing to pay fees amounting to about half those of senior counsel. These fees, as agreed, were reduced by the taxing master:—Held: although the statement as to the proportion of junior counsel's fees to senior counsel's fees was not inaccurate, it was in the circumstances of the case incomplete, & might be misleading &, accordingly, that the client was not bound thereby.—SYMON v. HAY, [1934] S. The English Solrs. Act does not apply to attorneys practising in Bombay. There is no rule which makes it obligatory on an attorney to deliver a bill to the client, though in practice the Taxing Master will see that a client has a proper opportunity of considering the bill before taxation. The English rule that a solr. must be bound by a bill once delivered to a client does not apply to Bombay. C. require that in all actions for damages brought on behalf of an infant or person of unsound mind, the costs of pltf., both as between party & party & as between solr. & client, shall be taxed & certified by the Taxing Master, & no costs other than those so certified are payable to the solr. for pltf. These provisions apply equally whether damages are recovered by a verdict & judgment after trial or by an order staying proceedings upon the terms of a settlement out of ct. In either case there is a direction by the ct. that the costs of pltf., both as between party & party & as between solr. & client, are to be taxed, & it is the duty of the solrs. on both sides to see that the direction is complied with. The Rules & the direction are made for the protection of infants & persons of unsound mind, & are imperative. 3302a. —— Successful appeal against receiving order.]—A receiving order was made in a county ct., & upon appeal the Div. The solr., having taxed the costs at £41 5*s.* 7*d.*, & not being paid by the petitioning creditors, issued a writ of fi. fa. & the Sheriff of Middlesex levied execution. The execution was paid out, but the petitioning creditors obtained a garnishee order nisi on a judgment of the K. B. D. in respect of moneys due to them from the debtor. The solr. for the debtor thereupon applied to the ct. for a charging order for his costs :—Held : the question was one of discretion, & the ct. would exercise its discretion by directing that the solr. should have a charging order on the moneys in the hands of the sheriff & the costs of this application.—Re DEBTOR (No. 29 OF 1931), WILD v. PETITIONING CREDITORS & DEBTOR (1934), 103 L. For this purpose he employed English solrs., who in turn employed auctioneers. The co. went into liquidation, & a petition was presented by the liquidator craving that the law agent should be ordained to deliver to him the titles of certain heritable properties belonging to the co. The law agent maintained that he had a lien over the titles for his own account as law agent (which was admitted), & also for the accounts of the English solrs. & auctioneers, for which the English solrs. had intimated that they hold him personally liable : —Held : the lien of a law agent did not extend to accounts incurred on behalf of his client which he had not in fact paid & for which he was not personally liable ; accordingly, the law agent's claim to a lien in respect of the accounts of the English solrs. & auctioneers fell to be dismissed, in respect that there was no averment either that he had paid the accounts or that he was liable to pay them.

Act, 1932 (c. 37), s. 69, is discretionary on the part of the ct. & should not be made if the solr. has stood by while the fund sought to be charged has been dealt with under circumstances which render it unjust that the interest of other parties should be postponed to the lien of the solr. Solrs. for a petitioning wife in a matrimonial suit obtained an order for the costs payable by resp. husband without obtaining payment from him. Petitioner became a bkpt. & the solrs. proved in the bkpcy. as unsecured creditors of petitioner for the amount of the costs ; the solrs. subsequently applied for a charging order on the amount of a legacy bequeathed to the husband in respect of which the Official Receiver in the bkpcy. had already obtained a garnishee order :—Held : the discretion of the ct. to make the charging order should not be exercised (a) because the admission of the proof of the solrs., as unsecured creditors was inconsistent with the security which the charging order would afford ; (b) because the property involved in the legacy had not been recovered by the solrs., being still in the hands of the trustees of the will by which it was bequeathed ; & (c) because a charging order would create a new right of creditors in the bkpcy., which did not exist at the date of the bkpcy., contrary to Bkpcy. 3563a. —— ——.]—It was alleged that two of the solrs. in the main action had been guilty of misconduct, & application was made to the judge at the trial to order them to pay the costs personally. The judge directed that the matter should be brought before him on a later day. It was then contended that the judge had no jurisdiction, on the ground that, before judgment had been given, both solrs. had ceased to be solrs. on the record. Objection was also taken that the judge was not entitled to hear the application because no affidavits had been filed verifying the facts on which the application was based :—Held : (1) the ct.'s summary jurisdiction over a solr. does not cease merely because he ceases to be on the record ; (2) the summary jurisdiction has not been impaired by the Solrs. 4567a. —— Borrowing trust funds.]—Applt. was suspended from practice as a barrister & solr. of the Supreme Ct. of Fiji for professional misconduct. The case against applt. was twofold:—

(1) On Aug. 25, 1923, the trustees of the estate of one C., deceased, leased a portion of the trust estate to one H. for a period of ten years from May 1, 1923, with an option to purchase the freehold for £4,000. Applt. was H.'s solr. at the date of the lease & for some time prior to it. On Jan. 1, 1926, applt. became a partner with another solr., E., who acted for the C. trustees, applt. continuing to act for H., but when either was absent from Fiji the partner remaining attended to the affairs of all the firm's clients. The property leased to H. improved considerably in value, & in 1932 H. consulted applt. about the exercise of the option. On Nov. 2, 1932, H. exercised the option by a written notice to E. On Nov. 4, 1932, E. left Fiji & did not return till Dec. 23, 1932. The terms of the purchase were that of the purchase price £4,000, £1,350 were to be paid in cash, & the balance was to be secured by a mtge. at 6½ per cent. H., being unable to provide the necessary funds, agreed to sell the property to applt. on Nov. 8, 1932, in the terms of the sale to him by the C. trustees, & applt. agreed to employ H. as his commission agent for the sub-division & sale thereof. Applt., who had advanced moneys to H. on previous occasions, disclosed to E. that he was going to finance H. to the extent of £1,350, but he did not disclose to E., the extent to which he was interested in the transaction. On Mar. 15, 1933, the estate was conveeyed to H. by the C. trustees & H. executed the mtge. for the balance. The sum of £1,350 was paid by a cheque of applt. on his own account:—Held: the intention to exercise the option originated with H. & he solicited the assistance of applt. to enable him to carry out his intention. In those circumstances, though it is most desirable that a solr. acting for a client in any transaction should not have a personal interest in that transaction without making full disclosure, there was no duty to the C. trustees on the part of applt., since he had not instigated H. to exercise the option, to abstain from assisting his client H. to complete the purchase.

(2) The Public Trustee, as custodian trustee of the estate of one, V., appointed applt. managing trustee of that estate on Dec. 22, 1931. On Sept. 6, 1933, applt., as solr. for H., had sent a written notice to E. that the amount outstanding on the mtge. by H. to the C. trustees would be paid off on Dec. 15, 1933, & on that day applt. advanced to H. the amount necessary to obtain the transfer of the mtge., using the funds of the V. estate to repay himself the amount advanced. It was established that when applt. gave notice on Sept. 6, 1933, he intended so to use the V. trust funds, & it was admitted that applt. did not at any time disclose to the Public Trustee his interest in the transaction. On Dec. 18, 1933, the mtge. was transferred to applt. as managing trustee for the V. estate, the interest being 6½ per cent. per annum, the mtgor. to give 3 months prior notice in writing to repay the principal or any part of it. On Jan. 8, 1934, as managing trustee of the V. estate, applt. made an agreement with H. altering the terms of the mtge., agreeing that the beneficiaries for whom he was trustee should be paid only 5½ per cent. interest, & that the mtgor. could pay off at any time without prior notice to the mtgee.:—Held: in using the V. funds applt. was in fact lending trust money to himself & thereby committed a serious breach of trust. This in itself was not necessarily sufficient to constitute professional miscon-

4657a. —— From "findings"—No order made.]—A complaint was made on behalf of the Law Society to the disciplinary committee appointed under Solrs. Act, 1932 (c. 37), s. 4, asking that a solr. might be required to answer allegations contained in an affidavit. After hearing evidence the committee promulgated their "findings & order," setting out their findings of fact & ending with the words "while not finding any professional misconduct the committee make no order as to costs." The complainant, on behalf of the Law Society, appealed:—Held: on a preliminary objection by resp., no appeal lay except from an "order" of the committee. There was no appeal from the "findings" with which the order was required to be prefaced, & the committee had made no order. But even if the finding that there was no professional misconduct did amount (as the ct. held that it did not) to an order dismissing the complaint, the words of Solrs. Act, 1932 (c. 37), s. 8, giving a right of appeal to appct. were not so definite as to override the long-established principle that there could be no appeal against an acquittal. The right contemplated by the sect. must be limited to cases where an order, which appct. deemed inadequate, had been made against the solr.—Re A SOLICITOR, [1934] 2 K. B. 463; 152 L. T. 22; 50 T. The scheme was carried through by B., a party to the scheme, purporting to lend money to the co. & securing a debenture to himself for the loan. The "loan" was arranged by L., the director, obtaining from the co.'s bank, a bank cheque drawn on the co.'s account, which cheque was paid to the credit of B.'s account at another Bank. The amount of the cheque thus paid in, except a negligible sum, was immediately withdrawn by B. by cheque, & this cheque was paid to the credit of the co.'s account. A document purporting to be a transfer of the debenture from B. to L. was prepared in anticipation of the debenture being given, which furnished evidence that the practitioner knew that the money lent to the co. was not B.'s but L.'s money. 107a. —— Acceptance by agent of purchaser subject to ratification—Withdrawal by vendor before ratification.]—Pltf. was chairman of the board of management of a charity. Deft. wrote a letter to the board saying that he would sell certain property to the board for £6,500. At a full meeting of the board instructions were given to arrange for an inspection of the property by members of the board on a specified date. A deputation, consisting of pltf. & twelve other members of the board, viewed the property & had an interview with the deft. The price of £6,500 was again mentioned, & deft. was told that all the members of the board present had resolved to buy the property, & that they could carry the necessary resolution, & they purported to accept deft.'s offer subject to a formal meeting. The secretary of the charity stated that the deputation was not a quorum & could not act as a properly constituted board. On the next day deft. wrote to the secretary promising that the deeds of the property should be left to be inspected by the solr. to the charity, & that his own solr. would forward a form of contract; & the secretary thereupon sent out a notice to members of the board of a special meeting to be held two days later "to receive the report & recommendation of the deputation." On the day of that meeting deft. telegraphed to the secretary cancelling all negotiations. The meeting, however, passed resolutions to ratify the deputation's acceptance of deft.'s offer to sell for £6,500, & to instruct the solr. to the charity to require deft. to complete. In an action by pltf. on behalf of himself & of all other members of the board for specific performance of an agreement to sell the property to the charity for £6,500 :—Held : (1) on the facts the members of the deputation did not warrant their authority to bind the board, & that their acceptance of the deft.'s offer was subject to ratification by the board; (2) where an offer is accepted by an agent subject to ratification by the principal there is no contract or contractual relation until ratification, & at any time before ratification the offer may be withdrawn.—WATSON v. DAVIES, [1931] 1 Ch. 455; 100 L. 282a. Agreement subject to "model form of conveyance specially prepared"—Absence of model form.]—Where one or more of the material terms of an alleged contract cannot be determined, either by interpretation or as being of a kind which the law will supply, there is no contract, even though there has been an act of part performance, & the ct. can grant neither specific performance nor damages.

Pltf. signed an agreement, in the form of a letter prepared on behalf of deft., to purchase certain premises subject to the conditions indorsed thereon, & to take the conveyance "in the model form of conveyance specially prepared" for use in relation to the same. The conditions stated (inter alia) that the property sold was subject to restrictions appearing in the model form, & that if the purchaser should not after notice withdraw any objection which the vendor could not or would not remove, the vendor might by notice in writing annul the agreement. The premises were part of property conveyed to deft. by three conveyances, among others, dated respectively 1908, 1910 & 1911. They were comprised in the 1908 conveyance, & were part of what was known in deft.'s agent's office as block 4, other parts of the property being there known as blocks with other numbers. Most of the property had come to deft. subject to restrictions against user for trade purposes. At the date of the agreement the restrictions were obsolete in regard to blocks 4, 7 & 9; but in all dealings with property comprised in those blocks deft. had imposed like restrictions. No model form had been prepared for use in dealings with block 4, & through a mistake of deft.'s agent, pltf. received one appropriate to block 8. Pltf. took possession before completion, & soon raised the question of turning the premises into a shop. After long negotiations, during which the question of restrictions was thoroughly discussed, deft. refused permission, maintaining that, despite his agent's mistake in sending the wrong model form, the restrictions against trade ought to stand; & a new draft conveyance, incorporating such restrictions, was prepared on his behalf. Pltf. refused to execute it, & sought by this action to enforce the original agreement subject only to restrictions in one of the schedules to the conveyance of 1908, & thus free from restrictions on trading:—Held: there was no enforceable contract, as by reason of the non-existence of the appropriate model form of conveyance there were missing from the original agreement material terms which the ct. could not supply, & also that damages could therefore not be assessed.—STIMSON v. GRAY, [1929] 1 Ch. 629; 98 L. 287 viii. —— ——.]—Action for specific performance of an oral agreement to sell land dismissed, no act of part performance being established.—WARD v. O'LEARY (1935), 10 M. P. R. 63.—CAN.

Council & under a London County Council Order of Dec. 12, 1905. The deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made in pursuance of a large building scheme by Co. A. provided for the stopping up (inter alia) of Little Orford Street & for making certain new streets, including a new transverse street bisecting Lot. 2. The Borough Council were to obtain the necessary Closing Orders, & Co. A. were to lay out the new streets at their own expense. By their order of Dec. 12, 1905, the London County Council on the application of Co. A. sanctioned the new streets subject to certain conditions including a condition that Co. A. should covenant to lay them out, & on Dec. 21, 1905, Co. A. covenanted accordingly. On July 10, 1906, on the Borough Council's application the justices made a Closing Order for Little Orford Street. For financial & other reasons this part of Co. A.'s scheme had not yet been proceeded with. Little Orford Street was still open; it was in fact repaired by the Borough Council; & at the date of the contract neither the vendors nor the purchaser knew of the Closing Order's existence. On discovering Entry 7 the purchaser required the vendors to delete it from the Register & to obtain a release of the obligations, &, on their refusal, he issued a vendor & purchaser summons for a declaration that a good title was not shown. On subsequently discovering the Closing Order he discontinued the summons & brought this action claiming a declaration that he was entitled to repudiate the contract, damages for breach, & return of the deposit. The vendors denied any breach & counterclaimed for specific performance:—Held: (1) the twenty-four years' old Closing Order did not affect the title, but, if & so far as it was inconsistent with the particulars, merely raised a case of innocent misrepresentation, on which the purchaser could neither repudiate the contract nor recover damages, his only remedy being to resist specific performance. Therefore, the purchaser's action failed; (2) on the vendors' counterclaim for specific performance that there was in fact no misrepresentation in the particulars, as the word "street" even in London did not necessarily mean a public highway. There was therefore no ground for refusing specific performance.—BARNES v. CADOGAN DEVELOPMENTS, LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 479; 99 L. J. Ch. 274; 142 L. T. 626.

q i. —— Land of deceased intestate—Administratrix without power of sale.]—B. died in 1920, leaving a widow & four children; letters of administration were granted to the widow. Pltf. made an offer for land which B. had owned. At this time the two younger children were infants. In 1927 the widow signed a document by which she agreed to sell certain marsh land "owned by & belonging to the estate of my late husband":—Held: in 1927 no marsh land belonged to the estate of B. for what had been his under Devolution of Estates Act vested in defts., & as administratrix the widow had no power of sale.—BROWN v. BARBER, [1929] 2 D. sf. Agreement for possession & devise or conveyance in return for services.]—Under an oral agreement between pltf. & defts. the latter were to have exclusive possession of a parcel of pltf.'s land in return for personal services to be rendered by them to her during her lifetime or until she sold or disposed of her adjoining property, & she also agreed to leave them said parcel by her will or, in the event of the sale of the adjoining property & the removal of her residence therefrom, to convey it to them. Defts. took up their residence on the land & built a house & other improvements thereon referable only to said agreement. Pltf. brought an action to recover possession, & defts. counterclaimed for specific performance. The ct. dismissed the action & declared that defts. were entitled to specific performance on the death of pltf. or upon her removing from the neighbourhood:—Held: on appeal, the dismissal of the action ought to be sustained, but the decree of specific performance was premature.—LYELL v. CORMACK, [1928] 4 D. L. R. 902; [1928] 3 W. W. R. 284.—CAN.

sg. Contract to take supply of gas.]—Under a contract between deft. city & a co. to whose rights thereunder pltf. co. was held to have succeeded, the city agreed to permit the co. to connect gas wells, which the co. agreed to drill by a certain date, with the city's main & then to withdraw from the main for its own use a certain percentage of the gas thus added to the city's supply. The co. not having proceeded to drill, the city notified it that the city would not perform its part of the contract after a date specified, which was prior to that to the contract was found on the trial to have been extended by agreement of the parties. The co. then sued for a declaration that the contract was a good & subsisting contract extending to said later date, which should be specifically performed by deft., & for an extension of time in which to complete the well or wells, & for damages. Said later date had passed at the time of the trial:—Held: although the contract had been broken by the city, it was one with respect to which it was impossible to decree specific performance; moreover, it was beyond the power of the ct. to extend the time, &, since the question whether the co. had really sustained any damage depended upon a question which could not be answered, viz., whether by said date the co. could or would have sunk the well or wells & have found sufficient gas to justify it in carrying it to the city's main, pltf. could recover nominal damages only.—MEDALTA POTTERIES, LTD. v. MEDICINE HAT CITY, [1931] 1 W.
